"Beginning Indonesian" is a five-volume series designed to provide language instruction for a three-semester intensive college course or a six-semester non-intensive course. The format throughout the series consists of lesson units containing sections of basic sentences presented in dialog form, reading selections, and grammar, each followed by exercises and pattern practices. The basic sentences present "various coloquial informal ways of speaking--the earlier lessons illustrate the type of language commonly used in Java, and later lessons reflect Sumatran usages." While representing a variety of spoken and written styles, "intimate slang" and "bookish language" have been avoided. The reading selections range from prewar to current times in a variety of styles and on a variety of subject matters. Upon completion of this course the student should be able to read with the aid of a dictionary many modern types of Malay or Indonesian prose, and should also be able to understand most of the Malay or Indonesian spoken by educated native speakers. Tapes of all basic sentences, exercises and pattern practices have been prepared. These materials are in the process of being revised for publication. (AMM)

Preface

Beginning Indonesian is a ~~four~~ five-volume mimeographed set of lessons prepared under contract between Cornell University and the Office of Education, Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. It presents the outlines of the grammatical structure and illustrates this structure with conversations, readings, pattern practices, and exercises. The materials presented can be covered in 350 to 400 classroom hours; in other words, there is enough material here to occupy three semesters of intensive college work (six to nine contact hours a week) or six semesters of an ordinary slow course (four hours a week).

These lessons present a variety of spoken and written styles. The basic sentences present various colloquial informal ways of speaking: the earlier lessons illustrate the type of language commonly used in Java, and later lessons reflect Sumatran usages (which are close to the Malay usage). Intimate slang has been avoided. On the other hand, care has been taken not to teach the kind of bookish language which sets a wall between the native and the American. The readings range from prewar to current times in a variety of styles and on a variety of subject matters. Some selections have been taken from published sources, and a few have been composed for these lessons.

Upon completion of these lessons, the student will be able to read with the aid of a dictionary any modern type of Malay or Indonesian prose: the majority of difficult points in grammar and usage are covered here. Further, he will be able to understand most things in Malay or Indonesian spoken by educated people in a standard type of language. (These lessons do not, of course, equip one to speak or understand the local dialects--Menadonese, Trengganu, Ambonese, Djakartan, and the like, which differ strongly in vocabulary, pronunciation, and, to some extent, in grammar from the standard types of Malay and Indonesian.)

The lessons are complete in themselves. A complete glossary with a cross reference to the first occurrence of each item and meaning glossed is appended. However, since several different mimeographed types of lessons are currently in use, these lessons have been so designed that they may be used for intermediate instruction by students who have begun studying with other sets of materials. Lessons 1-11 cover the most common locutions and important grammatical points, and the vocabulary and grammar presented therein correspond closely to the sets of mimeographed lessons which have been prepared for the Office of Education. Accordingly students who have begun studying with these may begin these lessons at Lesson 12, which is a review lesson and goes over the grammar and vocabulary which they had already covered, and then move on with Lessons 13 ff., which cover entirely new material. The exercises and pattern practices are designed to be used in a language laboratory, and tapes of all basic sentences, exercises and pattern practices have been prepared.

These lessons could not have been written without the help of many people, Indonesians and Americans. To list each and every contributor to these volumes would require a termendous list. However, I owe thanks to the following people, who spent more than one year working full time on them. Mrs. Omar Kayam of Medan and Djakarta, Mrs. Un Imaduddin of Manindjau and Bandung, Toenggoel Siagian of Djakarta, and Karal H. Warouw of Menado. I also have a debt of thanks to my wife, Mrs. Ida Operario Wolff, for devoting a year to editing and proofreading these materials.

These materials are now in the process of being revised for publication. Any comments and suggestions for improvements will be highly appreciated.

Commentary to Basic Sentences

1a.	selamat	This word is not pronounced as it is spelled: the e is silent.
	soré	Note the acute accent over the é: see the discussion of pronunciation, 1.11.
1b.	baik	The k at the end of this word is pronounced q (glottal stop) as is the case of all k's coming at the end of a syllable. See 1.12.
1b.		English 'is, are, was, were' is usually not translated into Indonesian. In these lessons 'is (are)' is automatically supplied though there is no Indonesian word to which it corresponds.
2a.		Sentences 1a and 1b were said by Tati. This sentence and 2b, 2c, and 2d are said by Mus. In the basic sentences a new number is given whenever the speaker changes.

4. saudara

Tati offers tea to the visitors. In English we use titles (Mr., Mrs., Dr., etc.) only on some occasions and mostly only with the last name. In Indonesian, however, one usually employs a title when addressing a person either by the first name or surname. The title may or may not be followed by the name. Here Tati uses the title saudara /sowdara/ with the name John. She uses the title saudara because she has just met John and she does not know him well. (See 1.2 for a discussion of commonly used titles.)

9. Saudara Djon

In Indonesian one does not use the word 'you' (kau or kamu) unless one is very intimate with the person addressed. Usually one uses the title or the title and the name or the name alone. Thus, Tati here says Saudara Djon 'Mr. John' instead of 'you.' (See 1.2.)

11. ja

Ja is used here to make the question less sharp. The effect is something like 'by the way'--'by the way, where is that?'

15.

See the note to 1b.

16. Apa

Apa at the beginning of sentence or a phrase when unstressed is the sign of a question. It may be omitted without changing the meaning. Apa ada rèstoran dekat sana? Ada rèstoran dekat sana? 'Is there a restaurant near there?' (Apa is discussed in detail in Lesson 2.)

17. didekat

Dekat means either 'near' or 'vicinity.' Thus, dekat 'near' may always be substituted for didekat 'near (lit. in the vicinity of).'

19b. Permisi dulu

This is said by someone taking leave. Note in Indonesian one asks permission to go instead of saying 'good-bye.'

19c. kami — Kami is used for 'we' or 'us' when the person spoken to is not included. Kita is used for 'we' or 'us' when the person spoken to is included. (See 1.3.)

III. Testing your comprehension:

1. Listen to the tape or to your informants read the following conversation twice. (Do not look at it beforehand.)
2. Listen to the questions and answer betul (true) or salah (false).
3. Now read the story and the questions and check to see if you have answered the questions correctly.

Pertjakapan (Conversation)*

A. Maaf saudara, bolèh saja bertanja?

B. Tentu sadja bolèh.

A. Saudara datang dari Amérika?

B. Ja.

A. Tinggal dimana sekarang?

B. Di Hotèl Garuda, dekat setasiun dan rèstoran itu.

A. Kalau mau minum tèh, silahkan pergi kerumah saja.

B. Maaf, saja permisi dulu, saja mau lekaslekas pulang.

A. Baiklah, sampai bertemu bèsok sadja.

B. Baiklah, terima kasih. Saja pergi dulu ja.

* New words: tidak 'no, not'
dan 'and'

Djawablah, 'betul' atau 'salah':

1. Saudara B tidak mau pulang lekaslekas.
2. Hotèl Garuda tidak dekat setasiun dan rèstoran.
3. Saudara B tidak datang dari Amérika.
4. Saudara A bolèh bertanja.
5. Saudara B tinggal di Hotèl Garuda.
6. Saudara B tidak mau bertemu bèsok.
7. Saudara B mau pergi kerumah saudara A.
8. Saudara B mau minum tèh.
9. Saudara B tidak permisi dulu.
10. Saudara A dan B mau bertemu bèsok.
11. Saudara A mau pulang dulu.
12. Saudara B harus pulang lekaslekas ke Hotèl Garuda.

IV. Free conversations. Engage your teacher or another student in the following conversations:

A. John and Tati discuss going to a restaurant. Tati greets John and asks him how he is. John answers her and thanks her, to which Tati replies appropriately. Then John says he has to go somewhere. Tati is surprised and asks why the rush. John explains he is going to a restaurant. Tati says she would like to go there too and inquires as to its location. John gives the information. Then Tati inquires if there is a station near John's hotel, to which John replies, Tati says she understands. Then John invites Tati to go the restaurant with him, and Tati accepts the invitation.

B. Tati visits John in his home, and they discuss the hotel where Tati is staying. John greets Tati and invites her in. He invites her to sit down, for which Tati thanks John. John asks Tati if she is staying in the Garuda. Tati says of course she is. She explains that it is near the restaurant. John indicates he understands. Then Tati says she has to go, to which John gives the appropriate reply (why the rush?). Tati explains that she has to go to a restaurant. John says for her to come to his house tomorrow. Tati agrees. They bid each other good-bye.

Tata Bahasa (Grammar)

1.1 Pronunciation

Each language has its own system of sounds which is unlike the system of any other language. When one begins a new language, he must learn to make new sounds. Correct pronunciation does not come by itself: It comes first of all from a realization of how the sounds of the language are made and how they differ from the sounds of other languages the student may know; and second, it comes from a frequent hearing of the language and a constant attempt at exact reproduction of what one has heard.

This section gives you a notion of how Indonesian sounds are made and how they differ from English.

The pronunciation exercises will show you how to make these sounds and to develop a feeling for how they sound when pronounced correctly.

1.11 Vowels and dipthongs

Indonesian has eight vowels:

i u

é e ó

è o

and four dipthongs:

ej ow

aj aw

The following list gives the nearest English equivalent of these vowel sounds. Have your informant read the Indonesian examples so that you can hear their exact pronunciation. (Exercises 2D1, 2, and 4 deal with the vowels.)

i like English ea in neat: minum 'drink.'

é like English i in bid: Indónésia.

è like English e in let: tèh 'tea.'

a like English a in father: apa 'what?'

o like English augh in caught: soré 'evening.'

ó like English oo in book: ajó 'let's.'

u like English ou in soup: duduk 'sit.'

e like English u in but: tentu 'certainly.'

ej like English ay in day: sampai /sampej/ 'until.'

ai like English i in ice: baik /baiq/ 'good.'

ow like English ow in know: saudara /sowdara/ 'Mr.'

au like English ou in out: mau 'want.'

1.12 Consonants

Indonesian has nineteen consonants:

	labial*	dental	palatal	velar	glottal
voiceless stop	p	t	tj	k	q voiced	b	d	dj	g nq
nasal	m	n	nj
		r
		l
spirant		s	sj		h
semivowel	w		j

---

* The term labial means the sound is made with both lips; dental, the tongue tip is against the upper teeth; palatal, the blade of the tongue (the part of the tongue immediately in back of the tip) is against the hard palate (the portion of the roof of the mouth just in back of the alveolar ridge); velar, the back of the tongue is against the back part of the roof of the mouth; glottal, the glottis is involved in making the sound; stop, a closure is made so that air cannot escape; voiceless, the vocal chords are not vibrating; voiced, the vocal chords are vibrating; nasal, the velum is open allowing air to go through the nasal passage (producing m, n ng and like sounds); spirant an opening is left for air to escape; semivowel, an i or u, so short as to make the sound a spirant.

 These sounds are written with two letters but their production is like that of a single consonant and they are disbributed in words like single consonants.

There is also an f pronounced like English f) as in maaf (excuse me). However, most speakers substitute p for f -- i.e. pronounce this word as maap. There is another sound represented by ch which is discussed in Lesson 23.

The following list gives a notion of the nature of the consonant sounds. (Exercises 1Aff and 1Bff will help you learn how to make some of the difficult sounds.)

p Like English p as in spin. Note that there is no puff of air after Indonesian p as there is in English p as in pet: permisi 'ask permission to leave.'

t Like English t as in stay. Note that there is no puff of air after Indonesian t as there is in English t of tea. Also, in Indonesian t the tongue tip is against the upper teeth: tunggu 'wait.'

k Like English k as in skate. Note that there is no puff of air after k as there is in English c in come: kami 'we.' K written at the end of a word is pronounced q (glottal stop).

q This is a sound made by closing the glottis. It is similar to the sound indicated by a dash in English Oh-oh (said, for example, when one has dropped something). (Oh-ch would be represented oqo.) duduq 'sit'

b, d, g — Like English b and d as in bed, and g as in good. Note that for Indonesian d the tongue tip is against the upper teeth: dari 'from'; baik /baiq/ 'good'; Garuda 'mythological bird.'

m, n, ng — Like English m as in mother; n and ng as in nothing: minum 'drink'; mengapa 'why,' Note that ng is not pronounced like ng in English finger. (The sound of ng in finger is represented by ngg: tunggu 'wait.')

h, s — Like English h and s as in house (never s as in boys): harus 'have to.' Note that h occurs at the end of words: bolèh 'may.'

w, j — Like English w as in well and y as in you. wah [exclamation] ja 'yes' For w, j after vowels see the portion on diphthongs above.

tj — Similar to the English combination in next year or get your. (It is not pronounced like English ch in chance.) tjilaka 'bad luck.'

dj — Similar to the English combination dy in Goodyear. (It is not pronounced like English j in jack.) djalan 'walk.'

nj	Similar to the n before u in English inure or the combination n y in English 'in your desk': bertanja 'ask.'
sj	Similar to the English combination s y in 'lease your house': setasiun 'station.'
t	A tongue tap similar to t in English water.
l	Similar to English l in lazy. (Note that it is not like English l in milk.)

1.13 Stress

Indonesian words of more than one syllable contain a syllable which is louder than all the other syllables in the word. Louder syllables are said to have STRESS. Which syllable has stress is predictable: if the vowel of the second to last syllable of the word is e, the stress is on the final syllable of the word. Otherwise, the stress is on the second to last syllable. In the following examples the syllable with stress is written with capital letters (in other places in these lessons stress is not marked since its position is predictable once you know the word boundaries): perGI 'go,' mengerTI 'understand,' SAja 'I,' seLAmat 'blessed, prosperous,' sauDAra 'you,' tenTU 'certain,' etc. Word boundaries are indicated in these lessons by spaces with the following exceptions: lah, kah, and pun (particles whose meanings we study later) are written together with the word which precedes them. Thus the stress on words followed by lah, kah, or pun is on the same place as when there is no lah, kah, or pun following them: beGItulah, 'that's the way it is,' bagaiMAnakah 'how?' sauDArapun 'you too.'

1.2 Terms of address and titles

In Indonesian it is not usual to use the word for 'you' (kau or kamu' unless the person addressed is a child or is intimate with the speaker. Instead of the word 'you' they either say nothing, where we in English would say 'you' or they use the name or the title or the title plus a name. (It is a sign of intimacy to use the name--either the first or the last name--without a title. For the people whom one does not know well it is better to use either a title alone or the title plus the name--either the first or the last name.) For example in 7b, Miss Sumardi addresses John by his title saudara followed by his name. Similarly in Sentence 9 where the English had 'you' Miss Sumardi again uses the name preceded by the title Saudara John. The titles vary in accordance with the relative ages of the speaker and the person addressed, the sex of the person addressed, and the degree of intimacy or friendliness between the person addressed and the speaker. The following chart summarizes this: (It is for reference purposes. You will be introduced to these forms gradually in the lessons which follow.)

Distant and Formal

Speaker	To male	To female (married)	To famale (unmarried)
Younger than person addressed	tuan	njonja	nona
Same age as person addressed	tuan or saudara	njonja or saudara or saudari	nona or saudara or saudari
Older than person addressed	"	"	"

Respectful but Friendly

Speaker	To male	To female
Younger than person addressed	bapak /bapaq/ (short pak /paq/)	ibu (short bu /buq/)
Same age as person addressed	bapak /bapaq/ or saudara	ibu or saudari or saudara
Older than person addressed	saudara or anak /anaq/ (short nak /naq/) or adik /adiq/ (short dik /diq/)	saudara or anak /anaq/ (short nak /naq/) or adik /adiq/ (short dik /diq/)

Intimate

Speaker	To male	To female	To male worker	To female worker
Younger than the person addressed	bapak /bapaq/ (pak /pak/)	ibu	bapak (etc.)	bibi (short bi /biq/)
Same age as the person addressed	bung	no special term (usually the name is used)	bung	bibi (etc.)
Older than the person addressed	bung or anak	" or anak	bung	bibi (etc.)

to a child: Namanja siapa nak (dik)? or Nama anak (or adik) siapa? or Nama kamu siapa?

to a person approximately his age in a place of business: Nama saudara siapa? or (to a lady) Nama nona siapa? or (to a man) Nama tuan siapa?

to a person approximately his age in a social situation: Nama saudara siapa?

to an older gentleman in a place of business: Nama tuan siapa?

to an older lady in a place or business: Nama njonja siapa? (Njonja implies the lady is married.)

to an older man in a social situation: Nama bapak siapa?

to an older lady in a social situation: Nama ibu siapa?

to a waiter not older than speaker: Nama bung siapa?

to a waiter older than speaker is: Nama bapak siapa?

1.3 Kami, kita

There are two words for 'we, us, our': kita and kami. Kita is used when the person addressed ('you') is included; kami is used when the person addressed is not included ('we not you'). For example in the following sentence kita is used because the person addressed is included in the exhortation:

Ajó kita pulang. 'Let's go home.'

In the following sentence kami is used because the person spoken to is not going with the speaker:

Kami mau pergi. (1.19c) 'We would like to go.'

1.4 Greetings

Selamat pagi 'Good morning' is used until around lunch-time (11:30 or 12:00). Selamat siang 'good day' is used as a greeting from lunchtime till late afternoon (3:30 or 4:00). Selamat soré 'good evening' is used during late afternoon until it begins to get dark. Selamat malam 'good night' is used as a greeting after dark. Selamat malam is also used as a way of saying good-bye at night.

V. Latihan (Exercises)

1A. Learning how to hear sounds. For the first pair the teacher reads a, then b while the student listens. Then for the same pair the teacher reads b then a while the student listens. Then the teacher reads the same pair in random order and the student identifies which was read first. The teacher repeats this process of reading in random order and having the student identify the order several times until the student knows which order was read. Then the teacher reads either a or b of the same pair, and the student identifies which one was read. After this the teacher procedes to the second pair and repeats the same steps as for the first pair.

Commentary

2a2a	tidak /tidaɥ/	Notice that this word is pronounced with a final glottal stop. Words that are written with a k at the end are pronounced with a glottal stop.
2a4a	bukan	The negative of a noun is bukan (3.1 [in the grammar section of Lesson 3]).
2a4c	Mahmud /mahmut/	Words written with d at the end are pronounced with final /t/.
2a4e	siapa	Siapa is translated as 'what?' in Siapa nama? 'What is _____'s name?' (3.5)
2a8a	orang	The use of this word is explained in 3.6.
2a8b	apa	Apa is a QUESTION INTRODUCER (3.5). The question introducer has no translation in English. It functions like a spoken question mark.
2b11b	djuga /djugaq/	Note that this word is pronounced with a final glottal stop although it is spelled with a final vowel.
2b12	sedang	The verb itself does not express tense or aspect. (The same verb form is used for past, present or future.) Tense and aspect may be expressed by additional words which modify the verb, e.g. sedang 'be in the process of,' mau 'will, want to,' etc.
2b16b	tjoba /tjobaq/	Note that tjoba is pronounced with a final glottal stop although it is written with a final vowel.

Tata Bahasa (Grammar)

2.1 Subject and predicate

The most common type of Indonesian sentence consists of two parts, one part called the SUBJECT and the other called the PREDICATE. For example the following sentence consists of two parts: saja 'I,' the subject, and adik Mustafa 'M.'s younger brother,' the predicate. (In the grammar section of this lesson the subjects are underlined once and the predicates twice.)

a. Saja adik Mustafa. 'I am Mustafa's younger brother.'

The following sentence consists of two parts: saja 'I,' the subject and tidak punja pulpèn 'don't have a fountainpen,' the predicate:

b. Saja tidak punja pulpèn. 'I don't have a fountainpen.'

Notice that there is often a pause between the subject and the predicate. The following sentence consists of two parts: nama saja 'my name,' the subject, and Djon 'John,' the predicate. There is a pause after nama saja:

c. Nama saja Djon. 'My name is John.'

2.2 Meaning of the subject and meaning of the predicate

The predicate is the part of the sentence which tells something about someone or something: it tells what somebody or something is (was, were, etc.) or what somebody or something did (does, do, etc.) or what happened (happens, etc.) to somebody or something. For example, in the following sentence adik Mustafa 'M.'s younger brother' is the predicate. It tells what saja 'I,' the subject, is.

a. Saja adik Mustafa. 'I am Mustafa's younger brother.'

In the following sentence Djon 'John' is the predicate. It tells what nama saja 'my name,' the subject, is.

b. Nama saja Djon. 'My name is John.'

The subject is the somebody or something about which the predicate is said. In the following sentence tidak punja pulpèn 'don't have a fountainpen,' the predicate, tells what happened to saja 'I.' Saja is the subject. Saja is the person about whom tidak punja pulpèn is said:

c. Saja tidak punja pulpèn. 'I don't have a fountainpen.'

2.21 More on the meaning of the predicate

Given a statement, we can imagine the question to which it is an answer. For example the statement, 'I am Mustafa's younger brother,' might be an answer to the question, 'Who are you?' Similarly in Indonesian, the statement Saja adik Mustafa, 'I am Mustafa's younger brother,' is an answer to the question, Siapa saudara? 'Who are you?'

If we were to give a short answer to this question, Siapa saudara? 'Who are you?' the answer would be, Adik Mustafa, 'M.'s younger brother.' The part of the sentence that is a short answer to a question is the predicate.

Another example: the sentence, Nama saja Djon 'My name is John,' answers the question Siapa nama saudara? 'What is your name?' The shortest answer to that question is Djon, 'John.' The predicate of the sentence, Nama saja Djon is Djon.

In Indonesian a complete sentence may consist of a predicate alone. Thus adik Mustafa, and Djon, immediately above are complete sentences in Indonesian.

This rule for identifying the predicate does not work in the following cases: the words ja 'yes' and tidak, bukan and belum 'no, not' are not considered predicates.

Do Exercise 2A for this section.

2.3 Stress in sentences

Every sentence has a word which contains a syllable with SENTENCE STRESS. A syllable with SENTENCE STRESS is a syllable which is pronounced louder than any other syllable in the sentence. We mark sentence stress in the sentences given in the grammatical section of this lesson by writing words with sentence stress with capital letters. (In the basic sentences through Lesson 11 words with sentence stress are underlined.) The word which receives sentence stress is part of the predicate--in other words, a phrase is marked as being a predicate if one of the words in it has sentence stress. For example in the following sentence kenal 'know' receives sentence stress. The phrase which contains kenal is the predicate:

a. Saja tidak KENAL abang Mustafa. (2b10) 'I don't know Mustafa's elder brother.'

Most commonly the word which receives sentence stress is the last word of the predicate, as in the following sentence:

b. Saja sedang beladjar bahasa INDONÉSIA. 'I am studying Indonesian.'

The rules for determining which word in the predicate is given the sentence stress are too involved to be studied profitably until one has advanced further. However, it is easy to get a feel for which word receives sentence stress. For the present time imitate your teacher and follow the marks of the basic sentences. You will find that you won't make many errors in placement of the sentence stress even in sentences which you are making up on your own.

Often it is only the placement of the sentence stress which marks a phrase as a predicate. The following two sentences are homonymous except for the placement of the sentence stress. Their meanings, however, are quite different and the predicate of one sentence is the subject of the other:

c. Abang ALI guru saja. 'Ali's elder brother is my teacher (not Mustafa's elder brother or Ali's younger brother or anyone else).' [This sentence answers the question, SIAPA guru saudara? 'Who is your teacher?'

d. Abang Ali guru SAJA. 'Ali's elder brother is my teacher (that is what he is).' [This sentence answers the question, Abang Ali siapa? 'Who is Ali's elder brother?']

Do Exercise 2B for this section.

2.31 Stress in sentences containing interrogatives

In sentences containing interrogatives (words asking questions) the interrogative or a word together in a phrase with the interrogative is stressed. An INTERROGATIVE is one of the following: siapa 'who?', apa 'what?, what kind of?', mana 'which (of several)?, where?', bagaimana 'how?', berapa 'how many?, how much?', kenapa 'why?, what happened to?', mengapa 'why?, what is (are) [subject] doing ?', and some others. In the following sentences the capitalized words are interrogatives. They have the stress.

a. MANA djalan kepasar pak? 'Which way to the market, Sir?' (Lit. Where is the way to the market?)

b. Itu, APA itu disana? 'What is that over there?'

c. Bu, BERAPA kué mangkoknja itu? 'Ma'am, how much is that cupcake?'

In the following sentence berapa 'how many' is an interrogative and orang 'persons' is a word in a phrase with it. Orang is stressed.*

* Again the rule for the placement of stress is too involved to be given profitably here. At this point, just imitate your informant and you won't make many mistakes in the placement of sentence stress.

d. Berapa ORANG anak saudara? 'How many children do you have? (Lit. How many people are your children?)'

2.4 Word order

The word order of a sentence can be either subject followed by the predicate or predicate followed by the subject. It does not matter which order occurs. The meaning in either case is the same (except perhaps a difference of style). (However, in some cases one word order is more common than another.) Note that the stress is always on the predicate.

a. Saja belum KAWIN. = Belum KAWIN saja. 'I am not married yet.'

b. Dia tidak BISA. = Tidak BISA dia. 'He cannot (do it).'

c. Saudara orang APA? = Orang APA saudara? 'What are you?'

d. Apa SAUDARA jang beladjar bahasa Indónésia? = Apa jang beladjar bahasa Indonesia SAUDARA? 'Are you the one studying Indonesian?'

Do Exercise 2C.

2.5 Pronouns

The personal pronouns are:

saja 'I'	kami 'we (not you)'
kamu, ~~ongkau~~ 'you'	kita 'we (including you)'
dia 'he, she'	merèka 'they '

The demonstratives are ini 'this, these' and itu 'that, those.' They follow the word or phrase they modify:

Hotèl Garuda itu, dekat setasiun (1.15) 'The (lit. that) Garuda Hotel is near the station.'

Note that ini and itu can modify names or personal pronouns.

Saudara Djon ini dari Amérika.(1.3c) 'John (lit. this Mr. John) is from America.'

Saja ini dari Amérika. 'I (lit. this I) am from America.'

The meaning of ini and itu after personal pronouns and names will be discussed later.

Commentary

3a1	datangnja	Note that the root of this is datang 'come.' The suffix -nja forms a noun out of the verb datang: datangnja.
3a7		When asking the name of a person siapa is used: Siapa namanja 'What is your name?' (See 3.5)

3a11	sudah	When asking about someone's married status the word sudah is always used -- that is 'are you already married?' Similarly, when answering a question about one's marital status, one says either sudah 'already' or belum 'not yet.'
3b17	siapa	See the comment to 3a7.
3b18b	sudah	See the comment to 3a11.
3b22b	jang itu	Jang itu means 'the other one (lit. that other one).'
3c26b	tadi	A noun or pronoun or demonstrative followed by tadi means '[noun or pronoun or demonstrative] mentioned a minute ago.'
3c27a	punja	The word punja precedes or follows a noun or pronoun and means 'be [noun or pronoun]'s (3.4).
3c28	punja	Another meaning punja is 'have (own)' (3.4).
3c29b	ini	Ini basically means 'this', however, it is also used to mean 'here' when one is pointing out something.

3c33a	permisi	There are two words in Indonesian for 'excuse me': one is maaf and the other is permisi. Maaf is used when asking to be excused for something one has done wrong or for something one has failed to do as in sentence 3c29a. Permisi is used when asking permission to go somewhere, as in this sentence.
3c33b	kebelakang	Kebelakang is used as the polite way to say 'go to the bathroom.' Literally, it means 'go to the back.'
3c33b	ke	Ke basically means 'to go'. (See 3.7) For example, here together with belakang it means 'go to the rear (belakang).'
3c35b	kamar ketjil	Kamar ketjil 'small room' is another euphemism for restroom. It is as polite a way to say restroom as is belakang, which we had in 3c33b.
3c36	silahkan	Silahkan is another way of pronouncing silakan 'please.'

IV. Free Conversation

A. John meets Saleh for the first time. Saleh asks John what the name of his hotel is, and John answers that it is the Garuda Hotel. Saleh asks if John likes it there. John replies that he does not. Saleh compliments John upon how well he speaks Indonesian (hint: 'your Indonesian is very good'). John thanks him, saying that his wife is Indonesian. Saleh expresses surprise that John is married. John then asks Saleh if he is married, to which Saleh replies that he is not. Saleh asks John if he is an Englishman. John says no he is not. He says that he comes from America.

B. Continue conversation A. Saleh and John are in Saleh's house. Saleh invites John to eat something which John does not recognize. Saleh explains what it is and also explains what the drink he offers is. John asks to borrow a pencil, but Saleh only has a pen. Then John asks to go to the bathroom. Saleh gives John directions to the bathroom.

Tata Bahasa (Grammar)

3.1 Negatives: bukan, belum, tidak

A negative sentence ('somebody doesn't [or didn't, hasn't done, etc.] do..., somebody isn't [wasn't, aren't, etc.] ...') is formed by putting before the predicate bukan 'no, not,' tidak 'no, not,' or belum 'not yet.' Bukan negates a predicate consisting of a NOMINAL (a noun, a pronoun, or a phrase introduced by jang meaning 'the one who'). In the following sentence orang Belanda 'Dutchman' is the predicate. It is a nominal. Therefore, its negative is bukan:

Saja bukan orang BELANDA. 'I am not a Dutchman.'

In the following sentence saja is the predicate. It is a nominal. Therefore the negative is bukan.

Bukan SAJA jang beladjar bahasa Indonésia. 'I am not the one studying Indonesian. (Lit. The one that is studying Indonesian is not me.)'

In the following sentence jang ketjil itu 'the one which is small' is the predicate. It is a nominal. Therefore, its negative is bukan.

Bukan jang ketjil ITU kamar babu. 'The maid's room is not that small one there.'

Belum 'not yet' negates a sentence with a predicate containing sudah 'already, now.'

'Apa saudara sudah KAWIN?' Belum? 'Are you married yet?' 'No. (Lit. Not yet.)'

Tidak negates other sentences (that is, sentences which do not contain sudah and whose predicates consist of verbs, adjectives, expressions of location, time, et al.). In the following sentence kenal dia 'know him,' the predicate, is a verb. It is therefore negated by tidak.

Saja tidak KENAL dia. 'I don't know him.'

Other examples of negative sentences with verb, locational, and adjective predicates are the following.

Saja tidak berbahasa BELANDA. 'I don't speak Dutch.'

Dia tidak DIRUMAH. 'He is not at home.'

Saja tidak SENANG. 'I am not happy.'

Do Exercise 3A for this section.

3.11 Stress of negative sentences

The main word or the final word in the predicate receives sentence stress. The negatives, tidak, belum, and bukan and other words which modify and precede the predicate, never receive sentence stress. The stress in the following sentence is on kawin 'married' not on belum.*

Saja belum KAWIN. 'I'm not married.'

Do Exercise 3A2.

3.2 Silahkan, tjoba, tolong 'please'

Silahkan, tjoba and tolong are all translated as 'please.' Their meanings are different, however. When OFFERING SOMETHING

* In English, of course, the stress may be on not: I'm not married.

the word for 'please' is silahkan (often pronounced silakan).

Silakan masuk. 'Please come in. (Won't you come in?)'

Silakan ambil. 'Please have some.'

When ASKING A FAVOR the word for 'please' is tolong 'help' or tjoba 'try.' (Tjoba is often pronounced /tjobaq/ with a final glottal stop.) Tolong is slightly more respectful, and tjoba is more informal (but both are all right to use almost in any situation).

Ali, tjoba kesini dulu. 'Ali, please come here for a second.'

Tolong kasi saja potlot. 'Please give me a pencil.'

Do Exercise 3C for this section.

3.3 Bolèh, bisa and dapat 'can, may'

Bolèh 'may' is used in asking or giving permission. Bisa has the meaning 'able to.' Dapat is a synonym for bisa. Bisa is common in Java. It is rare in Sumatra and Malaya. Dapat is common in Sumatra and Malaya.*

Bolèh saja minum ini? 'May I drink this?'

Bisa (or Dapat) saudara datang hotèl bèsok?

'Can you come to the hotel tomorrow?'

Bolèh saja bertanja? Dimana kamar ketjil?

'May I ask? Where is the restroom?'

Do Exercise 3D for this section.

* In Malaya and some parts of Sumatra bolèh is used as a synonym for dapat.

3.4 Punja

Punja has two uses: (1) it is a verb meaning 'have (own).' (In this meaning it is rarely used in Sumatra or Malaya. However, it is commonly used this way in Java.) E.g.

Saja punja rumah. 'I have a house.'

Saja tidak punja pulpèn. 'I do not have a fountainpen.'

(2) Punja is used with nouns, pronouns and siapa 'who.' In this use punja means 'is (are, was, were) [noun]'s, belong (belongs, belonged) to [noun].'

Ini Mahmut punja. 'This is Mahmut's'

The word order is either [noun] punja or punja [noun] with no difference in meaning:

Ini saja punja	= Ini punja saja	'This is mine.'
Ini saudara punja	= Ini punja saudara	'This is yours.'
Ini dia punja	= Ini punja dia or Ini punjanja	'This is his.'
Ini kami punja	= Ini punja kami	'This is ours (not yours)'
Ini kita punja	= Ini punja kita	'This is ours, (including yours)'
Ini mereka punja	= Ini punja mereka	'This is theirs.'
Ini Ali punja	= Ini punja Ali	'This is Ali's.'
Ini orang itu punja	= Ini punja orang itu	'This is that man's.'
Ini siapa punja?	= Ini punja siapa?	'Whose is this?'

3.41 Possession, genitive

'Be [noun or pronoun]'s' is expressed by '[noun or pronoun] punja or punja [noun or pronoun]' (3.2 above):

a. Rumah ini saja punja or Rumah ini punja saja.

'This house is mine.'

'[Noun or pronoun]'s thing' (my house, your car, Mustafa's house, that lady's car, etc.) is expressed by '[thing possessed] [noun or pronoun]':

b. Rumah saja. 'My house.'

c. Rumah Saudara Djon. 'John's house.'

d. Guru Mustafa. 'Mustafa's teacher.'

'His, her, its' is expressed by -nja:

e. Gurunja. 'His teacher.'

A phrase consisting of a thing possessed followed by a noun or pronoun is called a GENITIVE CONSTRUCTION. Examples b, c, d, and e above exemplify the genitive construction.

3.5 Apa and siapa.

Apa has two uses: (1) it is an interrogative word meaning 'what?' or 'what kind of?', as for example in the following sentences:

a. APA itu? 'What is that?'

b. Kué APA itu? 'What kind of cake is that?'

(2) Apa is a QUESTION INTRODUCER. When apa is a question introducer it stands at the beginning of a sentence which is a question but which does not contain an interrogative (defined 2.121 above) or (less frequently) it stands immediately preceding the predicate in such sentences. This question introducer apa has no meaning other than a mark that the sentence is a question. In the following sentences apa is a question introducer.

c. Apa saudara Ali ADA dirumah? 'Is Mr. Ali at home?'

d. Apa saudara orang BELANDA? 'Are you a Dutchman?'

The question introducer apa is optionally used: it may be omitted without changing the meaning of the sentence. Thus sentences c and d above may also be said without apa:

c(1). Saudara Ali ADA dirumah? 'Is Mr. Ali at home?

d(1). Saudara orang BELANDA? 'Are you a Dutchman?'

9.	Ajó, kita pergi sadjalah Djon.	i.	Ja bagus betul, tetapi jang itu lebih* bagus lagi.
10.	Bagaimana kalau seribu lima ratus?	j.	Ah tidak, ini baik sekali barangnja.

*Lebih plus [adjective]: [adjective]-er

Commentary

4a4 There is no word for 'you' in this sentence. In sentences consisting of a predicate alone, the subject is often understood to be 'you.' In this way the difficult problem of which form to use in addressing a person is avoided.

4a11a mari Ajó and mari have the same meaning. (See 5.1.)

4b12c pak This is short for bapak 'father.' An older respected man may be addressed as bapak or pak. (See the chart 1.2)

4b14 mana Dimana 'where at' is sometimes shortened to mana.

4b20a ini John says ini 'this' because they have just entered the market.

4b21b bu This is short for ibu 'mother.' An older respected woman may be addressed as ibu or bu. (See the chart 1.3)

4b22 Empat seratus has two meanings depending on where the sentence sresss is: if the stress is on seratus (as in this sentence) the meaning is 'four for a hundred'; if the stress is on empat the meaning is 'a hundred for four.'

4c28a tikar — A tikar is a mat woven from grass. They are put on the floor to sit on or placed on top of a bed without a mattress to sleep on.

4c33a bagus — Bagus basically means 'nice to look at.' It is also used to mean 'good' in general. In this usage it is close to baik which also means 'good.'

III. Pertjakapan

A. Selamat pagi Djon.

B. Selamat pagi Mus.

A. Senang sekali berdjalan, Mus, ja?

B. Betul. Ajó kita berdjalan. Tapi sekarang djam berapa?

A. Ó baru djam setengah sembilan.

B. Setengah sembilan! Sudah lat betul kalau begitu.

A. Ah tidak. Saja harus kepasar dulu beli tikar. Ajó kita pergi.

B. Ah tidak. Maf sadja dulu. Saja harus lekaslekas pulang kerumah.

Betul atau salah:

1. Sekarang baru djam setengah delapan.
2. Sekarang belum lagi lat.
3. Djon mau pergi kepasar beli kué.
4. Mustafa harus lekaslekas pulang kerumah.

5. Djon permisi kebelakang dulu.

6. Djon mau beli tikar disetasiun.

A. Siapa dirumah Mus?

B. Ó, isteri saja, Djon. Dia baru datang dari setasiun.

A. Dari setasiun?

B. Ja. Dia datang dari Amérika.

A. Sudah bisa berbahasa Indónésia dia?

B. Ah belum, Djon. Itu disebelah sana itu, apa itu Djon?

A. Ó itu kué mangkok. Ajó kita beli dulu.

B. Baiklah kalau tidak terlalu mahal.

A. Ah tidak. Ajó kita pergi.

B. Kalau sudah makan kuénja, saja pulang lekaslekas ja?

A. Ja. Silakanlah.

Betul apa salah:

7. Isteri Mustafa masih ada di Amérika.

8. Dia sudah baikbaik bisa berbahasa Indónésia.

9. Kué mangkok itu terlalu mahal.

10. Merèka tidak beli kué mangkok itu, kuénja mahal sekali.

11. Mustafa tidak mau pulang lagi.

12. Merèka lekaslekas kepasar.

IV. Free Conversation

A. You and your classmate have agreed to meet and go for a walk. You greet him and urge him to hurry up and get ready because it's late already. He thinks it's only 8:15, but you inform him that it's already 8:30. He asks you to wait just a little longer. You reply to this, 'Still not ready?' He asks where to go today. You suggest the market and he agrees. By this time it's nine o'clock. Finally he's ready and you're off to the market. You ask which way it is and he says that from there you go straight to the station. When you get there, you' . turn right. The market will be right there. You ask if it's far and he assures you that it isn't.

B. Pretend you're at the market. You approach another classmate who plays the role of a market vendor. You ask about certain goods he has for sale (e.g. name, price). There is some confusion about just which things you mean, but finally that is straightened out and you get down to bargaining. You can't agree on a price so finally you give up and walk away empty-handed.

Tata Bahasa (Grammar)

4.1 Numbers and time

4.11 Numbers 1 - 1,000

The numbers 1 - 1,000 are as follows:

1	satu	12	duabelas	21	duapuluh satu
2	dua	13	tigabelas	22	duapuluh dua (etc.)
3	tiga	14	empatbelas (or ampatbelas)	30	tigapuluh
4	empat (or ampat)			40	empatpuluh
5	lima	15	limabelas	50	limapuluh (etc.)
6	enam (or anam)	16	enambelas (or anambelas)	100	seratus
7	tudjuh	17	tudjuhbelas (or tudjubelas)	200	duaratus (etc.)
8	delapan			1000	seribu
9	sembilan	18	delapanbelas	2000	duaribu (etc.)
10	sepuluh	19	sembilanbelas
11	sebelas	20	duapuluh

The number 'one' before a COUNTER (a word expressing measurement) has the shape se. E.g.

sedjam	'an hour, one hour'
sehari	'a day, one day'
seminggu	'a week'
sebulan	'a month'
setahun	'a year'
setengah	'a half'
seperampat	'a fourth'
seratus	'a hundred'

seribu 'a thousand'

sebungkus 'a pack'

Do exercise 4A.

4.12 Telling time of day

Djam berapa? or pukul berapa? means 'What time is it?' Djam or pukul followed by a number means '[number] o'clock.'

a. Djam satu. 'One o'clock.'

b. Djam duabelas. 'Twelve o'clock.'

The half hour is expressed by djam [number] lèwat tiga puluh 'half past [number]' or most commonly by djam (or pukul) setengah followed by the number of the hour which is one higher than the number of the hour in the English 'half past [number] (lit. half of number plus one).'

c. Djam setengah tudjuh. 'Half past six (lit. half of seven o'clock).'

d. Pukul setengah satu. 'Twelve thirty (lit. half of one o'clock).'

The quarter hour after the hour is expressed by djam (pukul) [number] lèwat seperempat or djam (pukul) [number] seperempat, 'a quarter past [number] o'clock.'

e. Djam delapan lèwat seperempat. 'A quarter after eight.'

e(1). Djam delapan seperempat. 'A quarter after eight.'

The quarter hour before the hour is expressed by djam (pukul) [number] kurang seperempat, '[number] o'clock less a quarter.'

f. Pukul sepuluh kurang seperempat. 'A quarter to ten.'

A.M. or P.M. is expressed by one of the following words following the number: pagi 'morning,' siang 'noon,' petang 'early afternoon,'* soré 'late afternoon, early evening,' malam 'evening, night.' (See 1.4. of the grammar section of Lesson 1].)

g. Djam delapan pagi. 'Eight A.M.'

h. Pukul setengah lima soré. '4:30 P.M.'

Time before the hour (usually between __:31 and __:59) is expressed by djam (pukul) [number] kurang [number] menit, '[number] minutes before [number] o'clock.' The word menit may be left out.

i. Djam lima kurang lima menit. 'Five minutes before five.'

i(1). Djam lima kurang lima. 'Five to five.'

j. Pukul empat kurang duapuluh menit. 'Twenty minutes before four.'

j(1). Pukul empat kurang duapuluh. 'Twenty to four.'

Time past the hour (usually between __:01 and __:30) is expressed by djam (pukul) [number] lèwat [number] menit, '[number] minutes past [number] o'clock.' The word menit may be left out. The word lèwat may also be left out.

k. Pukul empat (lèwat) lima (menit). 'Five after four.'

Do Exercise 4B.

---

* Petang is rarely used in Java.

4.2 Sudah, belum, masih, baru

Sudah 'already,' belum 'not yet,' masih 'still,' and baru 'just now' are frequently used words which precede the predicate. They are often not translated into English, but Indonesian requires that they be used.

[sudah]

Sudah means 'by now,' i.e., 'be [predicate] now when it was something else before (come to be [predicate]).'

a. Saja sudah SIAP.* 'I am ready now.'

Note that when the meaning 'by now' is implied, Indonesian requires sudah though we may leave out its equivalent in English. For example, in English we can say, 'I am ready,' but in Indonesian we must say the equivalent of 'I am ready now': saja sudah siap.

b. Sudah djam delapan, dia belum SAMPAI. 'It's eight o'clock (now), (but) he hasn't come yet.'

c. Saudara sudah KAWIN? 'Are you married (lit. married yet)?'

[belum]

Belum 'not yet' is used as the negative of sudah. Belum is obligatorily used whenever the meaning 'not yet' is implied, although in English we may leave out its equivalent. Thus English no, not translates belum in the following examples, but belum is obligatory in the Indonesian:

d. 'Saudara sudah KAWIN?' 'Belum.' 'Are you married (yet)?' 'No (not yet).'

e. Saja belum SIAP. 'I am not (or was not) ready (yet).'

*Words with the sentence stressed are written in capitals.

[belum lagi]

Belum lagi 'still not' is used if the speaker is surprised that the predicate has not been yet.

f. Belum LAGI siap? 'Still not ready?'

g. Kawinnja sudah lima tahun, belum LAGI ada anak. 'They have been married for five years, (yet) they still do not have children.'

[masih]

Masih means '[predicate] will still be as it is now' or '[predicate] is still as it was.' Masih is obligatorily used whenever the meaning 'still' is implied even though the English may not express 'still':

h. Dia masih tinggal dihotèl GARUDA. 'He is still staying in the Garuda Hotel.'

i. Anak saja masih KETJIL. 'My children are small (lit. still small).'

j. Minggu depan saja masih DISINI. 'I will be here next week (lit. still be here).'

The negative of masih is tidak lagi, 'not any more.' Again tidak lagi must be expressed in Indonesian whenever the notion 'not any more' is implied even though the English equivalent is complete without the words 'any more.'

h(1). Dia tidak tinggal dihotèl Garuda LAGI. 'He does not live in the Garuda Hotel any more.'

i(1). Anak saja tidak ketjil LAGI. 'My children are not small any longer.'

j(1). Minggu depan saja tidak disini LAGI. 'Next week I will not be here any more.'

[baru]

Baru 'only [so much (or long)] up to now' is used with quantities and with dates and other expressions of time. A phrase with baru means '[the quantity] is only so much up to now' or '[the predicate] happened only recently.'

k. Saja sampai disini baru sebulan jang LALU.
'I arrived here only a month ago.'

l. Belum LAT ini. Baru djam TIGA. 'It is not late yet. It is only three o'clock.'

m. Dia baru KAWIN. 'He just got married.'

n. Anak saja baru TIGA. 'I just have three children.'

[baru sadja]

Baru sadja 'just now, only [so much] up to now' is used in the same way as baru with more emphasis on the smallness or recentness. (If baru sadja modifies a number sadja is placed following a number. If baru sadja modifies expressions with no numbers, sadja follows baru.)

o. Sadja baru SADJA sampai. 'I just arrived (just this minute).'

l(1). Belum LAT ini. Baru djam tiga SADJA. 'It' s not late yet. It's only three o'clock.'

m(1). Dia baru SADJA kawin. 'He just got married (just today).'

n(1). Anak saja baru tiga SADJA. 'I have only three children so far.'

Do Exercises 4Cff.

4.3 Expressions referring to length of time

The words sudah, belum, masih, baru (explained in 4.2 above) and lagi 'more' are used with expressions referring to how long something has lasted or will last. The following subsections detail how these words are used.

4.31 Sudah, masih and lagi in questions as to length of time

Questions as to how long something has lasted or will last are expressed by berapa lama or berapa lamanja 'how long?' or berapa hari (minggu, bulan, tahun, menit, etc.) 'how many days (weeks, months, years, minutes, etc.)' modified by sudah 'already, so much up to now' or lagi 'more.' Sudah modifies berapa... in questions referring to past time. Lagi modifies berapa... in questions referring to future time.

[past time questions]

Sudah BERAPA lamanja [subject] disini? 'How long has [the subject] been here?'

Sudah berapa HARI [subject] disini? 'How many days has [the subject] been here?'

Sudah berapa MINGGU [subject] disini? 'How many weeks has [the subject] been here?'

Sudah berapa BULAN [subject] disini? 'How many months has [the subject] been here?'

[future time questions]

Berapa lama LAGI [subject] disini? 'How long will [the subject] be here?'

Berapa minggu LAGI [subject] disini? 'How many weeks will [the subject] be here?'

Questions as to how long something will last may optionally be modified by masih 'still':

Masih berapa lama LAGI [subject] disini? 'How long will [the subject] still be here?'

4.32 Sudah, baru, masih and lagi in statements referring to length of time

Statements as to how long something has lasted or will last are expressed by [number] hari (minggu, bulan, tahun, menit, etc.) lamanja 'so-and-so many days (weeks, months, years, minutes, etc.).' [Number] hari (etc.) lamanja is modified by sudah 'already, so much up to now,' baru 'only so much up to now,' lagi 'so much more,' and hanja or tjuma ... lagi 'only so much more.' Sudah and baru modify past time expressions: baru modifies past time expressions when the time is considered recent; sudah, when the time is not recent. Lagi modifies future time expressions.

[past time statements]

Saja sudah tiga HARI lamanja disini or Saja sudah tiga HARI disini.* 'I have been here for three days.' [The time is considered long ago.]

Saja baru tiga HARI lamanja disini or Saja baru tiga HARI disini. 'I have been here for only three days.' [The time is considered recent.]

[future time statements]

Saja tiga hari LAGI lamanja disini or Saja tiga hari

* The word lamanja in statements referring to length of time may optionally be omitted.

LAGI disini. 'I will be here for three more days.'

[The time is considered long.]

Saja hanja (tjuma) tiga hari LAGI lamanja disini. or Saja hanja (tjuma) tiga hari LAGI disini. 'I will be here for only three more days.'

Expressions as to how long something will last with a time which is considered long may optionally be modified by masih 'still':

Saja masih tiga hari LAGI disini. 'I will still be here for three more days.'

4.4 Jang lalu 'ago'

'[So-and-so long] ago' is expressed by [so-and so-long] jang lalu:

Dua hari jang LALU. 'Two days ago.'

Tiga bulan jang LALU. 'Three months ago.'

Empat tahun jang LALU. 'Four years ago.'

Expressions with jang lalu are optionally modified by sudah or baru: sudah, if it was quite long ago; baru, if the length of time ago is recent:

Saja sampai disini sudah dua minggu jang LALU. 'I arrived here two weeks ago now.' [The speaker considers the length of time long.]

Saja sampai disini baru dua minggu jang LALU. 'I arrived here only two weeks ago.'

4.5 Other expressions containing lama

Sudah lama means 'long ago (lit. it is already long now)':

Saudara sudah LAMA sampai disini? 'Did you arrive a long time ago?'

Similarly, belum lama means 'not long ago':

Saja belum LAMA sampai disini. 'I arrived here not long ago.'

5a1 sudah

The basic meaning of sudah is 'by now, as of this time.' Thus sudah djam lima means 'it is five o'clock (as of this time).' Sudah is often translated 'already.' However, 'it's already five' in English has the implication that the speaker thought or hoped it was earlier: there is no such implication in sudah djam lima. Similarly sudah pukul berapa means 'what time has it gotten to be by now?'

5a4a dulu

Dulu follows a command or a statement asking a favor. It indicates that it is a small thing being asked. It has the same idea as 'for a second' in 'come here for a second, will you?'; Tunggu dulu, 'Wait a second'; Duduk disini dulu, ja, 'Sit here for a second, will you?' Saja permisi dulu, 'May I go (for a second)?'

5a5a belandja apa

The interrogatives often follow the words they are in a phrase with: e.g. Belandja apa? 'What are (you) buying? (lit. Buying what?)' Tunggu siapa? 'Who are (you) waiting for? (lit. Waiting for whom?)'

5a7 A complete sentence may consist of a predicate alone without any subject. If the predicate applies to somebody, the implication is that the person about whom the predicate is said is 'you.' In other words, English sentences with 'you' may be translated into Indonesian by a sentence consisting of a predicate alone with no subject and no word which refers to 'you.' This is a way of avoiding the difficult problem of how to address a person. (Remember that every word for 'you' in Indonesian carries an implication of the social status of the speaker and the person addressed -- See 1.3.)

5a8a sudah Sudah may be used by itself as a complete sentence. It means, ' [such and such] is the case now.'

5a8b adikaja In this case -nja marks that the word which follows is a genitive. (See 5.42.)

5a13, 14 '[Such-and-such a person] has [so and so many] [things] ' is expressed in Indonesian by ' [the things] of [such and such a person] are [so and so many].' (See 7.1.)

5b17b sebab — Sebab 'because' is pronounced /sebap/. Words written with final b are pronounced as if they ended in p. Similarly, words written with final d are pronounced as if they ended in t: Mahmud [man's name] /mahmut/.

5b23 — The word order of this sentence is predicate, topic, subject.

5b27a satu bungkus — There is no difference in meaning between sebungkus 'a pack' and satu bungkus. Before counters se- is more frequent than satu, but either form is correct.

IV. Free Conversation

A. While walking around in the market you meet your friend Mus' sister. You shout to attract her attention and she greets you. She asks what you are buying in the market. You say you're just wandering around. Then you ask her if she is Mus' younger sister. No, she says, she is his older sister. You apologize for your mistake, and she replies that it doesn't matter. She volunteers the information that she has been married for five years, so you ask how many children she has. She tells you that she has three children now. You respond appropriately. Then she invites you to visit at her house. You express regrets and explain that you have to go to Surabaja the next day but that you'll probably be able to visit next week. Since that's the case, she wishes you a happy trip and you part.

B. You and a classmate are out wandering around. You ask about the time, and after he tells you, you decide you'd better be getting home. You ask for some cigarettes, but he has run out. He goes off to buy some. He comes back with the cigarettes and gives you one. By this time it's almost one o'clock, accordingly, you decide to go home.

Tata Bahasa

5.1 Ajó and Mari

Ajó 'come on, let's [do so-and-so]' and mari 'come on, let's [do so-and-so]' are synonyms. Ajó is more colloquial and more frequently heard on Java. Both ajó and mari are often followed by lah, the particle with exhortations.

Mari kita pergilah. 'Let's go.'

Ajó kita pergi sadjalah. (4c37c) 'Let's just go.'

Ajó. Makan! 'Come on and eat!'

Mari. Makan! 'Come on and eat!'

5.2 Jang in nominal phrases

Jang is a word which is placed preceding words or phrases to allow them to stand in certain grammatical constructions. One use of jang is to form a nominal phrase (a sequence of words which functions like a noun). A phrase introduced by jang can be translated by 'the one that is or does [so-and-so].' Thus jang followed by a verb can be translated as 'the one that is [doing so-and-so] .' Jang followed by a phrase meaning a location means 'the one that is in (at) [such-and-such a place] .' Jang followed by an adjective means 'the one which is [adjective].'

[jang followed by a verb]

Jang belandja dipasar kakak saja. 'The one who shops in the market is my sister.'

Mustafa jang nanti mampir kerumah saja. 'Mustafa (is) the one who will stop in my house.'

Bukan saja jang harus pergi ke Surabaja. 'I (am) not the one who has to go to Surabaja.'

[jang followed by a word meaning location]

Wah, jang disebelah sana itu bagus sekali. (4c 33a) 'My, that one (that is) over there (is) very beautiful.'

[jang followed by an adjective]

Saja tidak mau beli jang mahal sekali. 'I don't want to buy one which is very expensive.'

Another use of jang: Jang followed by ini or itu means 'this one (as opposed to other ones)' or 'that one (as opposed to other ones)' respectively:

Jang ini seribu lima ratus. (4c31) 'This one (as opposed to other ones) is 1,500 rupiahs.'

Kalau jang ini, berapa? (4c32) 'How about this one, how much?'

Jang satu means 'one (of two or more).' Jang satu lagi means 'the other one.'

Anak saja dua. Jang satu sudah kawin. Jang satu lagi, belum. 'I have two children. One is married. The other one is not.'

Bukan, bukan! Jang satu lagi. (4c 27a) 'No, no. The other one.'

(There are other uses of jang described in 7.4.)

For jang do exercises 5B1 and 5B2, 3F1 and 3F2.

5.3 Topics

Some sentences in Indonesian contain a TOPIC as well as a subject and predicate. A topic is a word or phrase which announces what or who the sentence is about.* The topic can

*The difference between a topic and a subject: a topic is in construction with a sentence, whereas a subject is in construction with a predicate. If a sentence contains three phrases, a topic, a subject, and a predicate, we can identify which is the topic and which is the subject by their meanings: the phrase the predicate refers to is the subject; the phrase which the predicate and the subject refer to is the topic. Thus in the following sentence we know harganja 'the price' is the subject and not rokok ini 'these cigarettes' because the predicate limabelas sèn 'fifteen cents' refers to harganja 'the price':

Rokok ini, limabelas sèn harganja. 'These cigarettes, their price is fifteen cents.

usually be translated with an English phrase beginning with the words as for. For example, 'As for me, I'm not going.' In this sentence as for me translates what would be a topic in the Indonesian equivalent:

a. Kalau saja, saja tidak mau pergi. 'As for me, I'm not going.'

In the above example and in following examples, the topic is underlined three times, the subject once, and the predicate twice.

b. Itu baik sekali barangnja. (4c35) 'That is of very good quality.' (Lit. 'As for that, its quality is very good.')

c. Rokok ini berapa harganja? 'How much do these cigarettes cost?' (Lit. 'As for these cigarettes, how much is their price?')

The topic is most frequently placed at the beginning of the sentence. If it is first, it may optionally be preceded by kalau 'as for.' (See the first example of this section.) Similarly the other two examples may be preceded by kalau:

b(1). Kalau itu, baik sekali barangnja. 'That is of very good quality. (Lit. As for that, its quality is very good.)'

c(1). Kalau rokok ini, berapa harganja? 'As for these cigarettes, how much are they?'

Other word orders also occur: the topic may be final or it may come between the predicate and the subject. In summary, there are six possible word orders in sentences containing a topic:

topic, subject, predicate: Rokok ini harganja berapa? 'These cigarettes, their cost is how much?'

topic, predicate, subject: Rokok ini, berapa harganja?

predicate, subject, topic: Berapa harganja, rokok ini?

predicate, topic, subject: Berapa rokok ini, harganja? (5b23c) subject, predicate, topic: Harganja berapa, rokok ini?

subject, topic, predicate: Harganja rokok ini berapa?

There is no difference in meaning among these six possible orders. However, in most cases the topic is first in the sentence. The exercises listed at the end of 5.51 and 5.52 refer to topics.

5.4 Genitive

A word or phrase which is a genitive indicates possession (See 3.41.). As we learned in Lesson Three, the genitive follows the thing possessed. In the following examples the genitives are underlined twice and things possessed are underlined once:

Apa Saudara Ali abang saudara? 'Is Ali your elder brother?'

Dimana rumah Kak Jus? 'Where is Miss Jus's house?'

5.41 Special forms of the genitive with the personal pronouns aku, engkau or kamu and dia

As we learned in 5.4 above, possession is indicated by placing the word referring to the possessor immediately following the word referring to the thing possessed, and in this way the word referring to the possessor is in the genitive construction. Furthermore, any noun or pronoun can be used as a genitive simply by placing it immediately following the word referring to the thing which is possessed. There are, however, special forms of the following pronouns which are used only as genitives (other words do not have special forms which are used in the genitive):

Nongenitive		Genitive
aku	'I (familiar)'	-ku* or aku	'my (familiar)'
engkau	'you (familiar)'	-mu or engkau	'you (familiar)'
kamu	'you (familiar)'	-mu or kamu	'your (familiar)'
dia	'he, she'	-nja or dia	'his, her'

Rumahku (or rumah aku) disana. 'My house is there.'

Dimana rumahmu (or rumah kamu)? 'Where is your house?'

Dimana rumahnja (or rumah dia)? 'Where is his house?'

5.42 Genitive marked by -nja*

-Nja is optionally placed after a word referring to a thing which someone possesses and immediately preceding a genitive. The genitive preceded by -nja and the genitive without -nja have the same meaning.

Apa saudari Jus adiknja Mus? (5a8b) 'Are you (lit. Is Miss Jus) Mus's younger sister?'

This construction is used frequently only in Java. In other places the genitive not preceded by -nja is much more frequent.

* The symbol (-) preceding a word indicates that it is a suffix -- i.e. it occurs only immediately following a word and is written as one word with it.

5.5 -Nja

We have had -nja in four usages so far: (1) as a genitive of dia meaning 'his, her, its'; (2) in the meaning 'the'; (3) as an affix forming nouns from verbs or adjectives; (4) as a genitive marker (5.4).

[in the meaning 'his, her, its']

Bukan. Saja kakaknja. 'No, I am his elder sister.'

[in the meaning 'the']

Disitulah pasarnja. 'The market is there.'

Bu, berapa kué mangkoknja itu? 'Ma'am, how much is that (lit. the that) cupcake?'

Ja tapi kita tanja dulu harganja. 'Yes, but (let's) (lit. we ask) the price first.'

[as an affix forming nouns]

Saudara dari mana datangnja? (2c24) 'Where do you come from? (Lit. You, the coming is from where?)'

[preceding a genitive]

Apa Saudari Jus adiknja Mus? (5a8) 'Are you (lit. is Miss Jus) Mus's younger sister?'

Do Exercise 5C1.

5.51 Transformation of a sentence with a verb predicate into a sentence with a topic

Some sentences consist of a subject and a predicate which is made up of a verb plus an expression of time ('yesterday,' 'two hours,' 'at four o'clock,' and the like) or a verb plus an expression of location ('in the house,' 'here,' and the like). In the following examples the subject is underlined once, and the predicate is underlined twice:

a. Isteri saja sampai djam lima. 'My wife arrived at five o'clock.'

b. Saudara Mahmud tinggal di Surabaja. 'Mahmud lives in Surabaja.'

Such sentences may also be said in another form: the other form is a sentence consisting of a predicate, a subject and a topic. In the following examples the topic is underlined three times:

a(1). Isteri saja, sampainja djam lima. 'My wife arrived at five o'clock. (Lit. My wife, her arrival was at five o'clock.)'

The subject in example a (isteri saja) becomes the topic in a(1). The expression of time in a (djam lima) becomes the predicate in a(1). The verb of a (sampai) takes an affix -nja (forming sampainja) in a(1) and becomes the subject of a(1). Sentence b may be similarly transformed:

b(1). Saudara Mahmud tinggalnja di Surabaja. 'Mahmud lives in Surabaja. (Lit. Mahmud, his living is in Surabaja.)

In the following pairs of examples the first sentence is one of the type consisting of a subject and a predicate; the second sentence is one of the type consisting of a subject, a predicate and a topic:

a. Isteri saja datang dari Amérika. 'My wife comes from America.'

a(1). Isteri saja datangnja dari Amérika. 'My wife comes from America. (Lit. My wife, her coming (is) from America.)'

b. Pak guru sudah lama kenal sama Ibu. 'The teacher has known mother for a long time.'

b(1). Pak Guru, sudah lama kenalnja sama Ibu. 'The teacher has known Mother for a long time. (Lit. The teacher (it is) already for a long time his knowing Mother.)'

c. Merèka kawin di Djokdja. 'They got married in Djokdja.'

c(1). Merèka kawinnja di Djokdja. 'They got married in Djokdja. (Lit. 'They their marriage was in Djokdja.)'

Do exercise 5C2.

5.52 Transformation of sentences with a genitive into sentences with a topic

Some sentences consist of a predicate and a subject made up of a noun followed by a genitive. Subjects are underlined once and predicates twice:

a. Berapa harga rokok ini? 'How much is the price of these cigarettes?'

Such sentences may also be said in another form: the other form is a sentence consisting of a topic, a predicate, and a subject. The topic is underlined three times:

a(1). Rokok ini berapa harganja? 'How much are these cigarettes? (Lit. These cigarettes, how much is their price?)'

The genitive of a (rokok ini) becomes the topic of a(1). The predicate of a (berapa) is also the predicate in a(1). The thing which is possessed (part of the subject in a), harga, takes the suffix -nja forming harganja and makes up the entire subject in a(1).

The following pairs of sentences further exemplify this transformation. The first sentence is one of the type consisting of a subject and a predicate; the second is one of the type consisting of a subject, predicate and a topic. The subject is underlined once, the predicate twice and the topic three times:

a. Berapa harga rokok ini? 'How much (are) these cigarettes?'

a(1). Rokok ini berapa harganja? 'How much (are) these cigarettes? (Lit. These cigarettes, how much is their price?)'

b. Anak Kak Jus baru seorang. 'Miss Jus has just one child. (Lit. 'Miss Jus's child (is) just one.)'

b(1). Kak Jus baru seorang anaknja. 'Miss Jus has just one child. (Lit. Miss Jus, her child (is) just one.)'

Do exercise 5C3.

5.6 Time expressions

Time of day (morning, noon, evening, night) just past is expressed by tadi plus time of day: tadi pagi 'this (today's) morning,' tadi siang 'this (just past) noon,' tadi soré 'this (just past) evening,' tadi malam 'last night.'

Dia disini tadi pagi. 'He was here this morning.' [Said at noon, afternoon or evening.]

Dia disini tadi siang. 'He was here this noon.' [Said in the afternoon, evening or night.]

Dia disini tadi soré. 'He was here this afternoon (or evening).' [Said at night.]

Dia disini tadi malam. 'He was here last night.'

'This time of day (in the future)' is expressed by nanti plus time of day or by time of day plus ini:

Dia mau* datang nanti pagi (or pagi ini). 'He is going to come this morning.'

Dia mau datang nanti siang (or siang ini). 'He is going to come this noon.'

Dia mau datang nanti soré (or soré ini). 'He is going to come this evening.'

Dia mau datang nanti malam (or malam ini). 'He is going to come tonight.'

5.61 The days of the week

The names for the days of the week are as follows (the

*Mau indicates definitely the time is in the future -- however, its usage is optional -- the same sentence may be said without mau with no change of meaning: Dia datang nanti pagi. 'He is going to come this morning.'

parentheses give alternative pronunciations -- the word hari 'day' is usually placed in front of the names but may be omitted in ordinary speech):

Monday	Senin (Senèn)
Tuesday	Selasa
Wednesday	Rebó (Rabu)
Thursday	Kemis (Kamis)
Friday	Djumat (Djumahat or Djum'at /djumqat/)
Saturday	Sabtu /Saptu/
Sunday	Minggu

5.62 Day of the week plus time of day

Day of the week plus time of day means 'Sunday (Monday etc.) morning (noon, evening, etc.)': (hari)* Minggu pagi 'Sunday morning,' (hari) Senin soré 'Monday evening,' (hari) Rabu siang 'Wednesday noon,' etc.

> Saja berangkat hari Selasa siang, dan sampai hari Djumahat malam. 'I left Tuesday noon and arrived Friday night.'

Malam FOLLOWED by the name of day means night of the preceding day: malam Minggu 'Saturday night,' malam Senin 'Sunday night,' malam Selasa 'Monday night,' malam Rebó 'Tuesday night,' etc. Do Exercise 5D.

* The word hari 'day' may optionally be omitted.
 On the other hand the malam PRECEDED by the name of the day means the night of the day: Minggu malam 'Sunday night,' Senin malam 'Monday night,' etc.

5.7 Intonation

The INTONATION of a sentence is the variation in loudness of various portions (stress), the rise and fall of the voice (pitch) on various portions, and pauses within portions. The intonation is closely correlated with the grammatical make-up of the sentence. For example, as we learned in Lesson 2, the placement of sentence stress depends upon which part of the sentence is the predicate (See 2.3). Some sentences with different meanings are exactly alike except for the placement of sentence stress. Compare the following two sentences (the word with sentence stress is underlined):

Empat seratus. 'Four (cost) a hundred(rupiahs).'

Empat seratus. 'A hundred (cost) four (rupiahs).'

The placement of sentence stress is part of the intonation. Other features of intonation are the pause and the pitch (height of the voice).

5.71 Rise in pitch on the last word of the phrase which is the subject

In addition to sentence stress another feature which is essential to the meaning of Indonesian sentences is pitch in sentences composed of a subject and a predicate: if the subject precedes the predicate, there is a slight rise in pitch on the last syllable in the phrase which is the subject. We may symbolize this rise in pitch by '↗.' For example in the following sentences the phrase preceding the symbol ↗ is the subject and the phrase following the symbol -↑ is the predicate:

a. Jang disebelah kiri -↑ kamar babu. 'The one on the left is the maid's room.'

b. Bapak -↑ guru saja. 'You are (Lit. Father is) my teacher.'

c. Seratus -↑ empat rupiah. 'A hundred (cost) four rupiahs.'

Furthermore, if two phrases are not separated by a rise in pitch, they are not in the subject-predicate construction -- that is to say, one is not the subject and the other is not the predicate. Thus the following sentences are homonymous with the above sentences except that they do not have a rise in pitch on the final syllable of the first phrase. Therefore, these sentences do not consist of a subject-predicate construction, and their meaning is different from the meanings of the above sentences.

b(1). Bapak guru saja. 'My teacher's father.'

c(1). Seratus empat rupiah. 'One hundred and four rupiahs.'

To learn how to hear this type of intonation have your teacher say sentence a, then sentence a(1); sentence b , then b(1); c then c(1).

IA. Batjaan

Tati dan Djon baru datang dari Amérika

1. Tati dan Djon menunggu[1*] disetasiun Gambir di Djakarta. Merèka baru datang dari Amérika dan mau terus ke Bandung. Tati pergi ke Amérika delapan tahun jang lalu dan beladjar bahasabahasa. Di Univèrsitas Cornèl dia bertemu dengan[2] Djon dan merèka kawin disana. Merèka sekarang anaknja tiga. Jang ketjil baru satu tahun setengah umurnja[3] dan jang dua itu masih ketjilketjil djuga.

2. Bagus sekali anakanaknja itu tapi bandelbandel[4] djuga. Tati harus kebelakang sebentar dan Djon tinggal mendjaga[5] anakanaknja. Kemudian anakanaknja jang dua itu masuk kerèstoran disetasiun, lalu duduk dekat dua orang Indónésia, seorang ibu dan seorang bapak. Anaknja jang satu lalu mengambil[6] kuékué dan mangkok jang ada tèhnja dari ibu dan bapak itu.

3. Bapak itu pergi dekat Djon lalu bertanja, 'Maaf saudara, anakanak siapa itu,ja? Aduh, bagaimana anakanak itu, kué dan tèh saja diambil sadja begitu. Darimana anakanak itu, ja?'

4. 'Maaf,pak, itu anakanak saja. Mengapa,pak?' tanja Djon. Lalu djawab. bapak itu,'Biarlah, ndak apaapa, mèmang begitu kalau anakanak. Ini ada rokok, silakan, saudara.' 'Terima kasih,pak', djawab Djon, lalu mengambil sebatang rokok.

5. Sekarang bapak itu tahu[7] Djon bisa sedikit berbahasa

*Words with a number beside them are defined on pp. 6-3.

Indónésia, lalu dia bertanja lagi apa Djon sudah lama tinggal di Indónésia. Djawab Djon, 'Ó, belum. Saja baru sadja datang di Indónésia. Tapi isteri saja orang Indónésia dan saja beladjar bahasa Indónésia dari dia. Dulu isteri saja itu pergi beladjar ke Amérika dan kami bertemu disana.

6. Djawab bapak itu lagi, 'Ó begitu. Anak saja jang perempuan[8] djuga kawin dengan orang Amérika. Saja dan ibunja sedang menunggu dia. Dia mau datang dari Amérika hari ini. Barangkali dia dengan suaminja[9] dan anakanaknja sudah ada disini sekarang.' Mèmang bapak dan ibu itu sedang menunggu Djon dan Tati di Djakarta, tapi merèka belum kenal Djon.

7. Seperempat djam kemudian Tati datang kembali. Tati terus kenal ibu bapaknja, lalu dia memeluk[10] dan mentjium[11] ibunja. Barulah sekarang Djon tahu dia tadi bitjara dengan bapak mertuanja.[12] Djon dikenalkan[13] Tati pada ibu bapaknja. Djon minta maaf karena dia baru bisa sedikit berbahasa Indónésia. Senang sekali merèka itu dan kemudian merèka masuk rèstoran lalu makan dan minumminum.

8. Hari itu djuga merèka sampai di Bandung dan bertemu dengan saudarasaudara Tati jang lain. Karena[14] Djon belum bisa berbahasa Indónésia dengan baik,[15] Djon berbahasa Belanda sadja. Ibu dan bapak Tati bisa djuga berbahasa Belanda. Karena Tati tidak bisa berbahasa Belanda, Tati tidak merasa senang[16] kalau merèka itu terus berbahasa Belanda sadja.

9. Satu bulan kemudian, Djon sudah bisa berbahasa Indónésia dengan baik dan dia senang benar kalau ada tamutamu dan temanteman lama dari Tati jang mampir. Tiga bulan kemudian mereka harus pulang kembali ke Amérika karena Djon harus kerdja[17] lagi.

Commentary

1a	permisi	We have had permisi used in parting. Permisi is also used in asking permission to do other things, but it is a very humble way of asking.
6a.	itu	Itu 'that' and ini 'this' are often used as filler words when the speaker cannot think of what to say.
6c.	akan	Akan precedes verbs to indicate explicitly that future time is being referred to. The verb may occur alone without akan however, and still refer to future time.
7.	mau	Mau 'want to' is also used as a marker for future time. In this usage mau has the same meaning as akan. (See note on 6c above.)
10b.	soré	Siang 'noon,' soré 'afternoon,' and malam 'night' also mean 'late': siang 'late (towards noon),' soré 'late (in the afternoon),' malam 'late(at night).'
11.	ke	With no preceding verb ke by itself followed by a noun means 'go to [noun].'
14.	ia	Ja, the hesitation particle or the word meaning 'yes' is sometimes pronounced ia at the beginning of the sentence. Whether it is pronounced ia or ja depends on the intonation.

15b.	ee	This is pronounced like English uh.
16b.	berbitjara	Berbitjara (or bitjara) followed by the name of a language means 'speak [such-and-such a language].' In this meaning it is the same as berbahasa 'speak [such and such a language].'
21b.	Karena	We have had two words meaning 'because': karena and sebab. They are synonyms.
37.	Itu	Ini 'this' and itu 'that' are used when pointing out things. In this usage they are translated 'here' and 'there' respectively.
42.	ee	The speaker does not jump into the question but prefaces it by ee 'um' because he is embarrassed to ask a question of a stranger.

III. Pertjakapan:

IV. Free Conversation

A. Make believe that you have just boarded a train on your way to Surabaja. You approach an older person, excuse yourself, and ask if the seat next to him is taken. He invites you to sit down. You tell him where you are going and ask when he thinks the train will arrive there. He says that it probably will arrive very late, maybe eleven or twelve PM. He asks where you are going to stay. You tell him at a friend's house. Then you ask to look at his magazine. He says: "Surely," but you hesitate and you try to make sure he isn't reading it. He assures you that he has many more and insists that you take it. You thank him. Then he says that he would like to sleep a while, and you bid him pleasant dreams.

B. Make believe that you have just boarded a train on your way to Surabaja. One of your classmates plays the role of an older passenger. Ask if the seat next to him is taken. Strike up a conversation about the train schedules and then ask where he is going. Discuss the estimated arrival time. Then he comments on your Indonesian and asks where you learned it. Chat about your business and ask about his. Then ask about his family. When you come in sight of a mountain you ask its name. He tells you the name and he says he has to get off. You bid each other good-bye.

Tata Bahasa

7.1 Quantities

In asking questions of the type 'how many [things] does [such and such a person] have?' in Indonesian one uses most commonly a question of the form which would correspond to the English 'how many are [the things] of [such and such a person]?'

Sudah berapa anak Kak Jus? (5a13) 'How many children does Jus have now? (Lit. How many are the children of Jus?)'

Similarly in answering questions of this type (in telling 'how many [things] [such-and-such a person] has'), one uses a sentence of the form which would correspond to English '[such-and-such a person]'s [things] are [so and so many].'

Sudah tiga anak saja. (5a14) 'I have three children by now. (Lit. My children are three by now.)'

Anak saja lima. 'I have five. (Lit. My children are five.)'

Berapa anak ibu? 'How many children do you have? (Lit. How many are your children?)'

For this section do Exercise 7A.

7.11 Banjak

Banjak means 'be much, many':

Anak saja banjak. 'I have many children. (Lit. My children are many.)'

Banjak jang dibeli dipasar. '(I) bought many things in the market.'

Banjak also occurs in idioms composed of banjak followed by certain nouns which have the meaning 'have many [nouns].' Three common words which occur preceded by banjak in this meaning are: waktu 'time,' anak 'children,' uang 'money.'

Saja banjak anak. 'I have many children.'

Saja banjak uang. 'I have much money.'

7.2 Sentences containing sudah and baru

The sequence sudah [time] baru [verb] means 'won't do [verb] before [time] or until [time].' (Literally it means, 'It will be already [time] before [verb] is done.')

Saja kira sudah malam baru sampai nanti. (7a12)

'I think (I) won't get there before night. (Lit. It will already be night before (I) get there later.)'

Sudah djam tiga baru kèreta api berangkat. 'The train won't leave until three o'clock. (Lit. It will be already three o'clock before the train leaves.)'

Do Exercise 7B.

7.3 Djadi or mendjadi followed by a noun

Djadi or mendjadi followed by a noun means 'have [noun] as an occupation.' There is no difference between djadi and mendjadi in this meaning.

Dia djadi dokter, dan suaminja djadi hakim. (7c27c) 'She is a doctor, and her husband is a judge.'

Tidak. Anak saja perempuan jang paling ketjil masih mendjadi mahasiswa. (7c29a) 'No, my youngest daughter is still a student.'

Do Exercise 7C.

Djadi also has other meanings. One we have had so far is 'go through, end up doing...'

Maaf, pak, tidak djadi. (4c38) 'Excuse me, Sir, it didn't go through.'

Another meaning is 'will do, be all right.'

Potlotpun djadi. (3b30b) 'A pencil will do too.'

Mendjadi is not used in these two meanings.

7.4 Jang marking adjectives

Adjectives follow the nouns* which they modify:

*We use the terms noun, pronoun, adjective, verb, preposition, adverb, interjection (the names for the parts of speech) to refer to groups of words which have certain meaning features in common -- words which refer to persons, places or things are nouns; words which refer to a quality or a manner are adjectives; words which refer to actions or states are verbs. (footnote continued on the bottom of page 7-38)

Rumah ketjil. 'Small house.'

When an adjective modifies a noun, it is optionally preceded by jang. Whether jang is used or not makes no difference to the meaning. However, if the adjective is part of a longer phrase modifying the noun, jang is more likely to be used than if the adjective consists of only one word.

a. Anak saja perempuan jang paling ketjil masih mendjadi mahasiswa. (7c29a) 'My youngest daughter is still a student.'

This same sentence can be said without jang:

a(1). Anak saja perempuan paling ketjil masih mendjadi mahasiswa. 'My youngest daughter is still a student.'

b. Anak saja jang kedua, jang perempuan, baru sadja kawin. (7c29e) 'My second child, the girl, just got married.' [In this sentence both kedua and perempuan are adjectives. They modify anak saja and are preceded by jang. Either of the two jang's or both may optionally be omitted without changing the meaning.]

Similarly, jang optionally precedes a verb which modifies a noun. For example in the following sentence lalu 'go by,'

(The other parts of speech are discussed later.) In other words, Indonesian words are classified into the same parts of speech as their English translation. Furthermore, all words in each class have certain grammatical properties in common (take certain affixes or occur in certain syntactic constructions). Thus if there is a question as to which part of speech a word belongs, we examine its grammatical properties: if it has the properties of a noun, it is a noun; if it has the properties of an adjective it is an adjective; and so forth.

a verb, modifies a noun bulan 'month.'

c. Baru dua bulan jang lalu. (7c31a) 'Only two months ago. (Lit. Only two months which went by.)'

Again jang may be omitted without changing the meaning:

c(1). Baru dua bulan lalu. 'Only two months ago.'

In the following example the verb pulang 'go home' modifies anak saja. Since the phrase in which the verb appears is long, the word jang would not normally be omitted:

Anak saja jang pulang ke Indónésia sudah kawin. 'My daughter who returned to Indonesia is already married.'

7.5 More on numbers

7.51 Ordinal numbers

The prefix ke- is added to numbers to form ordinal numbers. Ke- plus dua 'two' forms kedua 'second'; ke- plus tiga 'three' forms ketiga 'third'; ke- plus duabelas 'twelve' forms keduabelas 'twelfth,' and so forth.

Dan jang ketiga, bulan depan nanti. 'And the third one (will be born) next month.' (7c27d)

Pertama means 'first.' (The prefix ke- is not used with satu 'one.')

Keberapa means 'which one? number what?'

Anak saudara jang keberapa itu. 'Which child is that? (Lit. That one is your child number what?)'

Do Exercise 7D.

7.52 Counting people and things

A COUNTER is a word used as a unit of measure. In the sentence it follows a number and precedes a noun, e.g. batang 'stick' in sebatang rokok 'a cigarette (lit. a stick of cigarette).' (See 4.1.) The counter which is used in counting people is orang 'person'; seorang anak 'a child (lit. on person child),' dua orang guru 'two teachers (lit. two persons teachers).'

a. Anak saja dua orang. 'I have two children. (Lit. My children are two people.)'

b. Mereka sudah punja anak dua orang. (7c27c) 'They have two children by now. (Lit. They already have children, two people.)'

As we learned in Lesson 4, the use of the counter is optional: the word orang may be omitted without changing the meaning:

a(1). Anak saja dua. 'I have two children. (Lit. My children are two.)'

7.521 Word order

If the number modifies a noun and is not followed by a counter it must precede the noun it modifies:

b(1). Mereka sudah punja dua anak. 'They have two children by now.'

On the other hand, if a noun is modified by a number plus a counter, the number and the counter may either precede or follow the noun. Sentence b of 7.52, b(1) of this section and the following sentence give the possible word orders:

b(2). Merèka sudah punja dua orang anak. 'They have two children by now.'

7.522 Se-

The number satu has the special shape se- before counters (see 4.1):

Merèka sudah punja anak seorang. 'They already have one child.'

7.533 Other counters

Counters are also used with numbers which modify words referring to objects. There is a large number of words which serve as counters. We have had two counters for objects so far: batang 'log, stick' and bungkus 'pack.' Batang is used as a counter for numbering stick-shaped things; bungkus as a counter for things in packages.

Lima belas sebatang. (5b22) 'Fifteen each (lit. a stick).'

Kasi saja tiga bungkus rokok. 'Give me three packs of cigarettes.'

For this section do Exercise 7E.

7.6 Word Study

7.61 Dulu and sebelum

Dulu modifies sentences and means 'formerly':

Saja beladjar di Amérika dulu. 'I used to study in America. (Lit. I used to study in America formerly.)'

Sebelum precedes a sentence and means 'before [someone] did [such and such]':

Tapi sebelum perang saja tidak bekerdja. (7b21c)

'But before the war I did not work.'

7.62 Sedang and lagi

Sedang followed by a verb means 'be doing or be in the process of doing [verb]':

Tapi sekarang sedang liburan. (7b23b) 'But now (we) have vacation.'

A synonym for sedang is lagi.* However, lagi is used only in a colloquial style and is frequent only on Java.

7.63 Selamat

Selamat is used together with actions of any sort in the meaning 'may your [action of doing the verb] be prosperous, blessed': selamat tinggal 'good-bye (lit. may your staying be prosperous)'; selamat djalan 'good-bye (lit. may your going be prosperous)'; selamat tidur 'sleep well.'

7.64 Tinggal and meninggal

Tinggal means 'stay, remain.' Meninggal means 'pass away (polite way for saying die).' Do not confuse these two words: they look similar, but their meanings are quite different. Do Exercise 7F.

*Lagi 'be doing[so and so]' is homonymous with lagi 'more, again,' but the meaning of the two words is different.

Commentary

8a1 kerdja apa? 'Doing what?' In Indonesian, if the recipient of an action is an interrogative, it is often placed following the verb. (Recipients are described in 8.22.) Here apa 'what' follows the verb kerdja 'do': kerdja apa 'doing what?'

8a3 djalan2 'Go for a walk.' This word is a doubling of the verb djalan

		'go.' Words formed by doubling verbs have the meaning 'do [verb] around, without purpose.' (See 15.22.)
8a7	batja apa	'Reading what?' (See the commentary to 8a1 above.)
8a10a	jg ditjarinja	'What he is looking for.' When the subject is a verb, jg 'that which is' is obligatorily inserted as the first word. Here jg precedes ditjarinja 'he is looking for' to allow ditjarinja to be the subject.
8a12	menjèwa	'Is renting.' The base of this word is sèwa 'rent.' (8.2)
8a18	ia	Ia 'yes' is another pronunciation of ja.
8b24a	korsi dua	'Two chairs.' We learned that the number precedes the noun it modifies (7.521). However, in colloquial speech the number may be placed after the noun it modifies. (This usage is common in Java.) There is no difference in meaning between the order number followed by noun and noun followed by a number.

8b24b	jg ada	'What there is.' For the use of jg see the comment to 8a10a.
8b28d	ada didjual	'There are some being sold.'
8c34	me-lihat2	'Look around.' The word is formed be adding meN- to lihat2 'look around.' Lihat2 is formed by doubling lihat 'look'. (See the comment on djalan2 8a3.)
8d48a	kasi	'Give.' We have also had beri meaning 'give.' Kasi and beri are synonyms.
8d49	taruh	'Put.' Note this word is pronounced /taroq/ but spelled taruh.
8c53b	ada jg murah	'There are some which are cheap.' Ada jg plus [adjective] means 'there are some which are [adjective].' (See 8.12.)

III. Pertjakapan:

IV. Free Conversation

A. Pretend your classmate is reading. You ask what he's doing. He responds, 'Nothing much, just reading.' You invite him to go out for a walk. When he asks where, you say, 'Just anywhere, nowhere in particular.' He says he'd rather go some other time. You ask what he's reading. When that doesn't get you anywhere, you ask if he has heard that John is looking for a house. Your classmate corrects you: John is not looking for a house, but a room. You ask if he has found a room yet. When he says he has, you ask if he knows where it is. He says he doesn't know. You say OK, you're just going to go out and walk around.

B. Make believe you've just run across a classmate who has recently rented a room in your town. You ask him where it is and how he likes it. He tells you that there are still a few things the room needs. He asks you to go to the market with him to buy them. One of the things he needs is a mosquito net, but he forgets what it's called in Indonesian. You remind him. You tell him there's no need to buy one because you have an extra one and will give it to him. Ask him to go over to your house now and get it.

Tata Bahasa

8.1 Indefinite words

The following English words are called INDEFINITE WORDS: someone, something, somebody, anything, anybody, no one, nothing and nobody.

The following sections tell how the indefinite words are expressed in Indonesian.

8.11 Apa2, mana2 and siapa2

Apa2 means 'anything' or 'anything at all':

Sekarang ini apa2 mahal. 'Nowadays everything (lit. anything at all) is expensive.'

Saja tidak mentjari apa2. 'I am not looking for anything.'

Mana2 means 'anywhere' or 'anywhere at all':

Ah taruh sadja di-mana2.' (8d50a) 'Oh, just put it anywhere at all.'

Siapa2 together with tidak (or its colloquial varients, nggak and ndak) means 'no one':

Saja tidak melihat siapa2. 'I don't see anyone.'

8.12 Phrases containing jg used to express the indefinite words

Jg followed by a verb, adjective, or a locational phrase means 'someone or something that is[verb, adjective, or locational phrase].' Therefore the phrase containing jg plus a verb, adjective, or locational phrase may be used to translate an indefinite word:

Barangkali ada jg murah (8d53b) 'Probably there are some cheap ones.'

Tadi tidak ada jg mau sama saja kepasar. 'There wasn't anyone who wanted (to go) with me to the market.'

Tidak usah beli jg mahal sekali. '(You) don't have to buy one that is very expensive.'

For 8.11 and 8.12 do Exercise 8.2f.

8.2 Active verbs

Verbs consist of a root alone or a root plus affixes. The root is the portion of the verb which contains the basic meaning of the verb. Other parts of the verb consist of affixes. Thus English hits consists of the root hit which contains the basic meaning of the verb and an affix -s (which has a grammatical meaning). In Indonesian one common verb affix is the prefix meN-. For example, the verb membatja 'be reading' consists of a root batja 'read' and the prefix meN- (which has a grammatical meaning). A verb containing the meN- prefix is called an ACTIVE VERB.

8.21 Meaning of the symbol -N-

The symbol -N- of the prefix meN- has various values depending on the initial consonant of the root to which meN- is added. For example, -N- has the value of m when meN- is added to batja 'read' to form membatja. The following chart shows the value of -N-:

Before	b	d, dj, tj	g,h,vowel	r, l, y, w, m, n, ng
-N- is	m	n	ng	dropped

meN- + batja	= membatja	'read'
meN- + dengar	= mendengar	'hear'
meN- + djual	= mendjual	'sell'
meN- + tjari	= mentjari	'look for'
meN- + ganggu	= mengganggu	'bother'
meN- + hafal	= menghafal	'memorize'
meN- + lihat	= melihat	'see'
meN- + rampas	= merampas	'grab'
meN- + makan	= memakan	'eat'
meN- + ulang	= mengulang	'repeat'

Before roots beginning with p, t, s, or k, the initial p, t, s, or k is dropped and the -N- represents m, n, nj, or ng respectively:

meN- + pakai	= memakai	'use'
meN- + tolong	= menolong	'help'
meN- + sèwa	= menjèwa	'rent'
meN- + kenal	= mengenal	'recognize, be acquainted with'

8.22 Meaning of the active verb

Not all roots may take a meN- prefix, and in most cases in whatever context the verb with a meN- prefix occurs, the same root without the meN- may also be used. Thus in the following sentence the verb has a prefix meN-, but the root without meN- may be used as well:

Ó kamu sudah mendapat [or dapat] kamar? 'Oh, have you already found a room?'

The active verb (verb containing a meN- prefix) is used in two situations: (1) When the emphasis is on doing the action as opposed to having an action happen to someone and (2) when the action is done to a RECIPIENT which follows the verb. By RECIPIENT is meant the person or thing affected by the action.

If the predicate of the sentence contains an active verb (a verb containing meN-), the AGENT (the one who performs the action of the verb) is the subject of the sentence. In the following sentence the predicate is lagi membatja 'am (in the process of) reading.' Saja 'I' is the agent of the action (the one reading). Therefore saja is the subject .

Saja lagi membatja (8a2) 'I'm (in the process of) reading.'

8.221 MeN- plus a verb, meaning 'do the action of the verb'

Tidak apa2. Saja lagi membatja. (8a2) 'Nothing in particular. I'm (in the process of) reading.'

Kita bisa pergi kepasar, me-lihat2, tjari makanan. (8c34) 'We can go to the market, look around, look for something to eat.'

Rupanja buku itu menarik sekali ja? (8c36a) 'Apparently that book is very interesting (lit. draws [the attention]), isn't it?'

8.222 MeN- plus a verb, meaning 'do the action of the verb to a recipient'

Since it is difficult for a beginner to develop a feeling for the meaning of the active verb, he will find it useful to follow this rule: if there is a recipient of the action of the verb and the recipient follows the verb, the meN- prefix is used (if the verb is one which takes a meN- prefix). In the following sentence the verb is underlined once and the recipient of the action is underlined twice:

Saja dengar Djon sedang mentjari rumah. (8a9).
'I hear John is looking for a house at the moment.'

Dia menjewa kamar sekarang. (8a12) 'He is renting a room now.'

Ó kamu sudah mendapat kamar? (8a17) 'Oh, have you already found a room?

For active verbs do Exercise 8Bff.

8.23 Imperatives

A verb in a command is an IMPERATIVE. The prefix meN- is not used with imperative verbs. For imperatives the root alone or the root with some affix other than meN-* is used:

Kalau menjèwa kamar, sèwa kamar jg dekat sini.
'If you rent a room rent one which is near here.'
[Sèwa is imperative. The prefix meN- would not occur with sèwa in this context.]

Tolong tjari Saudara Mustafa. 'Please go look for Mustafa.' [Mentjari would not be used in this context.]

For imperative do Exercise 8C.

8.3 Passive verbs

Most verb roots which take a prefix meN- also may occur as passives. When the passive is used is discussed below in 8.32. The passive verb has the shape root alone immediately preceded by the agent (the one who does the action) if the agent is a first or second person pronoun. The passive verb has the shape di- plus the root followed by the agent if the agent is the third person or a noun. The following table summarizes the passive forms of the verb beli 'buy':

*These affixes will be introduced in later lessons.

Agent	Agent plus verb
aku	kubeli*	'I bought it, it was bought by me.'
saja	saja beli	'I bought it, it was bought by me.'
kau	kaubeli*	'You bought it, it was bought by you.'
saudara	saudara beli	'You bought it, it was bought by you.'
tuan	tuan beli	'You bought it, it was bought by you.'
kamu	kamu beli	'You bought it, it was bought by you.'
dia	dibelinja or dia beli	'He bought it, it was bought by him.'
[noun]	dibeli [noun] or dibeli olèh [noun]	'[noun] bought it, it was bought by [noun].'
Ali	dibeli Ali or dibeli olèh Ali	'Ali bought it, it was bought by Ali.'
kita	kita beli	'We bought it, it was bought by us.'
kami	kami beli	'We bought it, it was bought by us.'
merèka	merèka beli or dibeli merèka or dibelinja	'They bought it, it was bought by them.'
no agent named	dibeli	'It was bought.'

* Kubeli 'I bought it' and kaubeli 'you bought it' are always written as one word. The choice of kau and kamu vs tuan and saudara is explained in Lesson 1 (1.3). Aku and ku- 'I' are used only regionally and in writing.

 The Indonesian passive is often more aptly translated by an English active than by an English passive.

When an agent follows a passive verb, it is optionally preceded immediately by olèh 'by': di- [verb] olèh [agent] 'be [verb]ed by [agent].' There is no difference in meaning between an agent preceded by olèh and an agent with no olèh preceding it.

The agent is underlined once and the verb twice in the following examples:

Bukan rumah jg ditjarinja. (8a10a) 'He's not looking for a house.'

Apa sadja jg harus kaubeli? (8b23) 'What all do you have to buy?'

Apa lagi jg masih harus ditjari? (8b25b) 'What else do (you) still have to look for?'

Nanti saja beri. (8b29c) 'I'll give (you one).'

8.31 Word order with passive verbs having a preceding agent

If there is a passive verb with the agent preceding (i.e. the agent is 'I,' 'you,' or 'we,') the agent is usually not separated from the verb. That is to say, the agent precedes the verb immediately. Thus, for example, the agent kau and the passive verb beli are not separated from each other (though in English their translations are separated):

a. Apa sadja jg harus kaubeli? (8b23) 'What all do you have to buy?' [Harus 'have to' does not separate kau 'you' and beli 'buy'.]

Similarly, if the agent is kita 'we' and the rest of the context is the same, the agent is not separated from the verb (it precedes the verb immediately):

b. Apa sadja jg harus kita beli? 'What all do we have to buy? [Harus 'have to' does not separate kita 'we' and beli 'buy.']*.

Further examples of the agent of the passive verb preceding the verb immediately are as follows:

c. Ini buku jg mau saja beli. 'This is the book I want to buy.' [Mau 'want to' does not separate saja 'I' and beli 'buy.']

d. Apa lagi jg masih harus saudara tjari? 'What else do you still have to look for?' [Harus 'have to' does not separate saudara 'you' and tjari 'look for.']

For the passive form and word order to 8Dff.

8.32 Meaning of the passive

The passive verb is used in three situations: (1) when the emphasis is on the recipient of the action (i.e., the focus of attention is on someone or something, and the verb expresses what happened to him); (2) when the recipient of the

*This rule is not a hard and fast rule. The agent 'I, you, we' sometimes is separated from the passive verb it goes with, especially in colloquial language or in dialects outside of Java. For example a and b could also be said as follows:

a(1). Apa sadja jg kau harus beli? 'What all do you have to buy?'

b(1). Apa sadja jg kita harus beli? 'What all do we have to buy?'

action precedes the verb; (3) when a phrase introduced by jg 'the one who, the thing which' contains a verb and the agent of the action of the verb. In any given context two or even all three of these rules may be in effect. In the examples of the following sections the agent is underlined once, the verb twice, and the recipient three times.

8.321 Passive used when the focus of attention is on the recipient of the action

a. Bukan rumah jg ditjarinja. (8a10a) 'It is not a house he is looking for.' [In this case the passive ditjarinja 'he is looking for' is used because the focus of attention is on rumah 'house', the recipient of the action of the verb.]

b. Dimana kamar jg disèwanja itu? 'Where is the room which he rented?' [In this sentence the focus of attention is on kamar 'room.' Therefore the passive verb disèwanja 'he rented' is used.]

c. Tempat tidur ini kaubeli djuga. (8d47) 'Oh, you bought this bed too.' [The context is one in which the speaker was talking about the various things in the room -- whether the landlord had furnished them or the person spoken to had bought them.]

Compare examples a, b and c above with the following three examples where the focus of attention is on the action of the verb (in which case the active is used - see 8.221) and also the recipient of the action follows the verb (in which case an active is used - see 8.222). (Note the phrase underlined three times is the recipient of the action and not the focus of attention):

a(1). Mustafa tidak ada dirumah. Dia lagi pergi. Dia sedang mentjari rumah. 'Mustafa is not at home. He's out. He's looking for a house.'

b(1). Saja sedang menjèwa kamar. (8a18) 'I am renting a room.'

c(1). Ó, kamu membeli tempat tidur djuga. 'Oh, you went and bought a bed too? [The context is one in which one person bought a bed, and the speaker notices that the person he is speaking to did the same thing, or the person he is speaking to did something and then in addition, he bought a bed.]

8.322 Passive used when the recipient of the action precedes the verb

If the recipient of the action precedes the verb, the passive is obligatory.*

a. Tempat tidur ini kaubeli djuga? (8d47) 'Did you buy this bed too?'

b. Bukan rumah jg ditjarinja. (8a10a) 'It is not a house that he is looking for.'

*That is to say, if the verb is active, the recipient must follow the verb. If the verb is passive, the recipient may precede the verb (or it may follow).

8.323 Passive used when there is an agent and an action within a jg phrase a. Bukan rumah jg ditjarinja. (8a10a) 'It isn't a room he is looking for.'

b. Apa sadja jg harus kaubeli? (8b23) 'What all do you have to buy?)'

c. Jg saja beli hanja mèdja dan korsikorsi. (8d48b) 'I only bought the table and the chairs.'

For the meaning and use of passives do Exercise 8E.

8.4 Translation of English 'it,' recipient of the action of the verb

For an English sentence containing a verb followed by it ('see it,' 'buy it,' and the like) there is usually no Indonesian word which translates 'it.' In contexts where such an English sentence is used, the Indonesian focus of attention is most frequently on the recipient of the action of the verb. To express such focus of attention in Indonesian the passive is used. Thus where verb followed by 'it' is used in English, Indonesian most frequently uses a passive:

Saja bawa bèsok kerumahmu. (8c29d) 'I'll bring it to your house tomorrow.' [John and Mustafa have been talking about a mosquito net, and the focus of attention is on that.]

A, tidak diantar. Nanti malam saja ambil kalau saja lèwat rumahmu. (8c30a-b) 'Oh it is not necessary to bring it. I'll come get it this evening when I go by your house.' [In this sentence as in the last, the conversation is still about the mosquito net.]

On the other hand, if the focus of attention is more strongly directed to the action of the verb, the active form (containing prefix meN-) is used. In that case -nja is added to the active verb form to refer to the recipient 'it.'

Sekarang sadja pergi kerumah saja, mengambilnja. (8c31) '(We) might as well go to my house to get it now.' [The focus of attention is on what we are going to my house for, rather than what is going to be gotten.]

The following two sentences illustrate the active verb with -nja:

Bolèh saja lihat madjalah? -- Ó, maaf, ibu sedang membatjanja. 'May I borrow (your) magazine?' -- 'Oh, excuse me. You're reading it now.'

Apa saudara sudah dengar Présidèn mau melawat kesini. -- Sudah. Saja membatjanja tadi dikoran. 'Have you heard the president is going to visit this place?' -- 'Yes. I read it (before) in the newspaper.'

Compare the following sentence where the passive is used when the focus of attention is on the thing read.

Bolèh saja bawa madjalahnja kerumah? -- Silahkan. Sudah saja batja. 'May I take the magazine home?' -- 'Please do. I have already read it.'

Do Exercise 8F.

8.5 Dropping of meN-

As we stated in 8.22 the prefix meN- may be dropped -- that is to say, in whatever context the verb with a meN- prefix occurs, the same root without meN- also occurs.* We can distinguish a passive from active with meN- dropped by (1) the prefix di- (8.3) or (2) by the word order (8.31). If there is no prefix di- and there is no possibility of separation in the word order, the active with meN- dropped and the passive are homonymous.

Commentary

9a9	bagaimana	'How about it?' This English translation sounds as though the speaker is a bit pushy, but actually, there is no such implication in the Indonesian. Bagaimana? 'how about it?' is merely a request for information.
9a12b	tjoba	'Just a second.' Tjoba has a variety of meanings. Basically it means 'try,' but we have had it in the meaning 'please' (9a4), 'let me' (9a8), and here 'just a second.'
9a15b	tjarikan	This word is composed of tjari 'look for, seek' and -kan 'for the benefit of' (9.12): tjarikan 'look for something for someone.' The word buat 'for the benefit of' is superfluous and has the same meaning as the -kan in tjarikan. (However, in Indonesian it is normal to use both -kan and buat 'for the benefit of' in the same phrase.)
9b19	sama	Sama is also a preposition and means 'with' or 'to.' Its usage is confined to colloquial language. In written language 'with' is expressed by dengan, and 'to' is expressed by pada or kepada. (Dengan and kepada are also used in these meanings in colloquial language.)

9c43b rèpot2 Rèpot means 'to be busy.' Rèpot2 is an idiom and means 'bother oneself doing [so and so], take time to do [so and so]'.

IV. Free Conversation

A. Pretend that you are in a bookstore to buy a dictionary. Let one of your classmates play the role of storekeeper. You approach him and ask if he works there. He says yes, and asks if he can help you. You tell him you are looking for Poerwadarminta's comprehensive Indonesian dictionary. He suggests looking in the language section and you say you have already looked there. He shows you a French-

Indonesian dictionary and a Javanese dictionary, but you really want Poerwadarminta's and nothing else. He offers to check with the manager just in case there is a copy stored elsewhere. When he comes back he tells you that all their copies are sold and the book is out of print. But you need it very badly. He says he's sorry they don't have it; then he offers to ask around among his classmates on the chance that one of them might be willing to sell a copy. You ask what that might cost. He is not sure, but he says it will probably be expensive. You tell him the cost doesn't matter. You still want it, so you ask him please to look for one. You thank him.

B. Let one of your classmates play the role of Sumitro, your bookseller. You have taken some books from the shelves and want to buy them but now you can't find them. He finds the books. Then you ask about collections of Pramoedya's short stories. The store doesn't have them any more, but he offers to ask around among his classmates on the chance that one of them may be willing to sell a copy. Arrange to call him about picking it up. He gives you his name and telephone number and you agree to call on a certain day. Thank him very much for helping. Then he asks whether you still want to buy the books you took off the shelves a while ago. You assure him you do, so he asks you to wait a minute while the cashier totals it all up.

Tata Bahasa

9.1 Suffix -kan

The suffix -kan is added to roots* to form verbs. A verb cannot be formed by adding -kan to any and all roots: only some roots can have -kan added to them. Verbs which contain the suffix -kan (i.e. which have been formed by adding -kan to the root) have active and passive forms (may have the affixes meN-, di-, etc. added to them -- 8.2, 8.3). Verbs with -kan are of four types depending on the meaning which -kan gives to the root: (1) causative, (2) prepositional, (3) transitive verb from a root which is an intransitive verb, (4) miscellaneous.

9.2 Causitive -kan

The suffix -kan is added to some roots to form a verb

*A root is a word which contains no affixes. E.g., an English root is the word 'hit.' The word 'hits' contains the root 'hit' plus a suffix -s. Similarly in Indonesian habis 'all gone' is a root. Menghabiskan 'use up' contains the root habis plus the affixes meN- and -kan.

meaning 'cause somebody or something to do the action of or be in the state of [the root].' E.g., lahir 'be born,' lahirkan 'give birth to (lit. cause to be born)'; habis 'be all gone,' habiskan 'cause to be all gone.' The following list gives the roots which we have had up to now which take a -kan suffix to form a verb with a causitive meaning:

habis	'all gone'	habiskan	'use up'
kawin	'be married'	kawinkan*	'marry off (one's children)' kurang	'be insufficient'	kurangkan	'make less'
lahir	'be born'	lahirkan	'give birth to'
pulang	'go home'	pulangkan	'send home'
sampai	'arrive'	sampaikan	'pass forward (cause something to arrive)'
senang	'happy'	senangkan	'make happy'
sèwa	'rent'	sèwakan	'rent out (cause someone to rent)'
tinggal	'remain'	tinggalkan	'leave behind (cause to remain)' turun	'go down'	turunkan*	'lower'

Verbs with the suffix -kan have active and passive forms (have the affixex meN-, di-etc. -- see 8.2 and 8.3). The following examples contrast these verbs with -kan and their roots without -kan (the examples with -kan are either active or passive):

* Pronounce these /kawinkan/ and /turunkan/. There is a tendency for English speakers to say /kawingkan/ and /turungkan/ which are wrong pronunciations.

a. Masih ada lemper apa sudah habis semua? 'Is there any lemper left or is it all gone?'

a(1). Djangan habiskan semua lemper itu. 'Don't finish all of that "lemper" off.'

b. Merèka sudah lima tahun kawin. 'They have been married for five years now.'

b(1). Anak saja jg paling ketjil sudah tudjuhbelas tahun umurnja. Djadi tahun depan mau saja kawinkan. 'My youngest daughter is already seventeen. So,I shall marry her off (lit. cause her to get married) next year.'

c. Wah kurang jg kauberikan pada saja. 'You didn't give me enough.'

c(1). Wah itu terlalu mahal. Bolèh ibu kurangkan sedikit harganja? 'That's too expensive. Could you lower the price a little?'

d. Anak saja jg kedua lahir di Amérika. 'My second child was born in America.'

d(1). Dia baru sadja melahirkan anaknja jg kedua. 'She just gave birth to her second child.'

e. Wah sudah lat ini. Saja harus pulang. 'My, it is already late. I have to go home.'

e(1). Pulangkan sadja babunja kalau dia tidak mau bekerdja. 'Send the maid home if she doesn't want to work.'

f. Saja kira nanti djam lima kita sampai disana. 'I believe we will arrive at five o'clock.'

f(1). Tolong sampaikan terima kasih saja, ja? 'Please tell him thank-you for me (lit. cause my thanks to arrive).'

g. Apa saudara senang tinggal dihotèl itu? 'Do you like staying in that hotel?'

g(1). Jg saudara tjeritakan itu menjenangkan sekali. 'What you tell me makes (me) very happy.'

h. Dia menjèwa kamar di Djalan Dipónegoro. 'He is renting a room on Diponegoro Street.'

h(1). Ini ada dua kamar jg mau saja sèwakan. 'I have two rooms for rent here. (Lit. Here there are two rooms which I want to have someone rent.)'

i. Dimana saudara Mustafa tinggal? 'Where does Mustafa live?'

i(1). Tinggalkan sadja buku2 diatas mèdja. 'Just leave the books on the table.'

9.12 Prepositional -kan

Some verbs formed by adding -kan to roots have a meaning 'do [so-and-so] for.' For example ambil 'get,' ambilkan 'get for'; bungkus 'wrap up,' bungkuskan 'wrap up for.' The following pairs of sentences illustrate such verbs with and without -kan:

a. Jg sudah dibungkus bolèh dibawa sekarang. 'The ones which are wrapped up you may take now.'

a(1). Tjoba tolong bungkuskan baik2, ja? (9c33a) 'Please wrap it up for (me) carefully.'

b. Sudah lama saja tjari, belum djuga dapat. 'I have been looking for it for a long time, (but) I haven't found it yet.'

b(1). Kalau bisa tolonglah tjarikan buat saja satu. (9b15b) 'If you could, please look for one for me.' [In the sentence both the -kan of tjarikan and the word buat express the meaning 'for the benefit of.']

c. Mari kita kepasar membeli mèdja. 'Let's go to the market to buy a table.'

c(1). Kalau kamu kepasar belikan saja rokok, ja? 'When you go to the market, buy me (lit. buy for me) cigarettes, will you?'

d. Bolèh saja ambil buku ini? 'May I take this book?'

d(1). Tjoba tolong ambilkan pulpèn saja disana. 'Please get (me) (lit. get for me) my fountain pen over there.'

e. Bolèh saja batja medjalahnja sebentar? 'May I read your magazine for a minute?'

e(1). Nanti saja batjakan kamu tjerita. 'I'll read a story for you.'

f. Apa itu jg ditulis disana? 'What is that written there?'

f(1). Tuliskan peladjaran itu untuk saja. 'Write that lesson down for me.' [In this sentence both the -kan of tuliskan and untuk express the meaning 'for the benefit of.']

9.121 -kan meaning 'off'

Some verbs formed by adding -kan to roots mean 'accomplish the doing of so-and-so.' A verb of this kind is kirimkan 'send off,' formed by adding -kan to the root kirim 'send.'

Tolong bungkuskan barang2 ini baik2, ja, sebab nanti mau saja kirim. 'Please wrap these things up well, because I want to send them (in the mail).'

Saja tidak punja waktu untuk mengirimkan buku ini semuanja. 'I don't have time to (in order to) send these books off.'

9.13 -Kan forming transitive verbs to roots which are intransitive verbs

A TRANSITIVE verb is one to which the prefix meN- may be added and which has a passive* Other verbs are INTRANSITIVE (that is to say, they never take a meN- prefix and/or have no passive). Some verbs which are intransitive have a synonym or near synonym containing the same root as the intransitive verb and having the affix -kan. The synonym with -kan is a transitive verb. In other words, the affix -kan in some cases has no meaning. It merely has the grammatical function of forming transitive verbs from roots which are intransitive verbs. Thus tjerita 'tell' is intransitive; tjeritakan 'tell' is transitive; bitjara 'speak, talk to' is intransitive; bitjarakan 'talk to' is transitive; kerdja 'work, do' is intransitive; kerdjakan 'do' is transitive.

*This definition of transitive refers only to Indonesian verbs and is independent of the definition of transitive given for English verbs. Any verb which has a passive and which has a meN- is called transitive (no matter how it is translated into English and how the English translation behaves) and furthermore, all other verbs (verbs which have no passive and/or no meN-) are intransitive.

a. Pak guru bertjerita bagaimana dia dulu beladjar bahasa Djepang. 'The teacher told how he used to study Japanese.'

a(1). Ini saja mau mentjeritakan saja baru pindah. (8a16) 'I want to tell (you) now that I have just moved.'

b. Sama siapa saja bitjara nanti? (9b19) 'Who should I ask for? (Lit. Who do I have to talk to?).'

b(1). Apa jg mau saudara bitjarakan? 'What would you like to discuss?' [This is a passive form of the transitive verb.]

c. Ja saja memang bekerdja disini. (9a2) 'Yes I work here.'

c(1). Saja belum tahu apa jg nanti harus saja kerdjakan dirumah. 'I don't know yet what I have to do at home.' [This is a passive form of the transitive verb.]

9.14 -Kan which changes the meaning of the roots in other ways

With some roots -kan forms verbs which have a meaning of a different type from those described up to now. One common root of this type is beri 'give to someone'; berikan 'give something away':

a. Siapa jg saja beri buku ini nanti? 'Who shall I give this book to?'

a(1). Apa jg harus saja berikan nanti? 'What do I have to give (him)?'

a(2). Bagaimana saudara bisa memberikannja pada saja? (9a15c) 'How can you give it to me?'

With some roots which are nouns a verb is formed by adding -kan. A noun of this type is djumlah 'sum'; djumlahkan 'total up'.

b. Kira2 berapa djumlahnja toko buku di Djakarta ini?
'Approximately what is the total number of book stores here in Djakarta?'

b(1). Saja suruh kasir mendjumlahkan semuanja. (9b26)
'I'll have the cashier total it all up.'

For -kan do Exercises 9A ff.

9.2 Dropping of meN-

The prefix meN- is often dropped in colloquial speech:

Apa saudara bisa menolong (or tolong) saja? (9a3a)
'Could you help me?'

Saja mentjari (or tjari) kamus umum. (9a3b) 'I'm looking for a comprehensive dictionary.'

In contexts in which the meN- occurs and may be dropped there is no difference in meaning between the verb with meN- and the verb without meN-. There is a difference in style though: the form without meN- is more common in colloquial speech, whereas the form with meN- is more common in the written language or in formal speech. Note, however, that meN- cannot always be added when the root alone is used: the passive verb never has meN-. For example, in the following sentence tjari is not short for mentjari (i.e. mentjari could not be substituted for tjari) because in this case the verb is passive:

Ó, sudah saja tjari disana tapi tidak ada. (9a5)
'Oh, I have already looked for it over there, but it isn't (there).'

The prefix meN- may be dropped even if there is a suffix -nja 'it' (8.4). For example, in the following sentence tjarinja is short for mentjarinja:

> Sekarang susah sekali tjarinja. (9a10b) 'It is very difficult to look for it nowadays.'

Compare the following sentence in which mentjarinja has the same meaning and construction as tjarinja in the immediately preceding sentence:

> Karena buku itu sudah habis sekarang dan susah sekali mentjarinja. (9b14c) 'Because this book is all sold out now and it is very difficult to look for it.'

9.3 Word study

9.31 Usah

The phrase tidak usah means 'it is not necessary, don't have to':

> Ajó kita lihat. -- Ah tidak usah. Mari kerumah saja sadja. (8c40-41b) 'Let's take a look.' -- 'Oh let's not. (Lit. It's not necessary.) Let's just go to my house.'

The word usah is always preceded by tidak 'not' (or its colloquial substitutes nggak or ndak). 'Must, have to' is expressed by harus or mesti:

> Permisi, ja? Saja sudah harus pulang sekarang.
> 'Excuse me. I have to go home now.'

The negative of harus or mesti is tidak usah:

> Saja masih bolèh tinggal disini lagi. Saja tidak usah pulang sekarang. 'I can stay a while longer. I don't have to go home yet.'

For this section do Exercise 9B.

9.32 Sudahlah

The phrase sudahlah has two meanings: (1) it is used when agreeing to something after there has been some bargaining; (2) it is used in the meaning 'never mind, forget it.'

> Itu terlalu mahal. Bagaimana kalau duapuluh lima sadja. -- Wah, itu sedikit sekali. Tapi sudahlah. Sekarang ini saja kasilah. 'My, that's too expensive. How about twenty-five rupiahs?' -- 'My, that's very little! But all right. This time I give it (to you for that).'
>
> Entah ja, tapi saja bisa tjari dibelakang. Tapi ini, ja, makan waktu sedikit. -- A sudahlah, tidak usah. (9c30a-31a) 'Gee, I don't know, but I could look out back. But it would take a little bit of time.' -- 'Oh never mind, (you) don't have to.'

9.33 Tjoba

Tjoba is a verb meaning 'try'. Tjoba is also used as a modifier of a verb in two uses: (1) in the meaning 'please (asking someone to do a favor)':

> Tjoba lihat dibagian sana, dibagian bahasa. (9a4) 'Please take a look in (that) section over there, the language section.'

(2) when followed by saja and a verb, in the meaning 'let me do [verb]':

> Tjoba saja tanja manidjirnja. (9a8) 'Let me ask the manager.'

Sometimes tjoba by itself has the meaning 'let me':

Tapi, tjoba, bisa saja tanja. (9a12b) 'But wait a second, I could ask.'

9.34 Mèmang

Mèmang is a particle which confirms that what was said by the interlocutor previously is indeed true:

Bolèh tanja ja, apa saudara bekerdja ditoko ini?

-- Ja, saja mèmang bekerdja disini. (9a1-2) 'Excuse me (lit. may I ask), do you work in this store?' - 'Yes I do. (I) work here.'*

Do Exercise 9D1f.

9.35 Suruh

Suruh means 'have or tell someone to do something.':

Saja suruh kasir mendjumlahkan semuanja. (9b26)

'I'll have the cashier total it all up.'

Do Exercise 9E.

9.36 Entah

Entah is a word meaning 'I don't know.' It is usually not considered polite to answer a question with entah alone as it gives an impression that the speaker does not care. Entah is usually used in a statement which does not answer a question:

Dia sekarang bekerdja di itu. . . entah apa namanja itu. 'He works in whatchamacallit. . .I forget (lit. I don't know) the name.'

The particle ja, however, when it follows entah gives the impression that the speaker does care: Entah, ja? 'I don't know, I'm sorry.' Entah, ja is not considered impolite.

*When a phrase containing a verb is affirmed, the phrase containing the agent and the verb is repeated. When a phrase containing a noun or adjective is affirmed, the noun or adjective alone is repeated after mèmang.

Apa ada tjeritera2 pèndèk atau roman jg lain? Entah, ja, tapi saja bisa tjari dibelakang. (9c29-30a)
'Are there any other short stories or novels?' --
'Gee, I don't know, but I could look in the back.'

9.37 Ja

Ja at the end of a phrase is a particle which asks for the hearer's agreement:

Datang bèsok kerumah, ja? (1b24b) 'Come to the house tomorrow, will you?'

Dua, duapuluh lima, ja? (5b23) 'Two (for) twenty-five, OK?'

From this meaning ja is extended. It is used in any statement which refuses a request (The request may have been actually made or was merely implied):

Tapi ini, ja, makan waktu sedikit. (9c30b) 'But this takes a little time. (I won't do it now, all right?)'

Entah, ja, tapi saja bisa tjari dibelakang. (9c30a) 'Gee, I don't know, but I could look for it in the back.' [The speaker is asking if it is all right for him to refuse the request for information.]

Do Exercise 9F1f.

Commentary

10a6b	ikuti	This word is formed by adding -i 'on' to ikut 'follow, go along with.' Kita ikuti djalan ini means 'we will follow this road (lit. follow on this road).'
10a7	bawa	Do not confuse bawa /bawaq/ 'carry' with bawah 'beneath.'
10a10a	djangan	The negative of imperatives of exhortations is djangan 'don't, let's not.'
	lagi	A new meaning of lagi is introduced here. We have had lagi in the meaning 'again.' Here lagi means 'do [so-and-so] unnecessarily.' Djangan...lagi means 'let's not bother doing, don't bother...'

10a10b	sana	This is short for disana 'there.'
10a11	halaman	The word for garden and yard is the same: halaman. Often the yard is cultivated like a garden.
10b15b	ibu	'I.' Mus's mother refers to herself as ibu 'mother.' Adults usually do not use saja 'I' when talking to children or people young enough to be their children.
10b19b	djauh2	'Take the trouble of going far.' The doubling of djauh has the same effect as the doubling of rèpot 'busy': rèpot2 'bother oneself doing...'
10b20b		Mustafa's mother thanked him, but that part of the dialogue was left out of our lesson.
10b21		When you are asked what you would like, the polite answer in Indonesian is 'whatever you have.' If one asks for something in particular, the danger is that the host will not have it and will be put to embarrassment.
10b24c	dirumah orang	'At somebody's house.' Noun plus orang means 'somebody's [noun].'
10b25	bisa	We've had bisa meaning 'can, be possible.' Bisa also means 'be all right to...'
10b28a	banjak menanam tjabé	'Plant much pepper.' Note that 'do

		[verb] to many recipients' is expressed by banjak [verb] recipient. (See 11.21.)
loc30b	kalau	We have had kalau in the meaning 'if.' Kalau also is used in the meaning 'when' when the time referred to is not past as in this case.
10c35,36a	tustèl, kodak	These two words are synonyms. They both mean 'camera.'
	bikin	'Make.' We have also had the word buat in the meaning 'make.'
	lain kali	Lain kali has two meanings: (1) 'the next time' as in this sentence, and (2) 'another time' (as in sentence 36b).

IV. Free conversation

A. Imagine that a classmate is bringing you home to visit his village. Tell him how nice it is, especially how cool and fresh the air is. He says, yes, it's always cool in the country and there is no dust or noise. You say it's quiet too. He agrees that it's quiet now, but later at the village it won't be, what with the children playing and the grown-ups chatting in their gatherings after they have come home from work. You exclaim at how far the village is from the road. He says, no, it's only about two kilometers, and if you just follow the road, it won't be long before you're at his house. You say, yes, but if you have things to carry, it's far anyway. He says, don't tell me you're tired so soon! You tell him no but suggest that you sit for a while under a tree. He points out a house behind a rubber tree in the distance and says that it's his. You ask, which one, the one with the banana tree in the yard? He affirms that that is the one and invites you to go.

B. Pretend you have a visitor to your village. You invite him into your house and ask him to sit down. You ask what he'd like to drink. He answers. You invite him to take a walk through the village. Your visitor expresses apprehension about the possibility of rain. You tell him about the rainy season and explain that you can always take shelter in a friend's house if you get caught in the rain. During your walk your visitor expresses curiosity about the various plants. You tell him about them and about the fields. He exclaims that he should have brought his camera. Then it begins to rain and you tell him to take shelter.

Tata Bahasa

10.1 The prefix ber-

The prefix ber- forms verbs. There are rules for determining which verbs take ber-, but these rules are too complicated to be worth studying until you have had more examples of verbs with ber-. At this point the best procedure is to remember which ones are the verbs which occur with ber-. Verbs with ber- are of two types: (1) verbs which may not drop ber- (verbs which always have ber- or have a different meaning without ber-) and (2) verbs which may drop ber- (verbs which occur in the same meaning with the root alone).

10.11 Verbs which may not drop ber-

Verbs of this type we have had up to now are berangkat 'leave,' beladjar 'study' (where ber- has an alternant shape bel- instead of ber-), berbahasa 'speak (a language)' and bertemu 'meet.'*

Dimana Saudara Djon beladjar berbahasa Indónésia?
'Where did you study (how) to speak Indonesian?'

Kerèta api berangkat djam berapa? 'What time does the train leave?'

10.12 Verbs which drop ber-

Many verbs which have a prefix ber- may optionally drop the prefix ber-. (No general rule can be given for which verbs drop ber-. Each case must be learned individually. Verbs we have had up to now, which occur with the prefix ber-, other than those listed in 10.11 above, are of this type.) The form without ber- is more common in colloquial speech, whereas in formal speech or in writing the ber- is usually used (not dropped). For example, bitjara or berbitjara 'speak;' kerdja or bekerdja 'work' (note that this word has an alternate shape be- of the prefix ber-); sekolah or bersekolah 'study.'

*The verb bertemu 'meet' has an alternant shape ketemu (with a prefix ke- instead of ber-). Bertemu and ketemu have the same meaning. Bertemu is common outside of Java. Ketemu is more common on Java.

Bolèh saja bertanja (or tanja) apa saudara bekerdja (or kerdja) ditoko ini? 'Excuse me (lit. may I ask), do you work in this store?'

Dulu sebelum perang saja bersekolah (or sekolah) di Mèdan. 'Before the war I studied in Medan.'

10.13 Transitive verbs corresponding to verbs with ber-

A root which takes the prefix ber- may also take other affixes: meN-, -kan (and others which will be presented later). Not all roots which take ber- also take meN- and/or -kan; only some do so. Thus we have the following pairs of verbs derived from the same root:

verbs with ber-		verbs with -kan
berbitjara	'speak'	bitjarakan	'discuss'
bekerdja	'work'	kerdjakan	'do'
bertanja	'ask'	tanjakan	'ask'
berkumpul	'gather together'	kumpulkan	'gather (cause to become gathered)

A verb with a prefix ber- or the verb with a prefix ber- dropped is intransitive (9.13) -- that is, it does not have a passive form and it does not take a meN- prefix (forming member- or the like). Thus in constructions which require a passive (8.32 ff), a verb with ber- (or a verb with ber- dropped) cannot be used. For example, in a phrase introduced by jg the passive is obligatory if it contains an agent and a verb (see 8.323). In such a construction a verb with ber- does not occur.

In the type of construction which requires a passive form, if you wish to express an idea which is usually expressed by a verb containing ber-, substitute a verb consisting of a root plus -kan (9.13) for the verb with ber- in those cases in which there is a verb consisting of a root plus -kan synonymous with the root plus ber-.* Thus in the following pair, in the first sentence bertjerita 'tell' may be used because the construction is not one in which a passive is obligatory; in the second sentence the verb tjeritakan synonymous with bertjerita is used because the construction is one in which the passive

* In those cases in which there is no verb with -kan synonymous with the verb with ber- another synonym must be found or the construction must be avoided. (The same idea must be expressed in an entirely different construction.)

is obligatory (the verb is in a jg phrase together with an agent):

a. Pak guru bertjerita bagaimana dia mendjadi gerilja waktu perang. 'The teacher told how he was a guerilla during the war.'

a(1). Apa jg ditjeritakan pak guru? 'What did the teacher tell about'?

In the following pair, in the first sentence bekerdja 'work' may be used because it occurs in a construction in which a passive is not obligatory; in the second sentence kerdjakan 'do' synonymous with bekerdja is used because the verb occurs in a construction in which a passive is obligatory:

b. Sebelum perang saja tidak bekerdja. 'Before the war I did not work.'

b(1). Apa jg njonja kerdjakan sebelum perang? 'What did you do before the war?'

The verb beladjar 'study' has peladjari as the transitive verb with nearly the same meaning. In the following pair beladjar may be used in the first because a passive is not obligatory; peladjari is used in the second because its construction is one in which a passive is obligatory.

c. Saudara beladjar apa disana? 'What did you study there ?'

c(1). Apa jg saudara peladjari disana? 'What did you study there'?

10.2 Sentences translating English 'with' (in the meaning of 'that has')

'With (that has)' is expressed in Indonesian by jg followed by a sentence:

Jg mana, jg ada pohon pisangnja dihalaman? (10a11)
'Which one, the one with (lit. the one that has) the banana tree in the garden?'

Kampung Mustafa tempat jg dingin dan segar udaranja.
'Mustafa's village is a place with cool and fresh air (lit. in which the air is cool and fresh).'

Apa saudara kenal sama Mustafa jg banjak adiknja itu?
'Do you know Mustafa, who has many younger brothers and sisters (lit. that Mustafa who his younger brothers and sisters are many)?'

Semua orang jg lebih dari tiga anaknja tidak usah membajar. 'Everybody who has more than three children (lit. who his children are more than three) doesn't have to pay.'

Dia melahirkan anak jg tiga kakinja. 'She gave birth to a child with three legs (lit. who his legs were three).'

10.3 Position of sudah

Sudah is a modifier of the predicate. Its position is usually immediately preceding the main word of the predicate. In the following sentence the main word of the predicate is underlined:

a. Saja sudah lama tinggal Djakarta ini. 'I've been living here in Djakarta for a long time now.'

Wah! Rupanja sudah tjapai! 'My! You look tired already!'

However, if the predicate which sudah modifies is very short (that is, consists of one or two words), sudah in colloquial speech may optionally occur immediately following the main word of the predicate:

b(1). Ah kenapa sih? Tjapai sudah? (10a8) 'Why? What's the matter? Don't tell me you're already tired! (Lit. Are you already tired?)'

10.4 Word study

10.41 Sadja

Sadja is a word which is used to modify a predicate, usually following the last word in the predicate. Here we discuss four usages of sadja: (1) in the meaning 'merely (no better than [predicate])'; (2) in the meaning 'it might as well be [predicate] ([predicate] is not the most desirable thing, but it is the best choice available)'; (3) with imperatives, implying that the thing requested is a little thing to do (I wouldn't want to ask you a big thing); (4) in phrases to form idioms.

Ah tidak usah. Mari kerumah saja sadja. (8c41a, b) 'Let's not. Let's just go to my house.'

Atau tuan melawat sadja? (4b17b) 'Or are you just traveling around?'

Ah sebentar sadja kok ini. (10c38a) 'Oh heck, it's only going to be a short time.'

'[Predicate] is the best choice under the circumstances']

Ah terima kasih. Lain kali sadjalah. (8a6a,b) 'Oh, thank you very much. Just make it another time.'

[With imperatives, implying that the thing asked is a very small thing to do]

Ah taruh sadja di-mana2. (8d15a) 'Oh, just put it anywhere.'

[In phrases forming idioms]

[baru sadja] Baru sadja means 'just now' (4.2)

Dia baru sadja kemarèn kembali dari Amérika. 'He just returned from America yesterday.'

[Interrogative plus sadja] An interrogative (apa 'what?', siapa 'who?', mana 'which, where?') followed by sadja means 'name all the things (places, persons) that ...'

Apa sadja jg harus kaubeli? (8d23) 'What all do you have to buy?'

Apa sadja jg ditanam diladang? (10c29) 'What all is planted in the field?'

An interrogative (apa, siapa, mana, bagaimana, berapa, etc.) followed by sadja also means 'anything (anybody, anywhere) at all:

Ja, apa sadjalah. Air bolèh, kopi djuga bolèh. (10b21) 'Well, anything will do. Water will be all right. Coffee would be all right too.'

[tentu, bisa, or bolèh plus sadja]

Tentu, bisa or bolèh followed by sadja means 'of course, it can be done.'

Bolèh saja lihat madjalahnja? -- Ó silakan, tentu sadja. (7d45, 46) 'May I see your magazine?' -- 'Please do. Certainly.'

10.42 Kemari

Kemari 'here, to this place' has the same meaning as kesini. Kemari is used in either colloquial or formal speech. Kesini is confined to colloquial speech.

Lain kali saja bawa lagi kamu kemari (or kesini). (10c36b) 'I'll take you here again some other time.'

10.43 Sampai

Sampai is a verb meaning 'arrive.' Sampai also introduces a sentence and means 'even, up to the point that':

Sampai naik keatas gunung. (10c33b) 'It even goes to the top of the mountains.'

10.44 Kok

Kok is a particle which modifies predicates. It has two meanings depending on its position in the sentence. It occurs either (1) ahead of the predicate or ahead of the rest of the sentence or (2) following the main word of the predicate. In its position following the main word of the predicate kok is a particle which denies that what the interlocutor said or thought is the case. (The meaning of kok in its other position is discussed in later lessons.)

Kenapa kamu nggak kasi surat itu? Kan kemarin sudah datang suratnja? -- Belum kok! 'Why didn't you give me that letter? Didn't it come yesterday?' -- 'No it didn't!'

Katanja kamu mau kawin. -- Ah, nggak kok! 'They say you're going to get married.' -- 'No, I'm not!'

Ah, sebentar sadja kok ini. (10c38a) 'Oh heck, it's only going to be for a short time. (It's not going to be as you thought.)'

Djangan ambil madjalahnja, ja? Belum saja batja. -- Ah nggak. Saja hanja batja kok. 'Don't take the magazine, will you? I haven't read it yet.' -- 'I'm not (going to take it). I'm only going to read it.' [Kok is expressed in English by the intonation.]

10.45 Kan

We have had two uses of kan up to now: (1) at the end of a sentence, short for bukan, meaning '[sentence] is the case, isn't it?'; (2) modifying a predicate and preceding the predicate or the entire sentence, used when the predicate gives an explanation or a reason which is obviously the case: '[predicate] is the case, don't you know?'

Apa bisa begitu? -- Bisa sadja. Kan semua orang kenal saja disini. 'Is it all right?' -- 'Sure. Everyone knows me here, you know.'

Kenapa mau tjepat2 pulang? Kan masih pagi ini. 'Why are you hurrying home? It's still early, you know.'

10.46 Djuga

We have had djuga in the meaning 'also':

Tempat tidur ini kaubeli djuga? (8d47) 'Did you buy this bed, too?'

In this lesson we have djuga in another meaning: 'anyway (despite what you may think).'

Ia, sekarang ini, tenang; tetapi nanti, kalau kita sudah sampai disana, agak ribut djuga. (10a4a) 'Yes, it is quiet now, but later when we arrive there, it will be quite noisy (anyway).'

Ja, kalau bawa barang, djauh djuga. (10a7) 'Yes, if you have to carry things, it is quite far (anyway).' [This is in reply to a statement that it isn't too far to walk.]

Kan sekarang masih terang djuga? (10b26b) 'It is still clear anyway, isn't it?'

10.47 Kebetulan

Kebetulan modifies predicates and precedes them. It means, '[predicate] happens to be the case':

Ibu kebetulan sedang mentjutji dibelakang. (10b15b) 'I was (lit. happened to be) out back doing the washing.'

10.48 Sih

Sih is a particle which modifies predicates and follows the main word of the predicate. In this lesson we have sih in two usages: (1) in sentences containing a topic, sih may follow the topic immediately and has the meaning 'to be sure [predicate] applies to the topic, but ...':

Tjapai sih tidak, tapi kita duduk sebentar dibawah pohon itu. (10a9) 'I'm not tired (to be sure) but let's sit down underneath that tree for a while.'

Mahal sih mahal, tapi kan bagus. 'They may be expensive (to be sure). But they're good, you know.'

(2) in the phrase kenapa sih 'What's the matter?'

Ah kenapa sih? Tjapai sudah? (10a8) 'Why, what's the matter? Don't tell me you're tired already!'

Kenapa sih, mau lekas2 pulang? 'What's the matter that you're hurrying home so fast?'

Commentary to the Basic Sentences

11a1b	paman	Paman has a wider application than English 'uncle.' The term paman refers to the father and the mother's brother and also to male cousins of one's father or mother.
11a2a	djangan	'Let's not.' We have had djangan in the meaning 'don't.' It is also used in the meaning 'let's not.'
11a7b		In areas where the local language is not Indonesian, the local language is used for the first two or four years.
11a14	saudara	'Brother, sister, cousin.' We have had saudara as a title and as a term of address, 'you.' Saudara is also used as a general term for 'brother or sister.' Saudara is also used to refer to cousins of the same generation: the children of one's parents' siblings or cousins. (See the note on paman 11a1b.)
11a15c	buat	'For.' We have also had untuk in the meaning 'for.'
11b17a	sini	This is short for kesini 'come here.'
11b18a		Daud is able to converse in Indonesian even though he is only in the second grade and Sundanese is the language of that area. Presumably he has had some Indonesian in school, and also in many areas children hear so much Indonesian spoken around them, that they learn to speak it at an early age.

11IV. Free Conversation

A. Pretend that you have just been introduced to the principal of a small elementary school. Ask how he is and say how nice you think his school is. He remarks that they have only two grades there. He says that for the higher grades, the children have to go to the city to study. You ask about the language of instruction. He answers. You ask whether you're not being a disturbance. He says no and explains that he has given the children some work. You compliment him on the pupils' behavior. He says that it's because he's standing there. Then he excuses himself, because the children's recess is about to begin.

B. Pretend that a friend has just introduced you to his little brother and gone off and left you there with the boy. You greet him and ask him his name and age. He asks where you're from. You chat about differences in time and season in America and Indonesia. Then you tell him to run off and play, but you promise to continue the discussion later.

Commentary to the Readings

The style of writing in Indonesian is more fancy and formal than the style of normal speech: there are many words and modes of expression which are used commonly in writing but which would not normally be used in normal speech. These forms will be pointed out in the grammar sections or in the readings as we come to them. It is necessary to know such forms in order to understand them in reading.

1. bermaksud — 'Have the intention of.' This word is composed of ber- a prefix forming verbs from nouns [14.23]* plus maksud 'intention.'

dibitjarakannja — 'He discussed.' The formation of bitjarakan 'discuss' is described in [9.13].

ia — 'He.' Ia is only used in written language: it means 'he, she.'

tjukup mempunjai bahan — 'He had enough materials.' For the word order see [11.21].

mendirikan — 'Erect.' This word is composed of a root diri 'stand' plus meN- plus -kan meaning 'cause something to ...' [9.14].

bertukang — 'Work with his hands.'

2. dengan radjin — 'Industriously.' The construction consisting of dengan plus an adjective meaning 'do in an [adjective] way' is described in [14.3].

tak — Tak is a synonym for tidak. It is common in written language but in spoken language it is used only in certain set expressions like tak usah 'unnecessary.'

*In the commentary to the readings, references to the grammar sections are put in square brackets.

3. pagi2 'In the morning.' [17.14]

benar 'Very.' Benar 'true' and betul 'true' are also used in the meaning 'very.'

petang hari 'In the afternoon.' The word hari may optionally follow a word referring to a period of time of day (morning, afternoon, night, etc.) In this usage it has no translation into English. E.g. malam hari 'night' pagi hari 'morning,' etc.

baru 'Not until ... did ...' [7.2]

banjak 'There was much.' [11.21]

bèrèskan 'Made ready.' This is the root bèrès 'ready' made into a verb by the addition of -kan, the affix which forms verbs meaning 'cause to become ...' [9.14] bèsoknja 'The following day.'

4. kelihatan '[Adjective] to look at.'

tertutup 'Had been covered over.' [14.1] dihinggapi 'Be alighted on.' [11.3]

baru 'Recently.'

	sedap	'Nice, good (to the senses).' We have also had ènak in this meaning. Sedap and ènak are synonyms.
	banjaklah	'There were many.' For the use of lah see [11.5].
	tertarik	'Were attracted.' [14.1]
5.	dibersihkan	'Clean' (from a root bersih 'clean'). [9.14]
	pula	'Again.'
	menjediakan	'Prepare' (from a root sedia 'ready'). [9.14]
6.	banjak mendapat	'Got much profit.' In an expression consisting of a verb and a recipient of the action plus banjak meaning 'do [verb] to many goals' banjak is placed before the verb. [11.21]
	sebuah	'A.' [11.12]
7.	tanjakan	'Ask.' [9.13]
	harus kita kerdjakan	'We have to do.' The formation of kerdjakan 'do' is described in [9.13]. The word order is discussed in [8.31].
	ku	'My.' Aku and ku [5.41] 'I, me, my' are used mainly in written language.

8.	menerangkan	'Clarify.' (This word is composed of terang plus meN- plus -kan [9.14].)
9.	sesampai	'Upon arriving.' [15.13]
	ter-bajang2	'Kept appearing.' The prefix ter- is explained in [17.12].
	tadi	'The above mentioned.'
	djuga	'Nevertheless.'
10.	hendak	'Was going to ...' [11.6]
11.	setiap	'Each, every ...' [15.11]
	djika	'If.' Djika is confined to written language. It is a synonym of kalau.
	senang hati	'Happy.' Hati 'heart (lit. liver)' is optionally added to words describing emotions (happy, sad, and the like). It has no translation into English. (Literally it could be translated as 'happy in the heart' or the like.)

Tata Bahasa

11.1 More on -kan

Review 9.1 ff. for the basic usages of -kan.

11.11 Beri and berikan

Beri means 'give (to somebody) and it also means 'give (something away)':

[active]

a. Saja sudah memberi pekerdjaan pada merèka. 'I have already given some work to them.' [In this sentence memberi is used in the meaning of 'give something away.'] a(1). Saja sudah memberi merèka pekerdjaan. 'I have already given them some work.' [In this sentence memberi is used in the meaning of 'give to.'] a(2). Pekerdjaan itu sudah saja beri pada merèka. 'I have already given that work to them.' [In this sentence saja beri is used in the meaning 'I gave away.']

[passive]

Merèka itu sudah saja beri pekerdjaan. 'I already gave them some work to do.' [In this sentence saja beri means 'I gave to.'] Berikan means 'give away.' In other words, berikan is used in one of the two meanings of beri.

[active]

Saja sudah memberikan pekerdjaan pada merèka. 'I have already given some work to them.'

[passive]

Pekerdjaan itu sudah saja berikan pada merèka. 'I have already given that work to them.'

11.12 Dengar and dengarkan

Dengar means 'hear news' or 'hear noise':

Saja dengar Daud sudah pindah. 'I heard that Daud has already moved.'

Saja senang sekali mendengar kamu sudah kawin. 'I was very happy to hear you got married.'

Saja dengar (or mendengar) dia naik tangga. 'I heard him coming up the steps.'

Dengarkan means 'listen to':

Mardi mendengarkan tjeriteranja pak lurah dengan penuh perhatian. 'Mardi listened to the village chief's story with complete attention.

Do Exercise 11A.

11.2 More on expressions of quantity

11.21 Banjak, tjukup

Banjak is a verb meaning 'there are (were) many':

Saudaranja Mustafa banjak. 'Mustafa has many brothers and sisters. (Lit. The brothers and sisters of Mustafa are many.)'

Masih banjak jg mesti dibèrèskan. 'Many things still have to be settled.'

Banjak is also used preceding sentences or predicates in the meaning '[sentence] or [predicate] happens (or has happened) many times':

Banjaklah orang tertarik berbelandja. 'Many people were attracted to shop there. (Lit. It happened many times that people were attracted to buy there.)'

Banjak and tjukup are also used preceding a phrase consisting of a verb and the recipient of the verb in the meaning '[verb] happened to many [recipients]':

Setahun kemudian Mardi telah banjak mendapat untung dari warungnja. 'One year later Mardi had already gotten much profit from his shop.'

Mardi tjukup mempunjai bahan untuk mendirikan warung jg sederhana. (11R1) 'Mardi has enough materials to erect a simple stall.'

Do Exercise 11B.

11.22 Counters

The counter buah optionally precedes words referring to things the size of a fruit or bigger. (The basic meaning of buah is 'fruit'):

Didinding kantor Lurah tergantung sebuah gambaran. 'A (lit. one fruit picture) picture hung on the wall of the village chief's office.'

Berapa buah sekolah ada dikota ini? 'How many schools (lit. how many fruits of schools) are there in this city?'

Do Exercise 11B1.

11.3 Verb-forming suffix -i

The suffix -i is added to roots to form transitive verbs (verbs which take a prefix meN- and have passives). The suffix -i has several meanings: one which we have had in verbs up to now is the meaning 'at, in, on, from.' The following list gives some verbs which take the suffix -i in this meaning:

datang	'come'	datangi	'come to'
dekat	'near'	dekati	'approach, be near to' djalan	'go, walk'	djalani	'walk on'
djauh	'far'	djauhi	'be far away from'
hampir	'almost'	hampiri	'approach'
hinggap	'perch'	hinggapi	'land on something'

11.4 Tadi

Tadi has three usages: (1) modifying sentences, appearing either preceding or following the sentence in the meaning of 'just a little while ago':

Tadi saja ambil beberapa buku jg mau saja beli. (9b21c) 'I took a few books a while ago which I was going to buy.'

Dimana, ja, saja taruh tadi? (9b21d) 'Where did I put them (a second ago)?'

(2) modifying a noun or a pronoun, immediately following it meaning (a) 'the previously mentioned [noun] or [pronoun]':

Sesampai dirumah ter-bajang2 dimatanja gambar tabungan pos tadi. 'When he arrived home the picture of the postal savings kept appearing before his eyes (lit. the pictures of the postal savings just mentioned.)' or (b) 'the [noun] or [pronoun] was [the predicate]':

Ini tadi sterop saja? 'Was this my drink?

(3) Tadi plus a time of the day means '[time of day] just past': tadi pagi 'this morning'; tadi siang 'this noon'; tadi soré this evening; tadi malam 'last night.'

Do Exercise 11D.

11.41 Tadi contrasted with dulu

Tadi refers to time in a very recent past. It contrasts with dulu in that dulu refers to a longer time gone by:

> Dulu, sebelum perang saja djadi kepala sekolah partikelir. 'Before the war I was a principal of a private school.'

Do Exercise 11D3.

11.5 Lah

Lah is a particle which modifies the predicate. It is placed following the word of the predicate which receives sentence stress. Lah has four usages:

(1) with a command, to make the command more polite (giving an urging rather than a commanding tone):

> Pergilah kekantor pak lurah dan tanjakanlah dia. 'Go to the village chief and ask him.'

(2) asking for agreement (with an exhortation):

> Ajólah kita kepasar sekaranglah. 'Come on. Let's go to the market now.'

(3) with an expression of agreement:

> Ja baiklah. Saja ikut sadjalah. 'All right. I'll just go along (O.K.).'

(4) lah is optionally used with any predicate which precedes the subject (it has no meaning in this usage):

> Itulah pasarnja! 'That's the market.' [Itu is the predicate and lah follows it. The subject, pasarnja 'the market' follows the predicate.]

Do Exercise 11E.

11.6 Hendak, akan, mau

Future time is optionally expressed in Indonesian: that is to say, if the meaning of the verb is future time, a word may be used to express it or the verb by itself may be used for future time (as well as for other tenses). However, if one wishes to be specific he may use hendak, akan, or mau to indicate future time. There is practically no difference among these three forms. Hendak is more commonly used in Sumatra than in Java. Also hendak is more common in formal or written style than in colloquial language.

Isteri Mardi menjediakan barang2 jg akan (or hendak or mau) didjual. 'Mardi's wife prepared the things which she was going to sell.

Ulasan - (Commentary)

13a2b	kaló	This is the colloquial pronunciation of kalau. If there is a pause after kalau, it is pronounced kalóq. In this lesson we indicate pronunciations in colloquial speech.
	matari	This is short for Matahari (with h dropped and contraction of the two a's).
	masi	This is the pronunciation of masih when there is no pause following it.
	rasa	Rasa is used in a colloquial speech to mean 'be of the opinion that ...'
13a4a	mó	Mau ispronounced mó when not stressed.
4b	biar	Biar is used in colloquial speech in the meaning 'in order to.'
	sampéq	This is the colloquial pronunciation of sampai before a pause.
13a6a	nunggunja	This form is colloquial. Nunggu is short for the more formal form menunggu from tunggu 'wait.' In colloquial speech the prefix meN- has the shape n when added to words beginning with a t or d and the t is dropped. In colloquial speech the verb takes a suffix -nja to make it a noun. The literal translation of this sentence is, 'The waiting for it will have to be long.'

13a9	arga	Harga is pronounced arga in colloquial speech.
13b15	dong	The particle dong here implies that the hearer (the driver) should be aware of the information the speaker (John) is giving: 'It's too expensive, and you know it.'
13b16	uda	This form is a pronunciation of' sudah in colloquial speech. The s is dropped like in sadja, sama, satu and other words, and the h is dropped before another word.
13b17	dèh	Dèh is used with imperatives in colloquial speech in the sense of 'you might as well do [verb] (though it is not what you would prefer to do).'
	tarik	In Djakarta this is the word used for 'drive a betjak.' The basic meaning of tarik is 'draw (pull).' Nowadays the betjak is peddled from behind and the passenger is in front, but formerly, the betjak was drawn from in front.

13b18	adja	This is the colloquial form for sadja. Cf. the note to sentence 6.
	dèh	Dèh here means, 'Just agree to thirty rupiahs (though it is not the desired price).'
13b19b	dèh	Dèh here is used as in sentence above: 'Agree to call another betjak.'
13b21	tidak ah	The idea of ah is, 'Stop urging. It is out of the question.'
13b23a	dèh	Dèh is also used when agreeing to something after some discussion. 'All right I agree to do [verb] as the least undesirable choice.'
23b	dèh	Dèh here is being used just as in sentence 23a.
13b24a	dong	Dong is used with commands urging the hearer to do something he should know to do without being told.
13b25a	kita ini	In colloquial speech kita is sometimes in the meaning 'I' (but not meaning 'my'). A demonstrative (ini or itu) is used following a pronoun or a noun referring to a person to give the meaning 'the person who is here, there -- as opposed to other people who are similar in some way.' The implication is that other people who are similar do not have the characteristics described for the particular person referred to by a demonstrative. Here the betjak driver has thirty years' experience (unlike other betjak drivers.)

	taon	Tahun has a colloquial pronunciation /taon/.
13b27b	ampir	This is a contraction of uda ampir which in turn is colloquial form for sudah hampir (with dropping of s in sudah, h at the end of sudah before another word, and h of hampir in colloquial speech).
13b28	salah djalan	Salah together with a verb forms an idiom meaning 'be mistaken in doing [verb]': Salah naik 'get on the wrong bus, train, etc.,' salah djalan 'go the wrong way,' salah pilih 'choose the wrong one,' salah lihat 'be mistaken in what one saw,' et. al.
	dong	Dong is used with statements to indicate that the hearer should be aware of the fact if he isn't.
13b29a	kesasar	This is a colloquial form for tersasar. In colloquial speech ke- is used instead ...

of ter- with the same meaning as ter-. Some of these forms with ke- are also used in formal speech and written style (e.g., kesasar), but the use of ke- for ter- is much more widespread in colloquial than in formal speech.

13b31a tambain — In colloquial speech the suffix -in is used for -kan or -i. This is the colloquial equivalent of tambahkan 'add something (to something else).' Note also the dropping of the h before the suffix -in.

dong — This is the dong used with statements indicating that the hearer should be aware of the fact if he isn't. Cf. sentences 13b15, 13b28.

31b njeberang — This is short for menjeberang from seberang. MeN- with words beginning with s has the shape nj in colloquial speech. Cf. the note to sentence 6a.

13c33 djeruk bali — A djeruk bali is a type of citrus fruit somewhat larger than a grapefruit. It is sweet, closest in taste to an orange, but not as juicy as an orange or grapefruit.

13c41 sih — Sih is used with question words to give the feeling that the questioner is not very urgently concerned about the question being asked. (John is asking about the price without betraying a strong interest so that the seller will not quote too high a price.)

13c45	penglaris	'Something to make goods move.' Vendors often feel that making a sale will attract other buyers, and they are willing to sell something cheap when they first open shop in order to get the goods moving.
13d51d	lu	This is a colloquial intimate form (from the Djakarta dialect) for kau or mu 'you.' Do not use this form until you are very sure of yourself. It is only used with younger relatives or otherwise very intimate people.
13e75c	udah dèh	'All right. I agree. It is a deal.' (Sudahlah is used in this same meaning in more formal speech.)

IV. Free Conversation

A. Pretend that you are in a hotel in Djakarta and you want to do some shopping. You ask the clerk where the best place to go shopping is. He recommends New Market (Pasar Baru). You ask how to get there. When the clerk explains that you should take a taxi or a betjak there, you ask if there are no buses. He explains that it is not so convenient to take a bus. You ask about the fare and also about the prices in Pasar Baru. The clerk explains that you should bargain. He says in the big stores the prices are fixed, but in the small stands the vendors often ask for twice the normal price, especially if you are a foreigner who does not know the usual price. You thank the clerk. He reminds you of the proper betjak fare.

B. Pretend that you want to take a betjak to your destination. You find one, but the driver asks for twice the usual fare. You argue with him and finally get to the point that you have to look for another one because he will not come down to a reasonable price. Finally when another one comes on the scene, the first betjak driver agrees to the price that you offered. You get in but you begin to worry if he knows where he is going. He explains that he does, but you are still worried because he is going too fast. You ask to get off, but he says you are not there yet. He says it is not too far any longer, and in fact you can already see it. He explains that it is just across the street. You say take me across the street, then. He says he will take you if you give him ten rupiahs extra. You agree reluctantly after some argument and then go on your way.

C. Pretend you are an old man selling pomelos. An American comes along and you try to interest him in buying some. He doesn't know what they are or how they are to be eaten. You explain and offer to peel one for him to try. He asks about the price, and you quote him approximately twice the price that you are willing to take. He says no thank you, and you say the price could be lowered a bit. He asks how much you are willing to sell them for. You say that if he buys all of these you will let him have them for 100 rupiahs each. He says that he cannot eat but one, could you let him have one for a hundred. You say that, well, since he is a visitor from abroad you will take a loss and let him have it for a hundred. He says thanks, would you wrap it for me. You say, certainly, but don't you want me to peel it for you? He says no thanks. You say you have to go find some paper to wrap it with at your friend's stand. He says, never mind wrapping it. He asks if you could help him with something else. You say certainly. He says he is looking for a toilet. You say that there is a toilet in the Chinese restaurant across the street. He says he doesn't see it. You say, just a minute, I'll have my son take you there. You call your son to show the American where the toilet is. He says thank you and is off.

Tata Bahasa

13.1 Colloquial style

From now on we will pay attention to style. Our style of speaking shows how we consider the people we are talking to -- whether we consider them our equals, superiors or inferiors in social status; whether we consider them close friends, acquaintances or strangers. If we use the wrong style we risk offending people.

Suppose you missed a class and you asked your best friend to lend you his notes. You might say, 'Let me borrow your notes tonight, Joe.' On the other hand, if you were asking the professor to lend you his notes, you would not say it this way. Instead you might say, 'May I borrow the notes for tonight, Dr. Jones?' If you were to say 'let me' (pronounced lemme) to the professor, he would consider it rude. On the other hand, in a store, you may say either 'may I have' or 'let me have': 'May I have a dozen eggs,' or 'let me have a dozen eggs.' You probably would not say 'give me' (pronounced gimme) unless the clerk happened to be a friend of yours.

In Indonesian, too, there are several styles of speech -- several ways of saying the same thing, depending upon the relative social positions of the speaker and the person spoken to and upon whether they are intimate with each other or not. You need to know how to use different styles in order to reflect the attitudes you intend to express, or reflect the attitude people expect from you. Further, you need to know these differences in style so that you may recognize how people react to you and be able to respond in the proper way. We can best learn these styles by observing speech in various contexts. In the lessons you are given various contexts proper for different styles of speech. In this lesson for example, John talks to vendors and betjak drivers. Thus, his speech is not as formal as what would be used in an office or in speaking with strangers of a higher social position. The vendors and betjak drivers do not use as informal a style with John as they would with each other. However, their style is still a colloquial style (since uneducated people do not know how to make their speech as formal as the speech used in offices, schools and other formal occasions.)

The style of this lesson is called COLLOQUIAL SPEECH. Since many of the features of colloquial speech are taken from the Djakarta dialect, they are often referred to as Djakarta forms; but these features actually are in widespread use in places outside of Djakarta.

(The true Djakarta dialect is quite different from what is presented here, and far more aberrant from formal Indonesian.) In the following subsections we will examine various features (taken from the Djakarta dialect) which are marks of colloquial speech.

13.11 Colloquial pronunciations

13.111 Glottal stop

In colloquial speech the glottal stop (q) is pronounced only when it is followed by a pause -- in other words q is dropped when something follows immediately with no pause. Thus rakjat 'people' (where the k represents a glottal stop in formal speech) is pronounced /rajat/ in colloquial speech.

On the other hand certain words which do not end in k in writing and are not pronounced with a final glottal stop in formal speech are pronounced with a final q in colloquial style: djugaq 'also,' mintaq 'ask for,' sukaq 'like,' tjobaq 'try,' and others.

In colloquial speech h like q is pronounced only when it is followed by a pause -- in other words in colloquial speech h is dropped when something follows immediately with no pause. Thus lebih 'more' before a pause is pronounced with a final h, but preceding another word as in lebih dulu 'earlier' the final h is dropped /lebi dulu/. In colloquial and formal speech h between unlike vowels is dropped. Thus marah 'angry' is pronounced with final /h/ in both colloquial and formal speech. Marahi 'get angry at' is pronounced with no h: /marai/.

Some words with initial h have in colloquial speech an alternative form without h. E.g. hari /ari/ 'day'; habis /abis/ 'done'; harga /arga/ 'price.' In some cases the form without h is used even in formal speech, e.g. hantar 'deliver' is pronounced /antar/ even in formal speech.

13.113 Pronunciation of ai and au

The spelling ai represents two sounds depending on the word: (1) /ej/ as in sampai /sampej/ 'arrive' and (2) /aj/ as in mulai /mulaj/ 'begin.' (The pronunciation /ej/ for words written ai is indicated in the build-up of the basic sentences and also in the glossary.) When ai written represents spoken /ej/ the sound in colloquial speech may be /èq/ or /è/ (with q dropped): /sampèq/; /sampè sini/ 'up to here.' Other examples are pakai /pakèq/ 'use' tjapai /tjapèq/ 'tired,' etc.

The spelling au represents two sounds depending on the word: (1) /ow/ as in kalau 'if' /kalow/, (2) /aw/ as in bau /baw/ 'smell.' Mau 'want' is pronounced /maw/ when stressed, /mow/ when not stressed:

Saja tidak mau /maw/. 'I don't want to.'

Saja mau /mow/ makan. 'I would like to eat.'

Kalau /kalow/ is also pronounced /kalóq/ in colloquial speech.

13.114 Pronunciation of u

In some words a written u is pronounced /o/ in colloquial speech; e.g. djauh /djaoh/ 'far,' tahun /taon/ 'year.' In some cases the pronunciation with /o/ for a word written with u is used in formal speech: e.g. telur /telor/ 'egg,' kursi /korsi/ 'chair,' et. al.

13.12 Special forms of formal words in a colloquial style

Some words beginning with s drop the s in colloquial speech: sadja /adja/ 'just,' sama /ama/ 'with,' sudah /udah/ 'by now,' et. al. There are other forms which are confined to a very intimate style which we will meet in later lessons.

13.13 Affixes used in colloquial speech

One mark of colloquial speech is that the prefixes ber-, ter- and meN- and the suffixes -kan and -i are not frequently used. These affixes are either dropped entirely or replaced by other affixes. The prefix ber- is generally dropped with nothing to replace it (10.11). For ter- ke- is substituted:

Mana bisa kesasar (for tersasar) kita, pak.

(13b29a) 'How can we get lost.'

For meN-, N-is substituted. The symbol N- represents the prefix meN- with the part of the prefix shaped me- dropped:

Saja bawa njeberang (for menjeberang) ni. 'I brought you across the street.'

Saja udah lama nunggunja (for menunggunja). 'I have been waiting for him for a long time.'

However, before roots beginning with r or l N- has the shape nge-:

Saja nggak ngerokok (for merokok). 'I don't smoke.'

For the suffixes -kan and -i -in is substituted:

Ja biar dah, saja turunin (for turunkan) sedikit. (13b64) 'O.K. I'll lower it a bit.'

Djangan marain (for marahi) saja dong. 'Don't get mad at me.'

13.14 Special words used in colloquial style

We have had the following words used in colloquial style speech which would not be used in a formal style: kita 'I' (in formal and in colloquial speech saja is used for 'I'); dèh, dah [particle of assent] (in formal and in colloquial speech lah is used as the particle of assent); lu 'you' (in formal or in colloquial speech engkau or kau are used for 'you'); nggak or ndak 'no, not' (in formal or in colloquial speech tidak is used for 'no'); and sih, kok, kan, dong [particles with an emotional meaning] (simply not used in a formal style of speech).

13.2 Intonation

From now on we will pay more attention to intonation, for in Indonesian the intonation carries important information about grammatical function (Sec. 2.3 and 5.7) and speakers' attitudes. If you are to understand what people say, you must recognize Indonesian intonations; and if you are to make your meanings clear, you must use Indonesian intonation patterns.

In English intonation conveys information as to the speaker's attitude as a few examples will demonstrate. Suppose you were asking whether or not a certain person is honest.

If your interlocutor were to say,

Yes, he's honest (with no drop at the end), you would know right away that your recommender wants to qualify his statement. However, if he were to say,

Yes, he's honest (with a full drop at the end), there would be no doubt.

For another example, suppose you were in a store asking the clerk if he had any fresh apples, which answer would seem nicer:

No (with no drop) or No (with a complete drop)?

The first, of course, is a nicer answer. The clerk indicates his desire to help by implying that he is going to say something else. In the second, he closes the conversation without further ado.

In Indonesian the intonations are even more important, for they carry grammatical meanings as well as subtle modal meanings. However, be warned that Indonesian intonations do not work like English intonations. Indonesian has patterns which do not occur in English, and also, a particular intonational pattern in Indonesian may have an entirely different meaning from the English pattern which is exactly like it. Thus you will have to acquire a new set of habits. In this lesson and henceforth an intonation curve is indicated for each basic sentence. In addition each unit will contain exercises which enable you to learn the principles of Indonesian intonation and start you on the road to using these intonations automatically. But at the beginning you will have to listen carefully and correct yourself whenever you make a mistake. It will be a while before the Indonesian patterns will come naturally to you, and it will not happen unless you are constantly on the alert in the beginning and try to establish the sounds of the Indonesian intonations in your mind. Eventually you will come out with the proper intonations automatically if you put out the effort, and you will find that your comprehension is much improved and that people can understand you readily.

We will take up these intonations one pattern at a time. These patterns will sound funny to you in the beginning -- anything unfamiliar is funny at first, but do not shrink from imitating them exactly, and you will find that they sound normal to you after a short while. Exercise 13A deals with the first type of intonation we study.

13.3 Word study

13.31 Dèh (dah)

Dèh (and its synonym dah) covers a range of meanings translated in several ways in English. They modify the predicate and occur immediately after the stressed word in the predicate. Dèh (dah) has as its basic idea 'somebody agrees to [the predicate], though it may not be entirely desirable.' (Compare the discussion of lah -- 11.5. Lah has very nearly the same meaning as dèh (dah).)

Dèh (dah) is used only in colloquial speech. In formal speech the meaning of dèh (dah) is expressed by lah (or omitted altogether). Dèh (dah) has three usages: (1) it is particle asking for assent, (2) it is a particle used in giving assent, and (3) it is a particle meaning 'I guarantee you, that's how it is.'

13.311 Dèh in statements asking for assent

The basic notion of dèh in its usage asking for assent is, 'You might as well do [the predicate] -- [the predicate] is the best thing for you to do (even though you may not like to do it).'

Ambil adja jg lain dèh. 'Just get another one.'
[You might want to take this one, but since you do not agree to my conditions, you might as well get another one.]

Lain kali adja dèh. 'Just make it another time.'
[Since you won't buy it under my conditions, just try another time.]

With imperatives dèh is used in a similar meaning, but there is no implication that the person to whom the command was given did not like the idea.

Makan dèh. Djangan malu2. 'Go on and eat. Don't be shy.'

Ambil dèh, tuan, murah sekali ini. 'Come on, Sir, take it. It is very cheap.'

Lekas dèh. Nanti telat kita. 'Hurry up. We'll be late.'

13.312 Dèh in statements giving assent

In this usage dèh (dah) mean, 'All right, I agree. Do (or let somebody do) [the predicate] (though it may not be entirely desirable).'

Ja biar dah, saja turunin sedikit. (13d64) 'O.K., let me lower it (the price) a little (though I don't want to).'

Kalau mau tudjuhpuluh lima, masuk dèh. 'If you agree (to pay) seventy-five (rupiahs), O.K., get in (though it's too little).'

It is in this meaning that dèh (dah) are used when one is offering a lower price. For example, if the vendor offers something for fifty rupiahs, you might make an offer for thirty saying that you agree to the thirty (as if the vendor had offered to sell you the merchandise for thirty):

Tigapuluh adja dèh. 'All right. For thirty (I'll take it.)' [The buyer talks as though the vendor had offered to sell the merchandise for thirty and he agrees to it (even though in reality the buyer is the one suggesting that price).]

13.313 Dèh in statements guaranteeing that it is indeed that way

Ènak dèh makannja disana. 'I guarantee you, the food is good there.'

13.32 Dong

Dong follows the stressed word of the predicate. It is used in commands. Its basic meaning in commands is, 'do what I am asking you to do, for that is the right thing to do.'

Hai! Djangan terlalu tjepat dong! (13b24)
'Hey! Don't go too fast.'

Tambahin sepuluh lagi dong, pak. Kan saja bawa njeberang nih. (13b31a-b) 'Add ten (rupiahs), Sir. I took you across the street, you know.'

Djangan malu2 dong. Kasi tahu namanja, siapa.
'Don't be shy. Tell (him) your name.'

Tinggalin dong sedikit buat saja. 'Leave me a bit (you should).'

Dong is also used in statements. In statements dong means, 'This is the case, and you should know it, if you don't.'

Ini salah djalan dong. (13b28) 'This is the wrong way (we're going). [You should know that we're going the wrong way!]

Itu masih terlalu mahal dong. (13d66a) 'That's too expensive.' [I know that, and you should too.]

Kalau nggak ada teman, susah dong. 'If you don't have friends, it's hard. You know that.'

Do Exercises 13Bff. for dong and dèh.

13.4 Negative words coming after the words in the predicate which bear sentence stress

As we have seen throughout these lessons tidak (nggak, ndak), bukan or belum precede the stressed word in the predicate when they negate the predicate. These words also occur following the stressed word in the predicate. (They follow the stressed word immediately or there may be some words intervening between them and the stressed word in the predicate.) The predicate followed by a negative means 'is [predicate] the case, or is it not?' In other words, tidak, bukan, or belum coming after the stressed word of the predicate is short of apa tidak, apa bukan, and apa belum respectively.

Sudah kawin dia, belum? [= Sudah kawin dia apa belum] 'Is he married yet, or not?'

Lima ratus, mau, nggak? (13d66a) 'Five hundred, do you want it for that, or not?'

Bolèh, nggak, ikut nanti? 'Can you come with us, or not?'

Sudah siap, belum? 'Are you ready or not?'

VI. Latihan

13A. Intonation exercise. A frequent type of intonation pattern is one which begins low, rises to its peak on the stressed syllable of the word which receives sentence stress, and drops slightly on the rest of the syllables of the sentence (but never goes as low as the beginning of the sentence). This intonation pattern is called the 243 pattern. In the following example and elsewhere the height of the line represents the height of the voice. The word which receives sentence stress is underlined:

Dimana?

Berapa harganja bètjak kesana?

The following sentences all have the 243 intonations. First listen to the informant as he reads a sentence and repeat aloud after him imitating his pitch as closely as you can. Then try reading the sentences on your own without the model and see if you can come out with the right intonation pattern:

1. Bisa djugaq.
2. Kelambu, tuan?
3. Berapa harga bètjak kesana?
4. Ud ampir kelihatan tokonja.
5. Mana bisa sekarang ini, pak?

Ulasan (Commentary)

14a1-7 These sentences are in a colloquial informal style because first, John is talking to his friend and then, to the betjak driver. As in the previous lesson the spelling of the basic sentences follows normal Indonesian orthography except for those words or phrases which are given a special pronunciation in rapid colloquial speech.

14a1 kamu Kamu is used to address children and young people with whom one feels familiar.

mó For this spelling of mau see the note to sentences 1-7.

14a2a belon Belon is a colloquial form for belum 'not yet.'

14a7a bang This is short for abang 'elder brother,' and is the common way of addressing betjak drivers or other working men in Djakarta.

sadja The idea of sadja here is '_____ will be good enough.' It is usual to use sadja in telling someone to stop, and it makes the order friendlier and more idiomatic.

14a9b njang This is a colloquial form for jang. Here the maid uses njang because she is not an educated person. Persons of little education use colloquial forms in situations which require more formal speech.

14a12d	itu	The speaker uses the word itu because he cannot think of the right word.
14a13b	kamar dua	The normal word order is numeral followed by noun, e.g. dua kamar 'two rooms'; but in a colloquial style the numeral may follow the noun, e.g. kamar dua.
14a14b	djuga bisa	'Will do.'
14a16a-c		Mochtar does not say right away that he does prefer one or the other. It is more diplomatic to say that it doesn't matter first, and then express a preference, as the person who gave the choice in the first place may in fact be quite definite as to which choice he wants you to make. (In this case the landlady is quite willing to let Mochtar have the room which he prefers.)
14a16c	lah	Lah is added to djauh because the speaker is urging assent: 'The one which is far from the children, if you would.'
14b20	ja	This word is used to mark time before the speaker jumps into the subject.
14b22b	apa2 sadjalah	Lah here is a particle giving agreement: 'I agree to anything at all.'
14b23c	lebihlah	Lah here is used like in 14a16c above, asking for assent: 'You'll have to pay a little more, if you would.'

14b25c Kata orang 'they say' is pronounced as one word /katawrang/.

14b30 batjaq In a colloquial style some words (e.g. batja 'read') take an added q before a pause. These words otherwise do not end in a q.

14b32b lah Here lah is a particle asking for assent: 'We'd better look around, if you don't mind.'

14b33a lah Lah here is a particle giving assent: 'Let it be....'

ja Ja is used to keep from plunging directly into what the person is going to say.

14b33b sudahlah The landlady has had a change of heart and decides to accept Mochtar's terms.

14b35c tadiq The q in tadiq is appended in colloquial style before a pause. See the note to sentence 14b30.

14b36a berduaq See the note to sentences 14b30 and 14b35c. Berdua otherwise has no q. In colloquialspeech also the r of ber is dropped.

III. Pertjakapan: Mochtar dan Sumardi bertemu ditengah djalan

S: Hai, Mochtar, apa kabar nih?

M: Mardi, mau kemana malam2 begini!

S: Hanja djalan2 sadja, ndak ke-mana2. È, saja dengar kamu sudah pindah kerumah keluarga Tobing, apa benar?

M: Ja, betul, sudah satu bulan saja tinggal disana. Kenapa?

S: Ah, ndak apa2. Tapi merèka kan banjak anaknja tuh! Apa nggak terganggu kamu disitu, apa bisa beladjar?

M: Memang merèka banjak anaknja, tapi saja suka sama anak2. Anak2nja manis2 kok, dan kan saja punja kamar sendiri. Kalau saja mau beladjar, pintu kamar saja kuntji dari dalam, djadi merèka tidak bisa masuk.

S: Ó, bagus kalau begitu, ja! Éh, tahu, Tar, saja djuga mesti pindah nih, abis bulan ini. Saja nggak tahu mau pindah kemana, karena susah sekali tjari rumah djaman sekarang. Kalau dapat satu kamar sadja, saja djuga mau.

M: Bener kamu mesti pindah? Kalau mau, kamar jg didepan kamar saja kosong. Barangkali Ibu Tobing mau menjèwakan padamu. Tjoba saja tanja nanti. Tjuma ja, itu, anak2nja banjak. Djadi kamu harus tahan. Tapi sèwanja murah lho. Saja tidak banjak uang, djadi saja mau sadja.

S: Kalau begitu baiklah. Beri kabar saja, tjepat ja, apa kata Ibu Tobing. Sampai ketemu lagi, ja, Mochtar!

M: Mari. Selamat malam, Mardi!

Benar atau salah:

1. Sumardi menanja apakah Mochtar sakit.
2. Merèka bertemu didjalan pagi2.
3. Sumardi hanja djalan2 sadja. Dia tidak ke-mana2.
4. Jg punja rumah Mochtar, namanja Simandjuntak.
5. Mochtar mengatakan ia sudah setahun tinggal diaana.
6. Keluarga Tobing banjak anaknja, tapi Mochtar tidak terganggu beladjarnja.
7. Anak2 dirumah itu semua, anak Mochtar.

8. Kalau Mochtar mau beladjar, pintu dikuntjinja dari dalam.

9. Sumardi tidak mau pindah kerumah Tobing karena banjak anaknja.

10. Nanti Sumardi menanja pada ibunja apa ada kamar jg mau disèwakannja.

11. Kamar jg didepan kamar Mochtar, kosong. Barangkali Ibu Tobing mau menjèwakan kamar itu.

12. Sèwa kamar itu mahal sekali, djadi Mochtar tidak mau.

IV. Free conversation

A. Pretend that you are talking with your friend about taking a room in Djakarta. Your friend says that he knows of a good place where you can stay. You ask where this place is. He says that it is near everything. You ask if this place is quiet. He admits that there are many children in the family but assures you that they will not disturb you because the room that the lady rents out is on the ground floor. You ask how big the room is. Your friend says he knows it is very big. In fact, he says he would like to share it with you. He says he is not too happy with his present room (and he explains why this is -- the food is not very good), and he would like to move out. You say that this would be fine if the landlady is willing to add furniture to the room to make it adequate for two people. Your friend says that you can discuss that with the landlady later.

B. Pretend that you are at the house looking at the room. You ask about the room downstairs. The landlady says that the room downstairs is already taken, but there is another one upstairs that she is also renting out. You say that it doesn't matter. A room upstairs would be all right, too, but you ask if it is close to the children's room. She tells you it is not, and assures you that you won't be bothered by the children. Besides, she will lower the rent for you. You ask how much the rent is. She mentions a price, which you find rather steep. She says that two of you could stay in the room, and that way, the rent would be cheaper. The only extra charge would be for the extra food. You ask if she could add various pieces of furniture. She demurs, and finally says she will buy the furniture at the market, if you agree to pay a higher rent. You demur, saying you'd better look elsewhere. She finally agrees to let you have it at the price you are willing to pay.

Tata Bahasa

14.1 The prefix ter-

The prefix ter- is added to verb roots to form words meaning 'has had [verb] happen to it':

djual	'sell'	terdjual	'be sold out'
gantung	'hang'	tergantung	'hung'
tutup	'close'	tertutup	'closed'
tarik	'pull, attract'	tertarik	'attracted'
ganggu	'bother'	terganggu	'bothered'
sebut	'mention'	tersebut	'mentioned'

In the following sentences the word to which the word with ter- refers is underlined once:

a. Didinding kantor lurah tergantung sebuah gambaran. (11R8) 'On the wall of the village head's office a picture was hung.'

b. Semua makanan tertutup supaja tidak dapat dihinggapi lalat. (11R4) 'The food was all covered over so that flies wouldn't light on it.'

c. Banjaklah orang tertarik berbelandja. (11R4) 'A lot of people were attracted to shop there.'

d. Saja harap sadja tuan tidak akan terganggu olèh anak2 itu. (14a15c) 'I just hope you won't be bothered by the children.'

14.11 Special meanings of words with ter-

Some words containing ter- have meanings which differ in other ways from the root without ter-. E.g.: lambat 'slow,' terlambat 'late'; lalu 'pass by,' terlalu 'too much'; djadi 'become,' terdjadi 'happen'; kenal 'know, recognize,' terkenal 'famous'; djual 'sell,' terdjual 'sold out'; masuk 'enter,' termasuk 'be included'; etc.

a. Itu terlalu mahal dong. 'That's too expensive.'

b. Buku itu sudah terdjual habis. 'That book is already sold out.'

14.12 Words with a meaningless ter-

Some words have a ter- prefix which has no meaning. Two words of this type we have had up to now are tertawa 'laugh' (which means the same as ketawa 'laugh') and ter-bahak2 'laugh boisterously'.

a. Pelajannja tertawa ter-bahak2. (14R13) 'The bell-boy laughed boisterously.'

14.13 Ter- added to verbs with -kan or -i

If ter- of 14.11 is added to verbs with -kan or -i, the -kan or -i is dropped in most cases. (There are isolated exceptions.)

[ter- added to verbs with -kan]

kedjutkan	'surprise somebody'	terkedjut	'be surprised'
katakan	'say'	terkata	'spoken'
tjeritakan	'tell'	tertjerita	'told'

a. Tiba2 dia terkedjut karena hampir sadja diindjaknja pedagang kaja itu. 'Suddenly he was startled because he nearly stepped on that rich merchant.'

b. Tidak terkata bagaimana terkedjutnja waktu dilihatnja pedagang itu tidur diatas permadani. '(I) cannot tell you (lit. it cannot be said) how surprised he was when he saw the trader asleep on the rug.'

[ter- added to verbs with -i] tjintai	'love'	tertjinta	'beloved'

hormati	'show respect, reverence for'	terhormat	'respected'

Tuan jth (jang terhormat): 'Dear Sir (lit. Respected Sir):'

Do exercise 14Bff.

14.14 Merasa and terasa 'feel'

Merasa 'feel' is used in the predicate when the subject is a person. In other words when it is a person who feels something or some way, the person is the subject and merasa is part of the predicate. The subject is underlined once in the following examples:

Rupanja pedagangnja merasa kurang tenang kalau tidur diatas tempat tidur. 'Apparently, the trader felt uneasy sleeping on a bed.'

Terasa 'feel' is used in the predicate when the subject is the thing felt:

Makin lama makin terasa olèhnja panas matahari.

'The longer (he walked) the hotter the sun felt.'

Kaki saja terasa sakit. 'My feet hurt (lit. feel painful).'

Do exercise 14C.

14.2 Ber- forming verbs from nouns and from numbers

In Lesson 10 we studied verbs with ber- and how they are used (10.1ff). Here we will study the use of the prefix ber- to form verbs from nouns or numbers. These uses of ber- are mostly confined to formal style speech. In colloquial style the same idea is expressed in another way if possible.

14.21 Ber- added to nouns referring to a sound to form a verb meaning 'make the sound of [noun]'

teriak	'shout'	berteriak	'to shout'
bunji	'sound'	berbunji	'to make a sound'
bahasa	'language'	berbahasa	'speak a language'

Orang Amérika itu ber-teriak2 memanggil pelajan.

'The American shouted and shouted, calling for the steward.'

14.22 Ber- added to nouns referring to a business to form a verb meaning 'engage in [noun] as an occupation.'

usaha	'enterprise'	berusaha	'engage in an enterprise' dagang	'trade'	berdagang	'be a trader in'

kebun karèt	'rubber plantation'	berkebun	'be a farmer'
tukang	'artisan'	bertukang	'be an artisan'

Dia datang ke Djakarta untuk berdagang. 'He came to Djakarta to engage in trade.

14.23 Ber- added to nouns to form a verb meaning 'have the [noun]' asal	'origin'	berasal	'have as one's origin, come from originally'

kaki	'feet'	berkaki	'have feet'
hasil	'results obtained'	berhasil	'obtain results, be successful in'
bentuk	'shape'	berbentuk	'have the shape of'
rambut	'hair'	berambut	'have hair'

Bak hotèl itu berbentuk empat persegi. 'The bath tub in that hotel was square-shaped.'

Mèdja itu berkaki tiga. 'That table has three legs.'

In colloquial language nouns with -nja are used instead of verbs of this type with ber-:

Bak hotèl itu bentuknja empat persegi. 'The bathtub in that hotel was square-shaped.'

Mèdja itu kakinja tiga. 'That table has three legs.'

Do 14D1 for this type of verbs with ber-.

14.24 Ber- added to nouns referring to relationships to form verbs meaning 'be in the relationship of [noun] with each other'

kawan	'friend'	berkawan	'be friends'
teman	'friend'	berteman	'be friends'
saudara	'brother or sister'	bersaudara	'be brothers and sisters tunangan	'fiancee'	bertunangan	'be engaged to each other'

Pedagang dan orang Amérika itu terus berkawan.

'The trader and the American became friends right away.'

14.25 Ber- added to numbers to form verbs meaning 'be [so-and-so many]'

dua	'two'	berdua	'be two of them'
tiga	'three'	bertiga	'be three of them'

Bukan kami berdua, hanja saja sadja. (14b36)

'Not both of us -- just me.'

Do exercises 14Dff.

14.3 Dengan plus adjective (plus -nja) meaning 'do in an [adjective] way'

This usage is more frequently used in writing or in a fancy style of speaking than in a colloquial style:

Tolong bungkuskan barang ini dengan baik.

'Please wrap these things up carefully.'

If the action is performed by the third person (he, she, it or a person or thing), the adjective may optionally have a suffix -nja:

Tiba2 air panas keluar dengan derasnja. (14R6) 'Suddenly the hot water came out rapidly.'

Dilihatnja pedagang itu sedang tidur dengan njenjaknja. (14R5) 'He saw the trader sound asleep.'

Dengan puasnja mereka itu pulang ketempat asalnja masing2. (14R11) 'They returned to their own countries contentedly.'

14.4 Word study

14.41 Makin 'increasingly, the more'

Kota itu makin bertambah. 'That city is getting increasingly bigger.'

Makin [adjective] or [verb], makin [adjective] or [verb] means 'the more [adjective] or [verb], the more [adjective] or [verb].'

Makin lama, makin terasa olèhnja panas matahari. 'The longer (he walked), the more he felt the heat of the sun.'

Do exercise 14F.

14.42 Adalah

Adalah 'is, are' is used only in written language. Adalah is used in sentences with a subject followed by a nominal predicate.* Adalah is placed following the subject and preceding the predicate. The predicate is underlined twice in the following examples:

*If the predicate consists of an adjective, adalah is not used:

Djakarta banjak sekali penduduknja. (14A1) 'Djakarta has many inhabitants.' [Adalah could not be inserted into this sentence.]

Djakarta adalah ibukota Republik Indónésia. (14R1)

'Djakarta is the capital of the Republic of Indonesia.'

Do Exercise 14G.

14.43 Bukan main plus adjective plus -nja.

Bukan main is used as the predicate of a sentence containing a subject consisting of an adjective plus a suffix -nja. Such sentences mean, 'How [adjective] it is!':

Wah, bukan main beratnja! 'My, how heavy it is!'

The sentence may contain a topic or a noun following the adjective plus -nja. The topic or the noun is the thing to which the adjective refers. The topic is underlined three times.

Wah barang2 ini, bukan main beratnja. 'My, how heavy these things are!'

Bukan main anèhnja kamar ini! (14R3) 'My! How strange this room is!'

Do Exercise 14H.

14.44 Olèh

Olèh means 'by (agent), by means of.' It is optionally placed immediately preceding the agent which follows a passive verb containing a prefix di-. (Olèh may also be omitted without changing the meaning):*

*If the agent is placed far from the passive verb with di- olèh is obligatorily placed before the agent:

Saja sudah beberapa kali diberi uang olèh orang itu.

'I have been given money several times by that man.'

[Olèh 'by' could not be omitted here.]

Lantainja seluruhnja ditutupi olèh permadani (or ditutupi permadani). (14R3) 'The entire floor was covered with (lit. by) a rug.'

Dilihat olèh pelajan (or dilihat pelajan) pedagang itu tidur dengan njenjaknja diatas permadani. 'The waiter saw (lit. was seen by the waiter) the merchant sound asleep on the rug.'

Olèh also is used to precede the agent of verbs with the prefix ter-:

Saja harap sadja tuan tidak akan terganggu olèh anak2 itu. (14a15c) 'I only hope you won't be disturbed by the children.'

Olèh dia 'by him' can also be said olèhnja. (See 16.6 for a complete discussion of this topic.)

Makin lama makin terasa olèhnja panas matahari. (14R7). 'The longer (he walked) the more he felt (lit. was felt by him) the heat of the sun.'

Ulasan

15a3b	baru pergi	'Not home at the moment.' Baru here is used in the sense of 'at the present time.' This is colloquial speech. The formal use would be sedang. Pergi here is used in the sense of 'go out.'
15a5a	kalau	Kalau here is used to introduce the topic of the sentence, meaning 'as for ...' 'But as for Mrs. Tobing's mother, she is here.' In this case kalau does not mean 'if.'
15a9b	saja ini	Saja ini is more deferential than saja alone.
15a11a	kami ini	Kami ini is more deferential than kami. (See sentence 9b.)
	kawannja Omas	This is colloquial for kawan Omas. Nja meaning 'of' (i.e., used after a noun preceding another to signify possessor) is not used in formal speech, but is common in colloquial.
	Batara Tóbing	Omas' husband.
15a16c	tahu	Tahu (/tauq/) is used in colloquial speech to mean 'I don't know.' (The formal form is entah.)

15a18c nak — An older person addresses a much younger person as nak or anak. (See 1.2 in Lesson 1.) A younger person addresses an older person (not necessarily much older) as ibu /buq/ or bapak /paq/. This is a friendly, yet respectful, way of address and is the best to use in social situations. (It is all right to use these forms for business situations as well, though in business situations foreigners are most frequently addressed as tuan, njonja, or nona. (Cf. ibu in sentence 9.)

15a19 — It is considered polite not to ask for anything special. In that way one avoids putting the host in an embarrassing position if he does not have what the guest asks for.

15b20b sirop — Sirop (also called sterop) is made of syrup flavoring and water.

15b26a — This means literally, 'One like that is not sweet.' Kaja gitu is colloquial for seperti begitu. It is customary to deny the compliment when someone compliments you on something.

15b28 kasi tahu — Kasi plus some verbs means 'cause someone or something to do [verb]': kasi tahu 'let someone know,' kasi lihat 'show (let someone see),' kasi masuk 'put inside,' etc.

15b32b anak sendiri — 'How about you, yourself?' The lady is addressing John as anak.

15b37a and b — See the note to sentence 18a. Here John addresses the lady ibu /buq/ for short.

15b41b itu — Here the lady uses itu as a filler word when she cannot think of the right word.

15b42 ini — Here ini means 'in this case.' Note that the English word 'you' is not translated into Indonesian in most cases, but terms of address which we would translate by 'sir, ma'am, boy,' etc. are much more frequently used than in English.

15c43a	pak	The lady addresses her husband as pak, just as older American women call their husbands Dad.
15c43b	tadi	This is tadi following a noun meaning [something] was the [noun] -- see 11.4.
15c45b	si	Si is used before names of persons with whom both the speaker and hearer are intimate. See sentence 62 bapak si Eli and sentence 66a si Daulat. Si is also used in referring to a person of lower social status than the speaker and hearer.
15c46b	kabarnja dia	This is a colloquial way of saying 'kabarnja.'
15c48	permisi dulu	This is the way to say good-bye in a formal situation.
15c49a		It is customary to urge the visitor to stay. Since this urging is usually stronger than in the States, it will take a little experience to know when the host really means it. Also remember that an Indonesian visitor will expect his host to make a strong effort to keep him.

15c51 bi /biq/ This is short for bibi 'aunt' which is the way to address an older maidservant.

15c52ff. Note how the style changes to a more intimate colloquial style. Omas and John are old friends.

15c57b tuan besarnja The use of nja in the sense of 'the' is colloquial. This, in an intimate way, refers to Omas' husband.

15d62 Èli Èli is the name of Omas' child. People refer to someone's husband or wife as the father or mother of [so-and-so] when they are not present. For example, in asking a lady whose son is called Amat if her husband is at home, one might ask, Bapaknja si Amat ada? 'Is your husband (lit. Amat's father) home?'

15d69 This can be literally translated, 'No. As for them, their marriage, (it was) over there, abroad.'

15d73b djalan Here djalan is used in the sense of 'go away.' (Cf. pergi used in the meaning 'go out' in 3b.)

15d74a gitu This is colloquial for begitu. (Cf. sentence 26a.)

15d75 apa This is the question particle, but notice that in colloquial speech it may be put at the end of a sentence. It means 'isn't it?'

III. Pertjakapan: Djon datang ke Indónésia dan bertamu kerumah Omas, temannja dulu di Amérika

J: Hai Omas, kamu masih ingat sama saja?

O: Hai Djon! Kapan datang? Aduh, saja nggak ngira kamu datang kesini!

J: Saja sudah seminggu disini. Kamu kan tahu, saja dari dulu ingin sekali datang ke Indónésia ini, tapi baru sekarang saja dibòlèhkan masuk.

O: Aduh, saja senang sekali kamu datang. Èh Djon, saja dengar kamu sudah kawin, apa betul? Sama siapa, mana isterimu, kenapa tidak dibawa kesini?

J: Aduh, banjaknja pertanjaannja! Biarlah saja djawab satu2, ja? Betul saja sudah kawin. Sama si Mary, kamu pernah ketemu dia dulu waktu di Cornèl. Dia sekarang ada dihotèl, bèsok malam saja bawa kesini.

O: Saja ingin sekali ketemu dengan dia. Ó ja, Djon, kamu ingat si Daulat? Dia sekarang di Mèdan, sudah punja anak dua merèka.

J: Ó, tentu saja ingat. Kami djuga akan pergi ke Mèdan. Si Daulat mengundang saja kesana dan kami akan pergi berburu di Tapanuli.

O: Berburu? Bagaimana dengan Mary, apa dia ikut djuga berburu?

J: Ó, tentu sadja dia ikut. Dia kan senang sekali berburu.

Omas, bapak si Èli mana, belum pulang dari kantor?

IV. Free Conversation

A. Pretend you are visiting a friend in Jakarta. An elderly lady meets you at the door and you ask her if this is the Tobings' house. She says, yes it is, and asks what she can do for you. You inquire if the Tobings are home; she says, not yet, but Mrs. Tobing will be home in five minutes. Would you like to wait? You say you would like to wait. So the lady invites you in and tells you that she is Omas' mother. You tell her your name, where you're from, and you add that you knew Omas when she was in Cornell. The lady exclaims, saying yes, now she remembers, Omas used to write about her friends in Cornell and she mentioned you several times.

You ask how Omas is now, how long she has been married, where they got married, and how many children they have now. She answers all your questions and then asks if you have children yourself. You tell her you don't have any yet. She guesses that you're newly married and asks where your wife is. You tell her she's at the hotel. She asks where she's from, and as you're telling her, you hear footsteps, and she says that that must be Omas now.

B. Omas comes in and upon seeing you she greets you excitedly. She says she never thought she would see you here. You tell her you've been in the country for three months now, but it's only now that you've had a chance to visit Jakarta. You tell her that you have just gotten married, and Omas asks where your wife is. You explain she had wanted to come with you but she was very tired so she couldn't come. Omas says you should bring her here next time, for they all would like to meet her. Omas asks where your wife is from. You say she is from Sumatra. You don't know if Omas still remembers her. She visited Cornell once while Omas was there. Omas asks what her name is, and when you tell her, she says of course she remembers her. They used to go shopping together. She stayed with a friend of Omas', and the three of them went shopping several times during her stay in Ithaca. You add the information that she was studying in Yale, but after Omas came home to Indonesia she started working in Cornell.

You say it's getting late so you have to go, but Omas asks why you should be in such a rush. She asks you if you could stay for supper. You decline, saying it would be too much trouble for the family. Omas says no, they'll eat whatever is there, and it would be no trouble so long as you don't ask for the very things they don't have. You say you'd love to stay, but your wife will be waiting for you; so you have to go. You promise you'll eat there some other time, and it would probably be better if your wife were with you. Omas agrees and says after you've come such a long way you should want to eat supper with them. Also you have to meet her husband. You agree emphatically.

15VC. Intonation exercises

15VC1. Review of the 243 intonation pattern. In sentences with a 243 intonation pattern, the word in the sentence which receives sentence stress has a rise on the penult (second to last syllable), and on the rest of the words in the phrase there is a slight drop to a pitch level higher than the pitch on the syllables which precede the rise:

Ada apa, tuan?

15VC1A. 243 pattern in questions. Read the following sentences with the 243 pattern.

1. Ada apa, tuan?
2. Dimana dulu kenal sama Omas?
3. Bagaimana merèka sekarang?
4. Bagaimana anaknja Omas?
5. Sudah berapa sekarang?
6. Siapa namanja ini?
7. Sudah berapa anaknja?
8. Apa kabarnja dia?
9. Kenapa tjepat2?
10. Siapa itu temannja itu? Namanja siapa?

15VC1B. 243 pattern in statements

1. Ini isteri saja.
2. Kami ini dari Amérika.
3. Ini jg lahir di Amérika dulu.
4. Merèka baru kembali setahun jg lalu.
5. Kaja sekali ini.
6. Ja itu terserah kalau dapat kartjis.
7. Ja usahakan dong.
8. A, dia kan senang sekali, kalau tahu kalian disini.

15VC2. The 4231 intonation. In questions a common intonation pattern is one in which there is a fall on the penult of the word which has sentence stress and then a rise and a fall on the final syllable of the word with sentence stress. This intonation pattern is symbolized 4231:

Belum pulang?

15VC2A. Read the following questions with the 4231 pattern.

1. Dia ada dirumah?
2. Ó, dia keluar djuga?
3. Baru datang?
4. Kan tadi patpuluh?
5. Ada tamu?
6. Belum pulang?
7. Di Mèdan?
8. Mau tjoba?
9. Tidak usah dimasak?
10. Tuan mau beli kelambu?

15VC2B. Questions with a 4231 pattern preceded by phrase with a 324 pattern.

1. Anak ibu, berapa?
2. Bèsok, sudah mau ke Mèdan?
3. Tuan Ihromi, ada dirumah?

4. Njonja, keluar djuga?

5. Apa ndak bisa, lebih murah?

6. Apa harga kelambu itu, tetap?

15VC2C. Questions with a 4231 intonation when the stressed word is not final. When the stressed word in a question does not come at the end of the question, the last syllable of the word with sentence stress is not pronounced with a drop. The phrase which follows the stressed word also has a 4231 intonation:

Berapa sih, ini?

1. Masih ada ès kan?

2. Siapa namanja tadi?

3. Apa bolèh kami lihat dulu?

4. Berapa sih ini?

5. Apa djauh dari sini?

Tata Bahasa

15.1 The prefix se-

The basic meaning of the prefix se- is 'one.' It is used instead of satu 'one' before counters and other words of measurement: e.g. sepuluh 'ten,' sebulan 'a month,' seorang 'a person,' setengah 'a half,' sekali 'at one time,' etc.

The prefix se- is also added to nouns to form a verb meaning 'be of the same [noun]': sesekolah 'be together in school,' sekelas 'be in the same class,' serumah 'stay in the same house,' sekota 'come from the same city' etc. Se- in this usage can also be substituted for by satu.

Kami dulu tinggal serumah (or satu rumah) di Medan.

'We stayed together in the same house in Medan formerly.'

Se-[noun] (or satu [noun]) plus dengan or sama means 'to be of the same [noun] with':

Nggak enak tinggal sekamar (or satu kamar) dengan dia.

'It is no fun to stay in the same room with him.'

Tapi sampaikan sadja salam dari teman satu sekolah dulu. (15d72d) 'But just give him regards from an old schoolmate (of his).'

The prefix se- is also added to adjectives to form words meaning 'as [adjective] as':

Dia sebesar saja. 'He is as big as I am.'

Saja tidak bisa lari setjepat Daud.

'I cannot run as fast as Daud.'

Kami akan datang kembali lagi: setjepat mungkin.

'We'll come back again, as fast as we can.'

15.11 Se- forming words meaning 'each and every, all'

kitar	(no meaning by itself)	sekitar	'around, all around' luruh	(no meaning by itself)	seluruh	'all, all through'
lama	'long'	selama	'for the entire length of time of'
tiap	'each'	setiap	'each and every'
kalian	'you (plural)'	sekalian	'all, together'
mua	(no meaning by itself)	semua	'all'
gala	(no meaning by itself)	segala	'all'
pandjang	'long'	sepandjang	'through the length of'
tahu	'know'	setahu	'as much as (somebody) knows'

Lantainja seluruhnja ditutupi oleh permadani. (14R3) 'The floor was covered all over with a rug.'

Pelajannja tidak dapat melihat dengan djelas apa2 jg ada disekitar tempat tidur. (14R4) 'The bellboy could not see clearly everything that was around (lit. in the place all around) the bed.'

Uangnja setiap waktu dapat diambil. 'The money can be taken out at any time.'

Words containing the prefix se- are optionally followed by the suffix -nja when following the word they modify:

Maafkan sadja, ini masih kotor semuanja. 'Please excuse (me) because all of this is still dirty.'

15.12 Se- forming words meaning 'at the time of'

The prefix se- in this meaning is frequently used only with a few words:

sudah, telah	'by now'	sesudah, setelah	'after (something happened)'
belum	'not yet'	sebelum	'before something happened'
sampai, tiba	'arrive'	sesampai, setiba	'upon arriving'
habis	'finish'	sehabis	'upon finishing'

Sesampainja disana, dipesannja empat ès petodjo sekali. 'Upon arriving (there), he ordered four helpings of Petodjo Ice at one time.'

Sehabis kerdja, datang kerumah, ja? 'After (you) finish work, come to the house, will you?'

15.13 Se- plus -nja in idioms

Se- and -nja are added to certain common words to form expressions which modify a sentence:

mesti, harus	'must'	seharusnja	'as it should be'
betul, benar	'true'	sebenarnja	'actually'
baik	'good'	sebaiknja	'the best thing to do is'

Semestinja kita pergi sekaranglah.

'We should be going now.'

Sebaiknja kita pergi sekaranglah.

'The best thing would be to go now.'

Sebetulnja saja tidak mau.

'Actually, I do not want to.'

Seadanja means 'whatever way it is' (implied: whatever way it is is OK). Sedjadinja means 'whatever way it turns out' (implied: whatever way it turns out is OK).

Makan dulu disini, seadanja. (15d76d) 'Just eat here, pot luck.'

Ndak apa2. Bawalah kué itu, sedjadinja. 'Never mind. Just bring the cake, whatever way it turns out.'

15.14 Se- followed by a doubled (repeated) adjective followed by -nja 'as [adjective] as possible' or 'at the [adjective]-est'

Tolong bungkus barang2 ini se-baik2nja. 'Please wrap these things up as well as possible.'

Kalau mau beli dipasar, tawar se-murah2nja sebelum membeli. 'If you buy in the market, bargain (things) as low as you can, before buying.'

Se-banjak2nja jg datang, limapuluh orang. 'At the most, fifty people are coming.'

15.15 Se-malam2 (or -hari2)an meaning 'the whole night (day) through'

Se-malam2an Mardi tak dapat tidur. (11R10) 'All night through, Mardi couldn't sleep.'

Do Exercises 15A ff.

15.2 Doubling

Repetition of a word is called DOUBLING. Doubling is represented in writing by placing a figure '2' after the word doubled or by writing the word twice.

15.21 Doubled nouns

Doubled nouns mean 'all the different kinds of [noun]s':

Kehidupan di-daèrah2 dan di-tempat2 pedalaman mèmang berlainan dengan di-kota2 besar. 'The life in the various areas and places in the interior is quite different from (that) in the (various) big cities.'

Buku2 ini semua, taruhnjadiatas mèdja. 'These (various) books are to be put on top of the table.'

15.22 Doubled verbs

Doubled verbs mean (1) 'do [verb] around (without any purpose)' or (2) 'keep doing [verb].' Which of these two meanings is present depends on the context:

djalan	'walk'	djalan2	'take a walk (walk around)'
lihat	'look'	lihat2	'look around'

Dia datang ke Djakarta untuk berdagang dan sekalian me-lihat2 kota. (14R2) 'He came to Djakarta to trade and at the same time to look around (at the sights in) the city.'

Ia lalu ber-teriak2 memanggil pelajan. (14R13) 'Then he shouted and shouted, calling the bellboy.'

15.221 Negated doubled verbs

A doubled verb negated means 'hasn't done [verb] though it was expected that [verb] would be done.'

Sudah lama tjari rumah ke-mana2, tapi sekarang belum djuga dapat2. '(I) have been looking all over for a house for a long time, but I still haven't found one.'

Belum pergi2 ni? 'You still haven't gone?'

Sudah dua djam saja suruh dia tjari ès, belum djuga pulang2. 'I told him to look for ice two hours ago (but) he still hasn't come home.'

15.23 Doubled adjectives

Adjectives are doubled to form words which have two meanings, depending on the context: (1) doubling of adjectives forms verbs which mean 'do in an [adjective] manner':

Tolong bungkuskan barang2 ini baik2. 'Please wrap up these things well.'

or (2) doubling of adjectives forms new adjectives which are used to describe various things and have the meaning '[adjective] applies to all the different things':

Djangan beli barang2 jg mahal2. 'Don't buy expensive things (lit. different things which are all expensive).'

15.24 Doubling of roots which do not occur singly or which have an entirely different meaning when used singly laki	'husband'	laki2	'man'

mata	'eye'	mata2	'spy'
marah	'angry'	marah2	'be in a complaining mood'
laba	'profit'	laba2	'spider'
balai	'hall'	balai2	'wooden couch'

15.3 Formation of nouns by addition of affixes to roots or bases*

15.31 Suffix -an added to bases which are verbs

The suffix -an is added to verb bases to form nouns which mean: 'the thing which will (has, have) result(ed) from the action of the verb.'

djual	'sell'	djualan	'goods for sale'
bagi	'divide'	bagian	'part, division'
gambarkan	'portray'	gambaran	'picture'

*A BASE is a word to which affixes are added to form a new word. A ROOT is a base which does not contain any affixes. E.g., kata 'speak' is a root (and also a base) from which katakan 'say' is formed by adding -kan. Katakan is a base from which terkatakan 'spoken' is formed by adding ter-.

In this case -an is added to a verb base which contains -kan and -kan is dropped.

karang	'compose'	karangan	'composition'
makan	'eat'	makanan	'food'
pakai	'wear'	pakaian	'clothing'
simpan	'save'	simpanan	'savings'
tanam	'plant'	tanaman	'plant (that someone planted)'
kumpulkan	'gather together'	kumpulan	'collection'

Semua makanan tertutup supaja tidak dapat dihinggapi lalat. (11B4) 'All the food was covered over so flies couldn't light on it.'

Isteri Mardi sudah didapur pula, menjediakan djualan untuk bèsok harinja. 'Mardi's wife was back in the kitchen, preparing the goods to be sold the following day.'

Setiap bulan simpanannja bertambah. 'Every month his savings increased.'

15.311 Per-an or peN--an

Some verb bases form nouns meaning 'the thing which will (have, has) result(ed) from the action of the verb' by adding a prefix per- or peN- and simultaneously a suffix -an (represented per--an or peN--an).

[peN--an]:

pandang	'regard'	pemandangan	'view'
terangkan	'clarify'	penerangan	'information'
alami	'nav- an experience'	pengalaman	'experience'

[per--an]:

perhatikan	'pay attention to'	perhatian	'attention'
kerdja	'work'	pekerdjaan	'work (done)'
tolong	'help'	pertolongan	'help rendered'

Karena pandai bertukang, Mardi tidak membutuhkan pertolongan. (11R1) 'Because he knows how to do carpentry, Mardi does not need any help.'

Pegawai pos memberikan penerangan jg lengkap. (11R11) 'The clerk in the post office gave complete information.'

15.32 Ke--an

Ke--an is added to bases to form nouns with a meaning 'collection of [root].'

biasa	'accustomed'	kebiasaan	'customs'
hidup	'life'	kehidupan	'people's lives'
perlu	'necessary'	keperluan	'necessities'

Kehidupan dan kebiasaan2 di-daerah2 dan di-tempat2 pedalaman memang berlainan dengan di-kota2 besar. 'The ways of life and the customs in the areas and places in the interior are really different from (those) of the big cities.'

Do Exercise 15C1.

15.33 Suffix -nja

The suffix -nja is added to verbs to form nouns meaning 'the action of doing [the verb].'

Djam berapa berangkatnja. 'What time does it leave? (Lit. The action of leaving is at what time?)'

Djangan tjepat2 djalannja dong. 'Don't go so fast! (Lit. Don't let it be fast, the action of going.)'

This suffix -nja is freely added to any verb. It may even be added to verbs which already have an affix:

Bis ada djuga, tapi mesti lama nunggunja. (13a6a) 'There are buses, but you have to wait long for them (lit. the waiting must be long).' [In this case -nja is added to nunggu 'wait' which itself consists of a root tunggu plus the affix N-.]

Mèmang sudah begitu warnanja waktu dikasinja. 'That is the way the color was when (I) gave it to you (lit. at the time of its being given).' [In this case -nja is added to dikasi 'was given' which itself consists of a root kasi 'give' and a prefix di-.]

15.331 -nja added to adjectives

The suffix -nja is added to adjectives to form nouns meaning 'the state of being [adjective].'

Karena kajanja dia mampu tinggal di Hotèl Indónésia, hotèl jg paling mèwah di Djakarta. 'On account of his wealth (lit. being rich), he could afford to stay in the Hotel Indonesia, the most luxurious hotel in Djakarta.'

Saking bingungnja ia tidak lekas2 keluar dari bak tempat mandi. (14R6) 'On account of his confusion (lit. being confused) he didn't get out of the tub he was bathing in right away.'

Nouns formed by adding -nja to adjectives are common after bagaimana 'how': bagaimana [adjective]-nja 'How [adjective] it is! (is it?)'

Bagaimanapun djuga tjantiknja wanita itu, tidak seorangpun jg mau mengawininja. 'No matter how beautiful the girl was, there still was no one who wanted to marry her.'

Tidak terkatakan lagi bagaimana ènaknja rendang itu. '(I) cannot tell you how delicious that rendang was!'

Nouns formed by adding -nja to adjectives are often used as subjects in sentences with bukan main (how very!) as the predicate [14.43]:

Bukan main hèrannja pelajan itu, waktu dilihatnja pedagang itu tidur diatas permadani. 'How surprised the bellboy was when he saw the merchant asleep on the rug.'

10. Tjuma masak sedikit sadja?	j. Ó dia kemanakannja suami saja.

Ulasan

16a3	perlu	Note the use of perlu 'necessity' in colloquial speech for keperluan.
	perginja	'Her going out.' Perginja is from the word pergi meaning 'go out' to which a -nja suffix has been added to form noun (5.5).
16a4	ja	The ja is put here as a way of asking to be excused for not knowing.
16a7	anu	Anu is used as a filler word when the speaker cannot think of the right word or when the speaker does not wish to plunge directly into what he's going to say without preliminaries.
	èsnja	Nja here means 'the one that there is'; 'I would like to borrow some of the ice that there is.'
16a8a	tu	'That is there in the house.' (In this usage tu does not differ from -nja of èsnja in sentence 7.)
8b	tu	This is the same tu as in 8a.
16a10	tu	Here tu is in its use as a filler word when the speaker cannot think of the right word.
16a13	djuga bisa	'(It) would be all right.'

16a14a	biar [predicate] sadja	This is an idiom meaning 'Let [predicate] be the one to do it.' Here biar saja sadja 'Let me be the one to ...'
16a15	ini	This is ini meaning 'now.'
16a16c	kursinja	'The chairs that there are.' The use of nja here is like in sentence 7 above.
16b20	hari ulang tahunnja si Ton	'Ton's birthday.' The use of nja in the meaning 'of' is colloquial (see 5.42). The use of si with a name indicates that the person named is intimate or of lower status than both the speaker and the hearer.
16b22	-nja	-Nja here means 'of.' (See the comment to sentence 20 above.)
16b24b	kenalan	This is short for berkenalan 'be acquainted with.'
	lah	The speaker says rajakanlah 'let's celebrate' because she is inviting the hearer to join in.
16b25b	belon	This is a colloquial form of belum.
	belon saja siapin	Note that although the speaker is using the colloquial forms belon and siapin, he is still following the rule that the agent and the verb are not separated when the verb is passive, i.e. he did not say 'saja belon siapin.'

16b 26 djuga This is djuga meaning 'even if [such-and such] happens.'

16b 27b It is considered good manners in Indonesia to offer to help out when invited.

16b 28b ja Here ja is used as a hesitation. The speaker does not want to ask for help right out, and so he uses ja as a filler word to make the request more modest.

III. Pertjakapan:

Tuti: Hai Iwan, kamu kok sudah lama nggak kelihatan!

Iwan: È, Tuti, mau kemana? Kamu djuga sudah lama nggak kelihatan! Saja mèmang sering banjak kerdjaan dirumah.

Tuti: Aduh, radjin betul, ja! È, kamu kok nggak datang kepèsta si Tono tadi malam?

IV. Free Conversation

A. Pretend that you are in need of some ice cubes for a party. You go to your neighbor's house and ask for his wife, but she is not at home. Your neighbor asks you what it is you want, and after some hesitation you ask if you could borrow some ice cubes. He says that they don't have any ice cubes because their icebox (lemari es) is broken. You say that it is all right. You can do without ice cubes because you were planning to have a small birthday party for your husband, and it was just going to be among friends. Your neighbor apologizes and asks if there is anything else you need. You admit that you could use some more chairs. Your neighbor says that he will have his servant bring them over. He asks how many you need. You say that five or six will do, but you can have your gardener come and get them. Then you invite your neighbor to drop in to meet your husband's friends. Your neighbor says he would have to be late. You say it's all right to be late, so long as he does come.

B. You and your friends are discussing a party which you are going to give for your nephew. Your friend calls the maid and tells her to go buy some 'Petodjo' ice. You tell him not to bother because you have lots of ice, but if he could go to the neighbor's to borrow some chairs, you would be happy. Your friend asks if it is going to be on a large scale. You say, oh no, just a small party.

He asks you if he could help you cook. You say actually there is not much work, but if he would like to, he could help. Your friend asks you what the party is for, anyway. You say it is for your nephew. You're going to celebrate his birthday. Your friend says that he'll go next door to borrow the chairs. You remind him also to invite the neighbors to stop in.

VC. Intonation Exercise. A type of intonation pattern used frequently in statements ia a pattern symbolized 324. With the 324 pattern, there is a drop in pitch on the penult (the second to last syllable) of the word which receives sentence stress and a rise on the final syllable of the same word. The pitch of the final syllable is higher than the pitch of the syllable which precedes the drop. In the following example the word with sentence stress is underlined:

Ndak ada apaapa.

VC1. Read the following sentences with a 324 pattern of intonation:

1. Terima kasih banjak.
2. Permisi dulu.
3. Nggak usahlah.
4. Nanti kami antarkan.
5. Sampai nanti.
6. Ada perlu sedikit.
7. Keluarin èsnja.
8. Biarin adja dèh.

The 324 pattern is frequently used in phrases of the sentence (portions of the sentence) which do not contain the word which has sentence stress. In such phrases the drop and rise is on the last word of the phrase. For example in the following sentence the first phrase set off by a comma has a 324 pattern as does the phrase with the sentence stress:

Barangkali, kepasar.

In the following example the phrase following the phrase with sentence stress has the 324 pattern (as does the phrase with sentence stress:

Biar saja sadja, nanti.

VC2. Read the following sentences with a 324 intonation on each phrase (each phrase is set off by a comma):

1. Sebab dirumah, tjuma sedikit.
2. Biar kami adja, nanti.
3. Sebetulnja, saja ingin djuga, pindjam kursinja.
4. Sebab dirumah, tjuma sedikit.
5. Tamunja, agak banjak djuga.
6. Ini, kursi banjak, disini.
7. Nanti, saja suruh kebon, antarin.
8. Biar kami adja, nanti, jg ambil.
9. Masih ada, kerdjaan, jg belon saja siapin.
10. Nanti, barangkali, suami saja datang, mengambil kursikursinja.

15. Pengadilan dimulai dan isteri hakim itu mulai mendjatuhkan satu persatu uang ringgitannja pada piring pèrak.

The people who wished to hear the decision of the judge entered the courtroom one at a time.

16. Saudagar itu berdiri hendak mengambil keseribu uang2 ringgit itu.

What did the merchant get up for?

Tata Bahasa

16.1 More about the predicate

Some sentences contain words or phrases which have special emphasis. Such emphasized words or phrases are always put into the predicate construction (given sentence stress). For example, in the following English sentence 'I' is emphasized: '(Don't do it.) I'll take care of it.' Accordingly, in the Indonesian sentence which corresponds to this sentence, the word which corresponds to 'I' is made the predicate. The predicate is underlined twice, and the subject once.

(Sudahlah.) Nanti saja sadja jg mengurusnja.

In English the emphasized word need not be made the predicate, but in Indonesian it is normal to do so. Therefore, the English speaking student must practice putting the emphasized word into the predicate construction. Here are some more examples:

Bukan kami berdua jg mau sewa kamar ini. Hanja saja sadja. 'The two of us aren't going to rent this room. Just me.'

Biar kami adja nanti jg mengambil. (16a19a) 'Let us get it.'

Bukan rumah jg ditjarinja, hanja kamar sadja. 'He isn't looking for a house. Just a room.'

Do Exercise 16Aff.

16.2 Kalau, waktu and kapan

Kalau means 'if.' Kalau also translates English 'when' in statements referring to future time or to statements which are generally true at all times:

Nanti kalau sudah selesai kerdjaan, saja mampir.

'When my work is done, I'll stop in.'

Kalau musim hudjan disini, susah melalui djalan ini.

'In the rainy season (lit. when it is the rainy season) it is difficult to go over this road.'

Waktu translates 'when' in statements referring to past time.

Waktu saja masih ketjil, semua2nja masih murah.

'When I was small everything was cheap.'

Kapan is an interrogative and translates English 'when' in direct or indirect questions:

Kapan musim hudjan disini? Dan musim kemarau, kapan? 'When is it the rainy season here, and when is it the dry season?'

Dia tidak bilang kapan dia mau pindah. 'He did not say when he was going to move.'

In written language or in formal speech djika is used for kalau; ketika is used for waktu.

Djika musim hudjan disini, susah melalui djalan ini. 'In the (lit. when it is) rainy season, it is difficult to go over this road.'

Ketika saja masih ketjil, semua2nja murah. 'When I was small everything was cheap.'

Do Exercise 16B.

16.3 -Nja in the meaning of 'the ones that there are'

-Nja is often translated as 'the.' However, there are times when -nja is used in the meaning 'the ones which there are' in which the corresponding English sentence does not contain 'the.'

Kalau bolèh minta èsnja. (16a7) 'If I could, (I would like to) ask for some ice (lit. the ice that there is).'

Sebetulnja saja ingin djuga pindjam kursinja kalau bisa. (16a16c) 'Actually, I would like also to borrow some chairs (lit. the chairs that there are) if I could.'

16.4 Ke- added to numbers

Ke- followed by a number has two meanings: (1) ordinal ('[number] -th') (see 7.51) and (2) 'all [number] of them.' The following sentences exemplify ke- in the second meaning:

Inti sari makananku selalu sadja dimakan olèh kedua orang tjelaka ini. (16R10) 'These two wretched people (lit. the two of these wretched people) have been eating the essence of my food.'

Setelah genap seribu ia menghitung, saudagarnja berdiri hendak mengambil keseribu uang2 ringgit itu. (16R15) 'After he had counted the entire thousand, the merchant got up to take all thousand of the two and a half rupiah coins.'

16.5 Ber- followed by doubled words of measurement or numbers

Words consisting of ber-, followed by doubled words of measurement (month, year, basketful, bagful, etc.) or by numbers, have two meanings depending on the context: (1) 'by the [number or word of measurement]' or (2) '[number] after [number], or [measurement] after [measurement].'

Demikianlah pikiran dan pekerdjaannja selama ber-tahun2 itu. (16R4) 'That was the way he thought and acted for all those years (lit. year after year).'

Ber-dua2 orang itu masuk kerumah sakit. 'The people entered the hospital two at a time.'

Ber-gni2 beras diekspor, karena panèn baik sekali. 'Rice was exported by the sackful (lit. sackful after sackful) because the harvest was very good.'

16.51 Satu persatu

Satu persatu means 'one at a time.'

Isteri hakim itu mulai mendjatuhkan satu persatu uang ringgitannja pada piring pèrak. (16R14) 'The judge's wife began to drop the two rupiah fifty cent coins onto the silver plate one at a time.'

In colloquial speech satu2 is used instead of satu persatu for the meaning 'one at a time.'

16.6 Short forms of the pronouns aku, engkau, kamu and dia

The pronouns aku 'I', engkau and kamu 'you', and dia 'he, she' are optionally changed when following preposition or noun as follows: ku, mu and -nja respectively. They are written as one word together with the word they follow. For example, pada plus aku	=	padaku	'to me'

pada plus kamu, engkau	=	padamu	'to you'
pada plus dia	=	padanja	'to him'
rumah plus aku	=	rumahku	'my house'
rumah plus engkau, kamu	=	rumahmu	'your house'
rumah plus dia	=	rumahnja	'his house'

Demikianlah hanja ampas sadja jg sisa bagiku.

(16R10) 'In that way the only thing left over for me was the pulp.'

Selama waktu itu seribu ringgit jg telah kubelandjakan untuk makananku itu. (16R10)

'During all that time I spent a thousand ringgits (two thousand five hundred rupiahs) for my food.'

Similarly after verbs with a meN- prefix, aku, engkau and kamu, and dia optionally have the forms ku, mu, and -nja respectively and written together as one word with the verb:

memanggil plus aku	=	memanggilku	'call me'
memanggil plus engkau, kamu	=	memanggilmu	'call you'
memanggil plus dia	=	memanggilnja	'call him'

Furthermore, these pronouns optionally have a special shape when used as the agent of a passive verb: aku has the shape ku; engkau and kamu, kau; dia, di- -nja. (see the examples 8.3.) The long forms aku, engkau and dia also are used in these constructions and may be substituted for the short forms whenever they occur.

Hanja ampas sadja jg sisa bagi aku (engkau, dia).

'The only thing left for me (you, him) was the pulp.'

16.7 Nouns formed by adding peN- to a verb consisting of a root

PeN- is added to verbs to form nouns with two meanings depending upon the context: (1) one who did (does) the root, or (2) the instrument for doing the root.'

peN- plus kirim	'send'	pengirim	'sender'
peN- plus duduk	'sit'	penduduk	'inhabitant'
peN- plus djual	'sell'	pendjual	'seller'
peN- plus buka	'open'	pembuka	'opener'
peN- plus lajani	'serve'	pelajan	'bell-boy, waiter'
peN- plus antar	'deliver'	pengantar	'means by which something is delivered'

Pendjual tikèt bilang tidak ada tikèt lagi. 'The ticket seller said there are no more tickets for sale.'

Tidak ada uang lagi pembeli beras. 'There is no more money to buy rice with.'

Do Exercise 16Dff.

16.8 Word study

16.81 Si

Si is a particle which precedes the name of a person with whom the speaker and the hearer are familiar. Si is used only in referring to someone, not in addressing. (Si is used instead of a title like saudara, tuan, etc. in talking about someone.)

Pak sini sebentar, kawan si Omas. (15c43a) 'Dad, come here, there is a friend of Omas' (here).'

Si is also used in written style preceding an adjective which describes a person already mentioned previously. Si [adjective] means 'the one who was [adjective]':

Pada suatu hari si miskin dengan isterinja datang mendekati saudagar itu. (16R7) 'One day the poor man and his wife approached that merchant.

Si is also used before nouns derived from verbs with the prefix peN- meaning 'agent' (see 16.8). SipeN- 'the particular one who did [so-and-so].'

Surat itu dikembalikan kesipengirim. 'The letter was returned to the sender.'

16.82 Pernah

Pernah means 'ever, at one time or another' or after negatives, 'never.'

Apa saudara sudah pernah kepulau Bali? -- Belum pernah. 'Have you ever been to Bali?' -- 'Never.'

The difficulty with pernah is that it is used whenever the meaning 'at one time or another' fits into the context, even though the English may have no word which corresponds to it:

Tapi saja pernah lihat, ada jg lebih murah. (13e70) 'But I have (lit. have at one time or another) seen some cheaper ones.'

Demikianlah beberapa pengalaman jg pernah terdjadi dikota Djakarta. (14R14) 'These are some experiences which people have (lit. have at one time or another) had in the city of Djakarta.'

Do Exercise 16Eff.

16.83 Kena /kenaq/

Kena followed by a noun means 'be affected by [noun].'

Mata saja pedih, kena sabun. 'My eyes sting because (I) got soap into them.'

Karena kurang makan dan selalu kuatir akan kena kerugian, saudagar itu tidak pernah gemuk. (16R6) 'Because he did not eat enough and constantly was afraid he would suffer a loss, the merchant never became fat.'

Nanti saja kena marah kalau saja main dihudjan. '(Mother) is going to get mad at me if I play in the rain.'

Ulasan

17a1 rambutnja dipotong — 'Get your hair cut.' Dipotong is a passive imperative. The passive imperative is used in phrases which translate English 'get something done to something' or 'have something done to something.' (See the examples of 17VA1, p. 17-32.)

17a2	tjukur	The basic meaning of tjukur is 'shave,' but in colloquial speech tjukur is also used to refer to haircuts.
17a3	mana	This is short for mana bisa 'how can that be!'
17a6a	djandji ini	'Promised to go (lit. this).' Ini refers to going to Abdul's house.
17a12a	si Ali nih	[=si Ali ini] 'The one who is called Ali.' Si is explained in [16.18].
	ngopi	'Drink coffee.' This word is formed by adding the prefix N- to kopi 'coffee.' [17.15]
17a16a	mau buru2 potong	'Wants to get a haircut in a hurry.'
17b18a-b		Hartono asks if Ali was still drinking his coffee as a way of apologizing for interrupting him during his coffee break.
17b24	jg bagaimana	'In what style?' This phrase is formed on analogy to phrases consisting of jg plus an adjective meaning 'in [such-and-such] a way':

		jg baik 'well,' jg bersih 'cleanly,' jg benar 'in a right way,' jg bagaimana 'in which way?'
17b27		This sentence consists of a topic, subject, and predicate: pemuda2 'young people' is the topic, banjak 'many' is the predicate, and jg sering kesini 'often come here,' is the subject.
17b32a	jg rata jg baik	'In an even way'; 'in a good way.'
17b34b	Ali ini	'As for you.' Literally, this phrase means 'this Ali (as opposed to other people).' Har uses the name Ali where in English we would say 'you.'
17b38	sekolah	[=bersekolah] 'Go to school.'
17b40	mata pentjarian	'Occupation.' Mata is placed preceding some nouns to form a compound meaning 'type of [noun]': pentjarian 'livelihood,' mata pentjarian 'type of livelihood'; peladjaran 'thing studied,' mata peladjaran 'subject matter'; dagang 'trade,' mata dagang 'the commodity used in trade,' etc.

This word is not the same word as mata 'eye.'

17c59b berani — The basic meaning of berani is 'dare.' Berani tanggung means 'can guarantee.' The word order of this sentence is predicate - subject. In colloquial speech bisa is optionally placed following a word it modifies to give emphasis. Hilang bisa 'can disappear, for sure.'

17c66a pakai air — 'Using water.' [25.4]

dibasain — 'Make it wet.' For the use of the passive see the comment to sentence 17a1.

17c69a bajar sama saja — 'Pay me.' Sama is used in colloquial speech as a synonym for kepada, pada, or dengan.

17III. Pertjakapan:

Hartono mau pergi ketukang tjukur dan menanjakan pada Supomo dimana tukang tjukur jg bagus.

H: Rambutmu kok bagus sekali tu, Pomo! Kamu biasanja tjukur dimana sih?

S: Itu, ditukang tjukur 'Sederhana,' didepan kantor pos.

H: Mahal, nggak, bajarnja disana? Kalau mahal, uang saja nggak tjukup nanti!

S: Ah, nggak, nggak mahal, tjuma dua ratus. Orangnja baik lagi. Tjoba dèh sekali kesana, pasti kamu senang.

H: Orangnja bisa njukur kumis sekalian, apa nggak?

S: Ó, ia, tentu, pokoknja bèrès dèh!

H: Tapi kan tambah lagi bajarnja nanti?

S: É, nggak kok, djangan kuatir soal bajaran. Kamu tahu? Bapak itu potongnja didekat rumahnja sendiri. Anaknja jg perempuan, manis lhó, sering datang kesitu.

H: Barangkali djuga ada maksudnja. Biar pemuda2,banjak jg datang.

S: Tahu .... Ia dèh, barangkali. Itu sih urusan dia sendiri.

H: Djauh, apa nggak, kesana itu? Apa bisa djalan sadja?

S: Itu sih terserah kamu, mau djalan, apa mau naik bètjak. Kalau mau ènak, ja, naik bètjak sadja. Kalau ada uangnja tapi....

H: Ia dèh, nanti soré saja kesana. Barangkali adja anak perempuannja datang.

Benar atau salah:

1. Hartono menganggap potongan rambut Supomo baik sekali.
2. Supomo potong rambutnja dibelakang kantor pos.
3. Kalau bajarannja mahal, Hartono tidak mau tjukur disana.
4. Supomo mengatakan bajarannja mahal sekali disana, tapi tukang tjukurnja baik.
5. Tukang tjukurnja tidak bisa tjukur kumis sekalian.
6. Hartono pikir, tentu bajarannja harus ditambah kalau kumis ditjukur.

7. Supomo mengatakan supaja Hartono djangan kuatir soal bajaran.
8. Tukang tjukur itu tidak punja anak perempuan.
9. Anak perempuan tukang pangkas itu sering ketempat bapaknja bekerdja, barangkali supaja banjak pemuda2 jg datang ketempat itu.
10. Supomo mengatakan, itu urusan tukang pangkas itu sendiri.
11. Supomo menjuruh Hartono djalan sadja ketempat tukang tjukur.
12. Hartono ingin supaja dia tidak akan bertemu dengan anak perempuan tukang tjukur.

IVA. Conversation between Tono and Ali. Tono asks his friend Ali if Ali thinks he needs a haircut yet. Ali says it doesn't look that long yet, but Tono says that he has to get a haircut anyway because his wife told him he needed one. She said she wasn't going to go with him to the party at Tati's house if he didn't get one. Tono asks Ali if he knows of a good barber. Ali says that there's a good one across the street from the market. Many young people go there because the barber is very good at cutting in the new style. Tono says he'll try that barber, and asks Ali if he would like to come along. Ali says he would like to drink some coffee first. Tono expresses surprise that Ali wants to drink coffee when it is so hot. Ali says that he couldn't sleep the night before, thinking about his wife. She's such a nuisance. Tono says he's in in a hurry but if Ali won't take long he will wait for him. Ali says they can go to have coffee at a little stand near-by and invites Tono to have coffee with him. Tono agrees to go, but he says they have to hurry. Ali says he thinks he'll go with Tono afterward to get a haircut at the same time.

B. Tono goes into the barber shop. A young man greets him and Tono asks him if he is the barber. The young man tells him he is the barber and asks if he would like to have a haircut. Tono says yes, and the barber apologizes, saying he was just about to go to the bathroom; would Tono please wait a little if he is not too much in a hurry. Tono says he is not that much in a hurry, but he asks the barber not to take too long. When the barber comes back he apologizes again for making Tono wait and asks Tono to sit down on a chair so he can begin. He asks him which style he wants. Tono tells him and cautions him to do a good job. As the barber cuts his hair they chat about themselves. The barber tells where he is from, what he used to do, and why he could not go to school. After a while he is done and shows Tono the work. Tono is not satisfied and asks the barber to make some improvements. Finally it is done and the barber asks Tono if he would like to have a massage, too. Tono doesn't want one and makes excuses, but the barber talks him into it anyway. Finally they are done and then Tono pays.

Tata Bahasa

17.1 More on formation of new words from verbs

17.11 Ber- meaning 'do the action of the verb to oneself'

Ber- is added to bases* referring to an action or an instrument. It forms verbs meaning 'perform the action on oneself' or 'to use the instrument on oneself.' The affix is added to a fairly large number of verbs, but not to all verbs.

sisir	'comb'	bersisir	'comb one's hair'
tjukur	'shave'	bertjukur	'shave oneself'
kumpulkan	'gather something together'	berkumpul	'to congregate, get together' siapkan	'make ready'	bersiap	'get oneself ready'
pakaian	'clothing'	berpakaian	'get oneself dressed'

*A BASE is a word to which affixes can be added to form new words.

hiasi	'decorate'	berhias	'to make one-self up'
putar	'turn something'	berputar	'turn (one-self) around'
mendirikan	'erect'	berdiri	'stand, get up'

Pada saat ini kera itu sedang ber-siap2 untuk bertjukur. (17R2) 'During this time the monkey was getting himself ready to shave (himself).'

Compare this sentence with the following sentence:

Tukang tjukur menjiapkan pisau untuk mentjukur Hartono.

'The barber prepared his razor to shave Hartono.'

Another example:

Orang2 banjak berkumpul dimahkamah hendak mendengarkan pengadilan. 'Many people gathered in the courtroom to listen to the trial.'

Compare to this sentence, the following sentence:

Selama ber-tahun2 banjak uang jg dikumpulkan olèh saudagar itu. 'In the course of many years the merchant had accumulated much money.'

Do Exercises 17Aff.

17.12 Ter- added to verbs forming words meaning 'do the action of the verb accidentally'

Not all verbs can have ter- added to them to form words with this meaning, but ter- is added to a fairly long list of verbs to form words with this meaning. The following list gives some common words we have had which take ter- in this usage:

tidur	'be asleep'	tertidur	'fall asleep'
sasar	'aim indiscriminately'	tersasar (usually kesasar)	'get lost'
duduk	'sit'	terduduk	'sit accidentally'
gelintjir	(no meaning by itself)	tergelintjir	'slip'
buru2	'hurry'	ter-buru2	'be in a hurry'
kena	'affected by, hit by'	terkena	'be hit by accidentally'

Kera itu segera tertidur diatas tempat tidur. (17R5)

'The monkey immediately fell asleep on top of the bed.'

Karena litjinnja djalan itu ia tergelintjir dan djatuh terduduk. 'On account of the slipperiness of the street, he slipped and fell on his behind (lit. accidentally sitting.).'

17.121 Ter- added to verbs forming words meaning 'have [verb] accidentally happen to'

In Lesson 14 [14.1] we learned that ter- is added to verb roots to form words meaning 'has (had) [verb] happen to it.' With some verbs an addition of ter- also gives the meaning that the action happened accidentally:

makan	'eat'	termakan	'accidentally eaten'
ambil	'take'	terambil	'accidentally taken'
dengar	'hear'	terdengar	'overheard'
sajat	'slice'	tersajat	'be accidentally cut with a sharp blade'

lepaskan	'free'	terlepas	'get freed'
tinggalkan	'leave behind'	tertinggal	'be accidentally left behind'

Lajangan jg tadi dipegangnja itu, sudah terlepas sekarang. 'The kite which he was holding has already broken away.'

Sekali ini lagi tersajatlah sebagian kulit belakangnja. (17R5) 'This time again a part of the skin of his behind got cut.'

Dengan tidak sadar terambil djuga olèhnja bungkusan orang lain. 'Without realizing it, he took somebody else's package.'

Do Exercises 17Bff.

17.13 Ke--an added to verbs or adjectives forming words meaning 'be affected by the [verb] or [adjective].'

Ke--an is added to a limited number of words in formal language, but in colloquial style, it is added to a large number of roots. The following examples are used both in formal and in colloquial speech.

sakit	'painful'	kesakitan	'feel pain'
lihat	'see'	kelihatan	'visible (be affected by somebody's seeing)'
siang	'toward noon'	kesiangan	'be late for something (be overtaken by noon)'
hilang	'disappear'	kehilangan	'lose (something)'

datang	'come'	kedatangan	'have somebody come on one' djatuh	'fall'	kedjatuhan	'have something fall on one'
kurang	'be insufficient'	kekurangan	'not have enough'

Kera itu men-djerit2 kesakitan. (17R3) 'The monkey screamed on account of his pain.'

Saja kehilangan semua uang saja. 'I lost all of my money.'

Tadi malam kami kedatangan tamu. 'Last night some guests dropped in on us (lit. we were affected by the coming of guests).'

Maaf, ja, saja kebetulan kekurangan uang ini, djadi saja tidak bisa memindjamkan sekarang.' 'I'm sorry, I happen to be short of money, so I cannot lend you any now.'

Do Exercises 17Cff.

17.14 Doubling of words meaning time, state or circumstance to form words meaning 'when [time, state or circumstance] is in effect'

Doubling in this usage occurs with almost any appropriate root. However, it is not common with names of days, months, and seasons.

panas	'hot'	panas2	'when it is hot'
pagi	'morning'	pagi2	'when it is morning'
hudjan	'rain'	hudjan2	'when it is raining'

Waduh, panas2 kok ngopi, ja. (17a13) 'My! You drink coffee when it is so hot!'

Pagi2 isteri Mardi kepasar membeli keperluan untuk warungnja. 'In the morning, Mardi's wife would go to the market to buy the things they needed for their store.'

Hudjan2 begini, kok mau pergi djalan2! 'In such rainy weather, you want to go out walking!

Do Exercises 17Dff.

17.15 N- added to nouns to form verbs

The affix N- (the alternant form of meN- used in colloquial speech (13.13) is added to some nouns in colloquial language to form verbs:

kopi	'coffee'	ngopi	'drink coffee'
saté	'sate (barbecued meat on a stick)'	njaté	'eat or make sate'
rokok	'cigarette'	ngerokok	'smoke'
sótó	'bean threads'	njótó	'eat bean threads'
kantor	'office'	ngantor	'go to the office'

Waduh, panas2 kok ngopi, ja. (17a13) 'My! You drink coffee when it is so hot!

17.2 Jg plus an adjective, meaning 'do in a [adjective] manner'

This usage is confined to colloquial speech.

Jg dibelakang, ja, pokoknja, jg rata, ja. Jg baik dèh. (17b32a) 'The part in the back, in any case (make it) even, will you? Do a good job.'

Mau potong jg bagaimana nih, tuan? (17b24) 'How (lit. in which way) would you like your hair cut, Sir?'

Do Exercises 17Eff.

17.3 More on counters

Review the discussion of counters (7.52, 7.523). Here are four more counters: helai 'sheet' (said for things which come in sheets, or of clothing); èkor 'tail' (said of animals); pasang 'pair'; potong 'piece' (said of things which have been cut).

Kasi saja sehelai kemèdja dan sepasang kaus kaki.

'Give me a shirt (lit. a sheet of shirt) and a pair of socks.'

Kawannja ini adalah seèkor kera. (17R1) 'His friend was a mpnkey.'

Do Exercise 17Fff.

17.4 Word study

17.41 Mana as an exclamation

Mana as an exclamation means 'how can it be that ..!'

Wah, rambutnja kan masih pèndèk nih -- Ah mana! Lihat tuh dikatja. Udah pandjang. (17a2-3) 'My! It's still very short, isn't it?' -- 'How can that be! Look at it (yourself) in the mirror. It's already long.'

Tiga puluh! Mana bisa sekarang ini, pak? 'Thirty (rupiahs)! How is (that) possible nowadays, Sir!'

17.42 Sok

Sok /soq/ is used in colloquial speech. It precedes a verb or adjective and means 'acting as if he could do [verb] or were [adjective].'

Tergelintjirlah kera jg sok pinter itu. 'He slipped and fell down, the monkey that thought he was so smart (lit. who was acting as if he was smart).'

17.43 Djuga

Djuga immediately precedes the predicate or follows the predicate. It has three meanings: (1) 'also,' (2) 'anyway, nevertheless,' (3) (when following an adjective) 'rather [adjective].' We have studied the use of djuga in the first two meanings in Lesson 10 [10.36]. Here are some examples of djuga in the third meaning:

Sudah berapa lama ini djadi tukang tjukur? -- Ó sudah lama djuga, pak. (17b22-23) 'How long have you been a barber now?' -- 'Oh, for quite a long time, Sir.'

Tapi kan lumajan sekarang ada mata pentjarian. -- Ia. Lumajan djuga dah. (17b41-42a) 'But it isn't so bad, is it, now that (you have) a job?' -- Yes, it's fairly good.'

Ulasan

19a1 ini betul djalan 'Is this really the way? (lit. Is this true--the way?)'

19a3a	kali	This is short in colloquial style for barangkali.
19a3c	njeberang	This is colloquial for menjeberang.
	nggak	The tag word nggak 'or not' is polite. It does not give the same impression as the English.
19a16	makanan, nggak	This is pronounced /makananggaq/
19a18a	apa, ja	'What? Any suggestions?'
19a23	ia dong	'Yes, of course (you should know that).'
19a24a	seneng dèh	'You're right, it would be nice ....' (Seneng is the colloquial form for formal senang.)
19b27b	antré	Colloquial speech for baris 'line.' In formal style this would be 'kalau tidak banjak jg berbaris ...'
19b28	adjé	This is colloquial speech form for sadja. In the Djakarta dialect a at the end of a word is pronounced é.
19b30a	la:illa /lailaa/	'Heavens!' This is an exclamation which originates with là ilàhà illà 'llahu, an Arabic invocation meaning 'There is no god but God.'
	belon	This is a colloquial speech form of belum.

19b30b	pèrak	This is a word in colloquial speech for rupiah. The original meaning of pèrak was 'silver.'
19b34	dapat	'Be gotten.' Dapat is a word which has both an active and a stative meaning: i.e., it means both (1) 'get, obtain something,' and (2) 'be in a state of having been obtained.' Here dapat is in meaning (2). There are quite a few words of this type. Other words of this type we have had are perlu 'need (something)' or 'be necessary,' and tutup 'close' or 'be closed.'
19b37b	ngapain	This is a colloquial speech form for mengapa 'doing what?'
19b43a	Saudara Djon	Notice that John is treated more formally than Ani and Toenggoel. By introducing John as Saudara Djon, the implication is that the others will also use the formal title Saudara in addressing John.
19b43b	merèka tu	Merèka tu (for merèka itu) is used here because the topic of the conversation is the people referred to and they had just been mentioned.
19c44b	opelèt	The opelèt is a small car with the seats taken out of the back and replaced by benches along the sides. The opelèt takes passengers for a small fare (similar to the jitneys in some places in the States.)

19c45c	kesiangan	'Be late.' Literally this means 'get overtaken by noon.' Kesiangan is said in the morning.
19c46b	borongan	The basic meaning of borongan is 'something bought, hired or otherwise paid for by the whole lot or in its entirety.' Here the jitney will be hired for the trip, and the driver will pick up no additional passengers. The corresponding verb is memborong 'hire (buy, pay for) the whole.'
19c46d	beratnja	This is short for bukan main beratnja 'How heavy!'
19c49	tahu	The use of tahu as a tag word at the end of a sentence, '[so-and-so] is the case, you know' is effeminate.
19c50		They plan to buy young coconuts (kelapa muda) which are full of water.
19c52a	nènèk	Nènèk 'grandmother' is used in referring to an old woman.
19c59	kain	This refers to a piece of cloth which is wrapped around the waist, worn in relaxed situations (around the house, picnics, etc.) or when sleeping: we translate 'sarong,' but in Indonesian the term sarong is usually reserved for a piece of cloth, the ends of which have been sewn together.

19c60 lebih dulu — Lebih dulu means 'do something before someone else does it.' Duluan is a synonym of lebih dulu [19.63c]. Saja masuk air lebih dulu (or duluan) dari dia. 'I will go into the water before he does.'

Dulu means 'do one thing before something else.' Saja mandi dipantjuran dulu sebelum masuk air. 'I will take a shower first, before I go into the water.'

19c63c duluan — This is a synonym of lebih dulu. (See the comment to 19c60 above.)

19III. Pertjakapan:

Djon dan kawan2 di Tjibulan. Iwan, teman Djon dulu di Cornèl, ada disana djuga dan merèka bertemu dipemandian.

I: Hai Djon, kamu kapan datang dari Amérika? Saja ketemu si Omas kemarèn dan dia mengatakan kamu ada disini sekarang. Kamu dengan siapa ke Tjibulan ini?

D: Itu, dengan si Mus dan kawan2nja.

I: Lhó! Saja lihat merèka tadi, nunggu opelèt dipinggir djalan. Kok saja nggak lihat kamu? Mobil kami tadi penuh sih. Kalau nggak, saja berenti tadi, biar kalian bisa ikut.

D: Ah, udah adja, Wan! Toh kami sampai djuga kesini. Tjuma saja tadi nggak tahan, kepanasan. Lama bener nunggu opelètnja.

I: Kamu kok nggak ikut berenang Djon, panas2 gini kan ènak didalam air?

D: Ini, saja lupa bawa swèmpak. Apa disini ada jg bisa disèwa?

I: Ó ada! Tuh lihat tuh. Ajó dèh, kita sèwa swèmpaknja satu. (Setelah Djon memakai swèmpak) Ajó, siapa jg duluan. Aduh, terang adja si Siagian jg lebih dulu. Dia mèmang pinter berenang sih, nggak hèran.

D. È, kamu ingat, ndak? Dulu di Cornèl kan dia pinter berenang djuga? Tapi kok dia sekarang kelihatan kurus,

I: Ó, ini. Pulang dari Amérika dulu dia kawin sama orang sekampungnja. Baru enam bulan kawin, terus isterinja meninggal. Nah, sedjak itu dia terus nggak ènak makan, sering sakit2 dan badannja semakin kurus.

19IV. Free Conversation

A. Pretend that you are taking a betjak and you think that the driver is taking you the wrong way. The driver assures you that that is the right way to the place that you told him to go. You ask him to stop and wait a second. He is not very anxious to do so, so you offer to pay extra if he waits. Also you ask him to take you across the street. He refuses to wait, so you go off and say you will find another betjak later. As you are going off, the betjak driver calls you back, saying that you forgot to pay. You pay, and the driver demands a tip. You refuse, saying you had agreed to pay so-and-so much, and he didn't even take you to your destination.

B. Pretend that you meet a friend on the street as you are on your way to a picture show. He asks you where you're going. You tell him and ask the same question of him.

He says he isn't doing anything in particular, and you ask him to go with you to the show. He agrees but says on Sundays it's usually crowded and it's hard to get tickets. You tell him to never mind about that -- you have a 'friend' at the theater. It's no problem. Your friend tells you about a picnic the following week and asks you if you would like to go along with him. You ask him who all is going. He tells you and asks you if you know the people. Some of them you already know, and you tell where you met them. You ask what time it will be. He says it will probably be at eleven. You remark that that is awfully late. He says maybe it can be earlier. He will call you up. You ask if he will come to pick you up or if you should go to his house. He says everybody is meeting him at his house, but they can come by for you if you like. You say, never mind. But if they could pick you up, you'd be grateful.

C. Pretend you are at your friend's house about to go on a picnic. You are getting nervous about the time and urge people to hurry. You say they'll miss the bus. Your friend suggests hiring a jitney. You say you'll go out in the street and try to find one, but you ask whether you should hire the jitney or just have him come by to pick the others up. Your friend says that you should hire the jitney so that he will take you directly to Tjibulan. You ask if you should hire a jitney to take you there and back. Your friend says it won't be necessary because there are lots of jitneys at the beach (pinggir pantai) in the afternoon which you can get coming home. After a while you come back and announce the jitney is waiting and urge the people to get on.

D. Pretend you are at the beach. You say that you are thirsty - you ate so many peanuts. Your friend suggests that you could buy some coconuts. The water tastes lousy at the beach. You say you will ask the old woman if the coconuts are for sale. Your friend says he has already done so, and she is having her boy climb the tree after some. You say that you don't have a bathing suit. Your friend expresses surprise and offers you his. You tell him never to mind, because you can go in with your kain. He agrees and urges you to go into the water.

19VC. Intonation Exercise

VC1. 4231 intonation pattern. Review the description of the 4231 pattern p. 15-47. Note that the first word of the phrase which ends in a 4231 intonation pattern starts at a high pitch and that there is a continuous descent in pitch until the low point 2 has been reached and then a slight rise:

Masa ndak mau minum!

Some speakers make the rise on the penult instead of on the final syllable:

Masa ndak mau ikut.

Pronounce the following sentences with a 4231 intonation pattern. Imitate your informant as to the syllable on which the rise occurs:

1. Kok pagi betul?
2. Ikut djuga?
3. Sudah kenal?
4. A takut?
5. Baru kawin?
6. Baik2 sadja?
7. Ada tamu?
8. Belum pulang?
9. Di Mèdan?
10. Kan tadi patpuluh?

VC2. A phrase preceding a phrase with the 4231 intonation pattern, frequently has a 213 intonation pattern. Review the 213 intonation pattern (described in Lesson 14, p. 14-35) and then read the following sentences with a 213 pattern on the phrases preceded by a comma and a 4231 pattern on the final phrase:

1. Tuan Toting, ada dirumah?
2. Njonja, keluar djuga?
3. Ini, betul, djalan ke Mèntèng?
4. Ikut sadja, gimana?
5. Seratus, kan sudah banjak?
6. Nggak ada, jg mau berenang nih?
7. Anak ibu, berapa?
8. Apa bolèh, dilihat dulu?

19VC3. Review the description of the 324 intonation pattern in Lesson 16, p. 16-25. In phrases which have the 324 intonation pattern the word which receives sentence stress has a drop on the penult and a rise on the final syllable. Read the following sentences with a 324 intonation on each phrase:

1. Biasanja, makanannja, ènak disini.
2. Jalah, kalau begitu, baiklah.
3. Ajó dong, nanji, biar ramai.
4. Barangkali, kelapa itu, didjual.

5. Tjepat2 dèh, kembali, biar ramai2, kita masuk air.

6. Minah, bawa, minumannja!

7. Anak saja, masih mahasiswa, di Bandung.

8. Ja, kalau bisa, beri kabar, kapan mau pindah, begitu.

19VC4. Another intonation pattern is the 423 pattern. In phrases with a 423 pattern the rise in pitch on the final syllable is not as high as on the syllables preceding the drop:

Saja nggak lama.

Read the following sentences with a 423 pattern on the final phrase. Other phrases have the 324 pattern:

1. A djalandjalan.

2. Ja, bolèhlah, kalau ada.

3. Dia, saja djuga kenal.

4. Ó, dulu, kenalnja, waktu di Cornèl.

5. Ó, kami, belum ada anak kami.

6. Ada kawan jg mengundang kami, mengadjak berburu.

7. Merèka, kawinnja diluar negeri.

8. A itu, tidak mendjadi soal.

Batjaan

*Lautan Nusantara

Bagian A

1. Nama jg *diberikan kepada kepulauan Indónésia, jaitu Nusantara, tepat sekali kalau *dipikirkan bahwa arti katanja ialah pulau2 jg berantara. *Kalau dipikirkan lebih djauh lagi, *maka laut, *baik didjaman dulu *maupun sekarang *bukanlah mendjadi pemisah melainkan penghubung atau perantara antara pulau2 jg *be-ratus2, bahkan be-ribu2 itu. Laut mendjadi djalan raja dari pulau jg satu kepulau jg lain, dan lebih dari itu, lautan di Nusantara ini mendjadi *tempat bertemunja lalu lintas antar Asia.

2. Dalam djaman prasedjarah, bangsa2 dari daèrah Asia Selatan jg sekarang merupakan daèrah Tiongkok Selatan menjeberang lautan dan mendjadi penduduk Nusantara jg pertama, jaitu nènèk mojang bangsa Indónésia jg sekarang ini.

3. Kebudajaan *jg datangnja dari luar wilajah Nusantara, djuga memakai lautan untuk *masuk Indónésia. Musafir serta pedagang2 jg berlajar *pulang pergi antara India dan Tiongkok, mampir di Sumatera dan Djawa misalnja, untuk menambah perbekalan kapal. Ada pula diantara merèka jg *menetap, memperkenalkan penduduk asli kepulauan ini dengan agama *serta kebudajaan merèka sehingga *dengan demikian *berkembanglah *antara lain kebudajaan jg *bertjorak Hindu.

4. Dari djaman itulah kita kenal keradjaan2 besar dipulau Djawa, Sumatera, dan Kalimantan Timur. Bagi orang jg beladjar sedjarah Indónésia, nama2 seperti keradjaan Tarumanegara, Kutèi, Sriwidjaja dan Malaju tidak asing lagi. Puntjak kedjajaan keradjaan2 di Indónésia ialah dengan *berdirinja keradjaan Madjapahit, dimana dibuktikan bahwa laut memainkan peranan penting dalam perluasan pengaruhnja. Ada ahli2 sedjarah jg *mengemukakan bahwa pelaut2 Madjapahit berlajar sampai kepulau Madagaskar dekat benua Afrika dan bagian2 lain dari benua Asia.

5. Kebudajaan serta agama Islam, jg kemudian menjusul, djuga masuk menjeberang laut. Dari India kepulau Sumatera dan Djawa, achirnja *menjebar keseluruh *pendjuru Nusantara.

6. *Kalau pendatang2 jg disebut tadi semuanja datang dari benua Asia, *maka pendatang2 jg kemudian menjusul berasal dari benua Érópa. Tertarik olèh kekajaan rempah2 di Nusantara bagian Timur atau Maluku, pedagang Portugis, Spanjol dan kemudian Belanda, berlajar serta *singgah diberbagai pulau.

20. Merèka tertarik olèh ...

Bagian B

7. Perdagangan internasiónal kemudian berubah mendjadi sistim pendjadjahan. Pada djaman itu, orang2 Belanda, disamping sering menang perang2 didarat, djuga menguasai lautan. Demikian pula merèka mulai menguasai daèrah2 dikepulauan Indónésia.

8. Tetapi bagaimanapun djuga, banjak suku2 di Indónésia tidak hanja tinggal diam sadja. Misalnja orang2 Belanda itu mendapat perlawanan jg *gagah berani dari golongan penduduk di Sulawèsi Selatan. Pada waktu itu *orang2 Sulawèsi Selatan dengan perahu2 lajarnja *itu berani melawan pelaut2 Belanda.

9. Sampai sekarang masih dapat kita lihat perahu2 itu berlajar dengan gagah dan tjepatnja di Indónésia. Bentuknja langsing dan indah, berwarna putih, sedap dipandang mata dilautan jg biru dan dikenal dengan nama perahu Bugis atau Pelari.

10. *Kalau lautan2 di Indónésia ini memainkan peranan penting dimasa jg lampau, *maka tidak kurang besar peranan jg bisa dimainkannja dimasa jg akan datang.

11. Kekajaan alam Indónésia jg belum tergali seluruhnja, tidak sadja terdapat didaratan tetapi djuga dilaut *beserta *dasarnja. Laut dangkal, dimana bermuara kebanjakan dari sungai2 besar dipulau Sumatera, Djawa dan Kalimantan, disamping *kaja *akan sumber hajati djuga *berkemungkinan besar mengandung sumber2 mineral seperti minjak tanah dan lain2 hasil tambang.

12. *Selat pemisah antara Kalimantan dan Sulawèsi bisa menghasilkan ikan dan lain2nja. Sedangkan lautan Maluku jg penuh dengan pulau2 besar dan ketjil merupakan pula suatu tempat jg baik untuk perikanan *setjara *besar2an. Djuga dilautan ini, *disekitar pulau2 Banda dan Aru kegiatan pentjarian mutiara penting sekali.

13. *Pèndèknja, *tidak terbatas kemungkinan serta hasil jg dapat diberikan olèh laut di Nusantara ini, jg di-tahun2 jg akan datang akan menambah kemakmuran dan kesedjahteraan negara Indónésia dan rakjatnja.

liter	'liter'	literan	'by the liter'
pon	'pound'	ponan	'by the pound'
lusin	'dozen'	lusinan	'by the dozen'

Beras itu didjual literan atau kiloan? 'Is that rice sold by the liter or by the kilogram?'

Do Exercise 19A1.

19.112 Dulu vs. duluan

Dulu modifies a verb and means 'do [verb] before doing something else.' Duluan modifies a verb and means 'do [verb] before someone else does it.' A synonym of duluan is lebih dulu.

Saja mau beli katjang gorèng dulu, sebelum berenang. 'I want to buy roasted peanuts first before swimming.'

Saja duluan pergi dari dia. 'I went away before he did.'

Do Exercise 19A4.

19.12 MeN- forming verbs meaning 'be or become ...'

In formal or written styles meN- is added to verbs which refer to a state of being to form verbs which mean 'come into [such-and-such] a state.' MeN- is added to adjectives to form verbs meaning 'be or become [adjective].' This usage is not usual in colloquial speech. Verbs containing meN- in this meaning do not have a passive corresponding to them.

ikut	'follow'	ikut2an	'tag along, do nothing but follow'

Lautan Maluku merupakan suatu tempat jg baik untuk perikanan setjara besar2an. (19R12) 'The Molucca seas are good for fishing on a large scale.'

Ah, pèsta itu tidak apa2. Ketjil2an adja kok. (see 16b24c) 'Oh, that party isn't going to be anything. Just a small get-together.'

Dia tidak punja pendapat sendiri. Dia hanja ikut2an organisasi. 'He doesn't have his own opinion. He just follows the organization.'

Untung2an from beruntung 'have good fortune' means 'take one's chances.'

Kita tjoba sadja, untung2an. (19b27a) We'll just try, take our chances.'

19.2 Noun formations

19.21 -An and ke- -an forming collective nouns

Review 15.32 where we studied ke- -an forming collective nouns. Here are some further examples:

pulau	'island'	kepulauan	'archipelago'
budaja	'culture'	kebudajaan	'civilization'

With a few roots -an forms collective nouns.

pohon	'tree'	pohonan	'cluster of trees'
laut	'sea'	lautan	'seas'
tari	'dance'	tarian	'dances

Pohonan itu rapat betul tumbuhnja. 'Those trees grow very close together.'

Lautan di Nusantara ini mendjadi tempat bertemunja lalu lintas antar Asia. (19R1) 'The seas around Indonesia became the place where the traffic between Asian ports met.'

19.22 Ke- -an forming abstract nouns from adjectives

makmur	'prosperous'	kemakmuran	'prosperity'
sedjahtera	'prosperous'	kesedjah-teraan	'prosperity' kaja	'wealthy'	kekajaan	'wealth'
djaja	'glorious'	kedjajaan	'glory'
mungkin	'possible'	kemungkinan	'possibility'

Kemungkinan serta hasil jg dapat diberikan olèh laut di Nusantara ini akan menambah kemakmuran dan kesedjahteraan negara Indónésia. (19R13) 'The possibilities and the products which the seas of Indonesia can furnish will increase the prosperity of the Indonesian nation.

19.3 Word Study

19.31 Lhó

Lhó has two meanings, depending upon the position it occupies in the sentence. (1) It occurs at the beginning of the phrase where it is a particle expressing surprise at something found out:

Lhó dari mana ini? (19a8) 'Goodness! (I'm surprised to see you.) Where did you come from?'

Lhó, dua setengah ribu, tuan, itu biasa djaman sekarang! (13d62) 'My! (I'm surprised you said that.) Twenty-five hundred is usual nowadays.'

Lhó, siapa itu, temannja itu? (15d64) 'My! Who's that friend of yours?

(2) It occurs at the end of a sentence where it is a particle contradicting what the hearer might think, 'Don't think (say) it's like that.'

Kami djuga punja ladang didaèrah ini lhó. (10b28c) 'Don't think we don't have dry fields in this area too. (We do.)'

Jg maú kopi bukan kamu sadja lhó. 'You're not the only one here who wants coffee, you know.'

Saja betul2 lhó. 'Don't think I'm kidding.'

Do Exercises 19C1, 2.

19.32 Kok

Kok has two meanings depending upon the position it occupies in the sentence. (1) (The meaning discussed in 10.44.) Kok follows the sentence or precedes the main word of the predicate and is a particle which denies that what the interlocutor said or thinks is the case.

Kaja gitu kok manis ah. (15b26a) 'One like that is not so cute!'

Ini tjuma pèsta ketjil sadja kok. (16a16b) 'This is just a small party (contrary to what you might think).'

(2) Kok precedes the predicate or precedes the entire sentence and means 'How come [predicate] is the case -- I'm surprised!'

Djam tudjuh! Kok pagi betul! (19a14) 'My! How (why is it so) early!'

Pigi piknik kok nggak bawa swèmpak! (19c58b) 'How can you go on a picnic without taking your bathing suit!'

Waduh! Kok tjuma satu jg potong sekarang. (17a11) 'My! (Why is there) only one barber here.

Waduh! Panas2 kok ngopi, ja. (17a13) 'My! How come you are drinking coffee when it's so hot!'

Do Exercise 19C3.

19.33 Lagi

Lagi has two meanings depending upon its position in the sentence. (1) Lagi precedes the principal word of the predicate (a usage confined to colloquial styles) and means 'be in the process of ....' [=sedang]

Kamu lagi kerdja apa? (8a1) 'What are you (in the process of) doing?'

(2) Lagi follows the principal word of the predicate or comes at the end of the phrase and means '[predicate] in addition.'

Tapi saja hanja harus beli beberapa perabot rumah lagi. (8b22b) 'But I only have to buy several more (pieces of) furniture.'

Ó barangkali dua bulan lagi saja pulang. (7c32) 'Oh, probably in two more months I'll go home.'

In this usage lagi has two translations. In come contexts it means 'again.'

Ja saja tahu, sudah dipèl. Sekarang dipèl lagi. 'I know you mopped it. Now mop it again.'

In other cases lagi means '[predicate] is done or is the case in addition to other things':

Sesudah berenang saja masih nonton lagi. 'After going swimming I went to the show (in addition).'

In the second usage of lagi where it occurs following the principal word of the predicate, lagi also means 'do [predicate] when one shouldn't' or '[predicate]is the case when it shouldn't be':

Ajó dong kita ger i. Nanti kesiangan lagi, nggak ènak.(19c45c) Come on, let's go. We might be late (when we shouldn't), (and) it won't be nice.'

Kok tanja2 lagi. Kan sudah tahu. 'Why do you keep asking questions (unnecessarily)? You already know the answer, don't you?

Apa lagi means 'all the more so because, especially because:'

Apa lagi saja harus tanggung adik2 saja. (17b39b) 'All the more so because I have to take care of my younger brothers and sisters.'

Belum lagi means 'not yet (when it should have been by now).'

Umurnja sudah empatpuluh, tapi belum lagi kawin. 'He's already forty, but he's not married yet (though he should be).'

Do Exercise 19C4.

19.34 Sih

Sih has four uses: the first is interrogative indicating lessened interest in the question:

Ah kenapa sih? Tjapai sudah? (10a8) What's the matter -- already tired?

Berapa sih nih? (13c59) 'How much is this, by the way?'

(2) Sih also follows a topic or the subject or a predicate meaning 'to be sure [predicate, subject, topic] is the case but ....' [See 10.48]:

Tjapai sih tidak, tapi kita duduklah sebentar dibawah pohon itu. (10a9) 'Tired, I'm not, but let's sit down for a second under that tree.'

Apa perlu dibantu? -- Ah, sebenarnja sih, tidak, tapi kalau mau datang menolong, senang sekali saja. (16b27a - 28b) 'Do you need any help?' -- 'Oh, well, actually not ..., but if you want to come help, I'd be very pleased.'

Jg lebih murah sih banjak, tapi benangnja, benang apa? (13e71a) 'There are cheaper ones to be sure, but what kind of thread do they have?'

(3) Sih follows a topic or subject in the meaning 'if' or 'as for' [=kalau].

Nonton sih, mau sadja. 'If (we go) to the show, sure I want to.'

Saja sih nggak mau. Tapi tanja dia dong. Barangkali dia mau. ' As for me, I don't want to. But ask him - probably he does.'

Bèsok sih saja mau. Hari ini saja nggak bisa. 'Tomorrow (lit. if it's tomorrow) I would like to. Today I can't.'

(4) Sih also follows the main word of the predicate or the subject with an explanation why something is different from the way it was expected to be: 'because.'

Saja sih nggak njangka sepandjang ini orang antré. (19b32a) '(Because) I didn't expect there to be so many people in line.'

This sentence can also be said with sih following the main word of the predicate:

Saja nggak njangka sih sepandjang ini orang antré. (Same meaning.)

Kok tidak djadi pergi! -- Habis, djauh sih. 'How come you didn't go! -- '(Because) it was far.'

Do Exercise 19C5.

19.35 Situ meaning 'you'

Situ is used in colloquial style to mean 'you (one person).'

Situ dong lebih dulu. (19c61) 'You (go in) first.'

Situ dong jg njanji sekarang. 'You sing now.'

19.36 Pintar

Pintar (=pinter in colloquial speech) has two uses: (1) as the main word of a predicate meaning 'be clever, intelligent,' (2) preceding a verb meaning 'know how to do [verb] well.' The following exemplifies the first usage:

Tergelintjirlah kera jg sok pinter itu. (17R3) 'The monkey who thought he was so smart slipped.

In the second usage:

Pintar djuga ja kamu tjari kartjis. (19b35a) 'You sure are good at getting tickets.'

Pintar njanji tu. (19a19b) 'He's good at singing.'

Pintar was formerly confined to colloquial speech, though now it is beginning to be used in formal style as well. The formal equivalent of pintar is pandai /pandej/. (The above examples can also be said with pandai in place of pintar.)

19.4 Dropping of bukan main 'very'

In colloquial style an adjective plus -nja is used as an exclamation by itself: 'how [adjective] it is.' This is a shortening of a sentence with bukan main.

Aduh! Beratnja (=bukan main beratnja) barang nih!

(19c46d) 'Goodness, this is heavy!'

Do Exercise 19D.

19.5 Change of a to e in final closed syllables

In colloquial speech some words which end in an a followed by a consonant replace the a by e. For example:

pintar	-	pinter	'be good at'
tjepat	-	tjepet	'fast'
benar	-	bener	'true'
senang	-	seneng	'happy'
pedas	-	pedes	'hot (spicy)'
teman	-	temen	'friend'

This change does not take place with all words having a plus consonant at the end. (E.g. lekas 'fast' does not change in colloquial speech.)

Bagian B

20a. I'll tell you what, Sir, I'll put you down as top priority, shall I?

*Begini, tuan, saja akan daftarkan tuan sebagai prióritèt pertama, ja?

20b. That means, if there is a vacant place, you will get it.

Itu, artinja, kalau ada nanti tempat kosong, tuan akan
dapat tempat itu.

end up doing [verb] djadi [verb]

20c. If there is someone who doesn't show up, for example, you will get his place.

Kalau ada orang jg tidak djadi berangkat, begitu, tuan akan
dapat tempat itu.

20d. Er, what class to you want, first or second?

A, kelas berapa tuan mau?
Kelas satu atau kelas dua?

21. Er, I would like two tickets; (make it) the cheapest.

*Ja, saja mau dua tikèt jg paling murahlah.

	its being	adanja
22a.	The cheapest is the second class. Er , that is on Tuesdays and Saturdays at five in the morning.	*Kalau jg paling murah itu kelas dua. Ja, itu, adanja hari Selasa dan hari Sabtu djam lima pagi.
22b.	The other ones are all first class.	Jg lain semuanja kelas satu.
23.	What is the price of the first and the second class? Is there a great difference?	Berapa harganja kelas satu dan kelas dua? Banjak bèdanja?
24a.	Well actually, you could say there is a lot, or you could say there isn't ...	Sebenarnja, ja, bisa dikatakan banjak, bisa tidak.
24b.	Because the first class is around 150,000; the one that's second class is around 120,000.	Sebab jg kelas satu itu kirakira seratus lima puluh ribu; jg kelas dua kirakira seratus duapuluh ribu.

25. Well, in that case, just give me first class.

Ja, kalau begitu, kasi sadjalah, kelas satu.

26a. Yes, OK. (Let's do it) that way. I'll put you down on the list now.

Ja baiklah begitu, saja daftarkan tuan sekarang.

let someone know

kasi tahu

26b. Your name and your address and where you are staying, so that if there is a place, I can let you know right away.

Nama tuan dan alamat tuan, dan dimana tuan tinggal,

supaja kalau ada tempat,

segera bisa saja kasi tahu.

27a. My! This is actually quite difficult, because I am rarely at home.

Wah, ini agak sukar sebenarnja karena saja djarang dirumah.

[particle asking for agreement]

lah

27b. Um, let's do it like this: please give me your name and number, so that I can (lit. will just be the one later ...

A beginilah, nona, tjoba nona

kasi nama nona dan nomor

to) call (you).	tèlepon nona, biar saja sadjalah jg tèlepon nanti.
28. Oh, here (lit. this) is my card.	Ó, ini kartu saja.
[particle with assent]	lah
29. Thank you, Ma'am. I'll call later.	Terima kasih, njonja, nanti saja tèleponlah.
30. You're welcome.	Kembali.
(Later)	(Kemudiannja)
31a. Hello, is this Garuda?	Haló, Garuda disitu?
31b. Please give me Mrs. Sumardi from the booking department.	Tjoba kasi Njonja Sumardi dari bagian tikèt.
32. Yes, this is Mrs. Sumardi. Who is this speaking?	Ja, ini Njonja Sumardi.
	Siapa jg bitjara ini?

33. This is Lee. I'd like to inquire about (lit. How about) my ticket to Medan tomorrow morning.

Saja ini Li. Bagaimana tikèt saja untuk ke Mèdan bèsok pagi?

34a. Oh yes, your ticket.

Ó, tikèt tuan itu.

end up doing [verb] djadi [verb]

34b. Umm, it's like this, there is a slight change now. The flight which was supposed to leave on Friday at five, is not leaving.

Mm, begini, ini ada perubahan. Kapal terbang jg berangkat hari Djumahat djam lima, tidak djadi berangkat.

34c. Anyway, it has been replaced by the 6:30 flight.

Nah, lalu diganti dengan kapal terbang jg djam enam tigapuluh.

34d. For that reason, I think you have a very slim hope of getting a place on it, because there will be many people who have to change flights.

Karena itu saja kira, tipis sekali harapan untuk dapat tempat disitu, sebab banjak orang jg harus pindah kapal terbang.

35. How about the Saturday (flight)?

Bagaimana kalau jg hari Sabtu?

36a. The one on Saturday -- just a second, let me take a look.

Jg hari Sabtu, tjoba saja lihat sebentar.

36b. The one on Saturday is not going to go either, Sir. I'm very sorry.

Jg hari Sabtu, djuga tidak djadi berangkat, tuan.

Maaf sekali.

36c. The best thing to do is this (lit. Just this way): can you call back tomorrow?

Begini sadja, tuan, bisa tuan tèlepon lagi bèsok?

36d. It is very possible that that flight won't be delayed after all.

Mungkin sekali kapal terbang itu tidak djadi ditunda.

36e. So ... although actually it will be hard to get a ticket too.

Djadi, ja, walaupun sebenarnja agak susah djuga mendapat tikèt.

37. Of course, You just help me. We understand each other.

*Ja, njonja tolonglah, tahu sama tahu kita.

38a. Yes, Sir, I know.

Ja tuan, saja tahu.

38b. I would like to help you very much, but you know, what can I do? This is beyond my control.

*Saja ingin sekali menolong, tapi, ja, bagaimana? Ini diluar kekuasaan saja.

38c. If I may advise (you), how about if you just take the boat.

Kalau bolèh saja nasihatkan, bagaimana kalau ambil kapal laut sadja?

38d. That is more sure to go.

Itu lebih pasti berangkatnja.

39. Yes, OK, if that's the case. Thanks very much anyway.

*Ja, baiklah kalau begitu.

Terima kasih banjaklah.

[particle asking for assent] dah

40. Yes, actually I ... you understand, what can we do? A thousand apologies.

Ja, sebenarnja saja, bagaimana, ... ja? Maaf beribu maaf dah.

20IB. Pertanjaan2:

1. Ada tempat jg kosong disana?
2. Apa biasanja banjak orang jg tidak djadi berangkat?
3. Apa tuan mau kalau saja daftarkan nama/tuan didaftar prioritèt ini?
4. Kalau tikèt jg paling murah, berapa harganja?
5. Apa bosar bèdanja umur abangmu dengan umurmu, Mus?
6. Apa banjak bèdanja harga kartjis kelas satu dan kelas dua?
7. Dimana alamat tuan? Bisa saja tèlepon tuan?
8. Apa Njonja Sumardi itu dibagian tikèt?
9. Ja, ini Njonja Sumardi. Siapa jg bitjara ini?
10. Djon, tikèt saja ilang nih. Apa kamu lihat barangkali?
11. Ada perubahan apa nih. Masa ditunda lagi?
12. Wah, masa kapal terbang itu nggak djadi berangkat lagi?
13. Kepala sekolah itu sudah diganti, ja?
14. Aduh, tipis sekali harapan untuk dapat tikèt kapal terbang. Bagaimana kalau naik kerèta api sadja?
15. Bagaimana kalau jg hari Sabtu?

16. Mus, kenapa kamu tunda2 keberangkatanmu ke Indónésia?

17. Aduh maaf sadja, Mus. Itu diluar kekuasaan saja. Bagaimana kalau ditunda sadja keberangkatannja?

18. Bolèh saja beri nasihat sedikit?

19. Kapan pastinja kamu berangkat?

20. Masih bisa diubah, ndak, peladjaran itu?

20IIB. Tjotjokkanlah:

1. Siapa Njonja Sumardi?	a. Tentara dong.
2. Djon, lebih baik tèlpon lagilah kantor Garuda itu.	b. Ó dia itu kawannja si Djon.
3. Kalau nggak dapat kartjis nanti, bagaimana?	c. Katanja, lebih baik kita ambil kapal laut sadja.
4. Siapa jg mendapat prióritèt pertama?	d. Ah, masa nggak bisa. Kan pegawai jg didalam itu teman saja.
5. Wah ndak bisa dapat kartjis rupanja, kita nih. Susah!	e. Kira2 tiga hari.
6. Apa nasihat Njonja Sumardi?	f. Ó ia, ja. Kalau hari Sabtu nanti sudah telat.
7. Ah mengapa sih hotèl itu penuh lagi?	g. Ah naik kapal laut djuga djadi, kalau nggak dapat kartjis.
8. Berapa lama sih dari sini ke Mèdan kalau naik kapal laut?	h. Djangan, ndak usah tèlepon. Kan keberangkatan kapal terbangnja tidak ditunda?
9. Saja mau naik kapal laut sadja. Saja nggak mau tunggu sampai hari Sabtu.	i. Kira2 lima puluh ribu rupiah.
10. Berapa bèdanja harga kartjis kelas satu dan kelas dua?	j. Abis, dipakai tentara lagi!

Bagian C

(John hangs up and talks with his friend Irawan.)

(Djon meletakkan tèlepon dan bitjara dengan temannja Irawan.)

41a. Ts, this is bad, Wan. I (lit. we) can't get tickets.

*Wah, pajah ini, Wan. Tidak dapat kartjis kita.

41b. But the (lit. that) ticket seller said it would be better just to take a boat. What do wo do now?

*Tapi itu tukang tikèt bilang, lebih baik naik kapal sadja. Bagaimana ini?

42. Hmm. What do we do if (you) can't get tickets? (You) probably could take a boat as well.

Ja, bagaimana, ja, kalau nggak dapat kartjis? Pakai kapal djuga bisa barangkali.

43. Hmm, where do we go to get tickets for the boat? Probably we could call up.

Kemana, ja, mengurus tikèt untuk kapal? Apa bisa kita tèlepon, barangkali?

44a. Oh don't, don't call them up, (that's)complicated.

Ah djangan, djangan ditèlepon, susah.

44b. We'd better just go (lit. come) there to their office. We can talk to them in person.

Lebih baik, kita datang sadja kekantornja disana.

Kita bisa bitjara sendiri dengan orangnja.

44c. Suppose I just take care of it?

Bagaimana kalau saja sadja

jg menguruskan?

45a. Yes, thanks. It would be good.

*Ja, terima kasih, bolèhlah.

[particle with interrogative indicating lessened interest]

46. To get to Medan by boat -- about three days. On Naik kapal ke Mèdan, kirakira

the fourth day (you) arrive there.

tiga hari. Hari keempat sudah sampai disana.

47a. Oh, in that case it won't arrive before Monday morning, will it?

Wah, kalau begitu, sampainja baru hari Senèn pagi, ja?

47b. And we have to leave Friday evening.

Dan kita harus berangkat

Djumat soré.

48a. Just a second. But there is no boat which goes on Friday.

Tunggu dulu. Tapi nggak ada kapal jg berangkat hari Djumat.

one that there is — adanja [=jg ada] either is ... or is ... — kalau tidak ..., ...

48b. The (lit. that) one that there is, is either on Wednesday or on Saturday.

Adanja itu, kalau nggak ari Rabu, ari Sabtu.

49a. In that case, we'd better leave on Wednesday. If it is on Saturday, it will be too late.

Kalau begitu, lebih baik, ari

Rabu sadja kita berangkat.

Kalau ari Sabtu sudah terlalu lambat.

49b. Let's try if we can get the one for this Wednesday.

Tjoba apa tidak bisa kapal hari Rabu ini kita dapat.

49c. By the way, what time does the ship leave?

Djam berapa sih, kapalnja berangkat?

50. I don't know about that for sure.

Saja ndak tahu pasti tentang itu.

51a. But we had better just go there now.

Tetapi lebih baik, kita pergi kesana sadjalah, sekarang.

Ah biasanja itu sudah siang.

let's hope that — minta2 sadja

56. OK, let's hope the boat isn't late (in leaving).

Ja, mintaminta adjalah djangan terlambat kapalnja.

57a. Oh, that's no problem -- (if it's) late or not.

Ó itu tidak djadi soal -- terlambat atau tidak.

57b. Even if it leaves a bit earlier, you will arrive there at night, and usually you all won't be able to get off the boat before eight in the morning.

*Kalaupun nanti berangkatnja lebih lekas, sampai disana malam, dan biasanja kalian belon bolèh turun dari kapal sebelum djam delapan pagi.

58a. Yes, that could very well happen.

Ja, bisa sadjalah itu, nanti.

worry about — kuatir

58b. Don't worry.

Djangan kuatir dèh.

58c. I'll telegraph Daud to come and get us.

Nanti saja tèlegram si Daud supaja dia datang mendjemput kami.

59. Oh yes, one more thing. Watch your things. Don't trust the porters too much; things can get lost.

Ó ja, satu lagi. Awas barang. Djangan terlalu pertjaja sama kuli. Nanti bisa hilang barang.

60. Oh yes, that's so. If I don't, Ani will watch our things.

Wah, ia, betul. Tapi nanti kalau bukan saja, Ani jg djaga barang.

61a. Yes, all right, in that case.

A , baiklah kalau begitu.

harbor pelabuhan /pelabuan/

61b. When (you all) leave (later), we'll take you to the pier.

Kalau berangkat nanti, kami akan mengantarkan kalian kepelabuhan.

61c. Good-bye.

*Sudah ja?

62. OK, thank you.

Ia dèh. Terima kasih.

20IC. Pertanjaan2:

Ulasan

20a3 ja — Here ja is used preceding what the person is about to say because he does not want to just barge right into saying what is on his mind.

numpang tanja This is a colloquial way of saying 'May I ask ...?' Tumpang means 'take advantage of using someone's possession at the same time that he is using it': menumpang mobil 'ask for a ride,' menumpang makan 'board at someone's house,' menumpang djalan 'ask to use someone's path,' menumpang mandi 'ask to use someone's bathroom,' etc. Menumpang by itself means 'ride in someone else's vehicle or stay in someone else's house.'

20a9 siangan This is the word siang 'late (toward noon)' with a suffix -an, used in colloquial style (but not in formal speech) to form words meaning 'be more [adjective].' (See 19.11)

20a19b The buyer is obviously asking if the clerk won't pull some strings for him (as she has clearly indicated that there are no spaces available). The implication is that the buyer will pay a bit extra, although it would not be proper to say it right out.

20b20a The clerk is obviously accepting the proposal, as she is putting him at the head of the list. The implication is that if he gets the ticket, of course she will get a tip.

20b21	murahlah	The lah here means 'I will agree to it! The cheapest is OK.'
20b22a	adanja	This is ada 'there is' plus a noun former -nja. Adanja means 'its being (existence) is ....' Here we translate, 'it is on ....'
20b37	ja	Here the ja is used to make time while the speaker is thinking of what to say, so as not to plunge into something delicate right away.
	tahu sama tahu	'You and I know something that other people don't know.' This expression is used when making a secret agreement or when gossiping about something.
20b38b	ja	Here ja is used to mean 'you understand, don't you?'
20b39	terima kasih banjaklah	'Thanks anyway. (Lit. All right, I agree in that case.)'
20c41a	pajah	'Difficult.' Pajah is used to mean 'difficult' only in colloquial speech.

		A more formal way to say 'difficult' is susah. (Pajah is also used in formal or colloquial speech to mean 'weak.')
	kita	'I.' (In colloquial speech kita is used for saja.)
20c41b	itu tukang tikèt	This is colloquial for tukang tikèt itu.
20c45a	bolèhlah	This is a colloquial way of saying 'that would be good.'
20c52b	abis	(This is colloquial for habis.) Habis in the meaning 'because (what do you expect?)' is used in colloquial speech.
20c54	bener	In a colloquial style a is changed to e in some words which have e in the first syllable: senang, seneng; pedas, pedes; tjepat, tjepet (see 19:5).
20c57b	kalian	This is colloquial speech for second person plural. It gives the same feeling as y'all for southerners.
	belon	This is colloquial speech for belum.

20c61c sudah This is a colloquial way of saying good-bye. Sudah is used to indicate assent. When saying good-bye in Indonesian one asks for permission to go. Thus sudah is used to agree to the request. From this use, the use of sudah has been widened to include contexts where one is asking permission to go. The idea is something like this: 'Let's agree (to part), shall we?'

20III. Pertjakapan:

Dari Djakarta Djon mau ke Mèdan.

D: Mus, apa mèmang susah dapat tikèt kapal terbang disini?

M: Kenapa Djon? Mèmang biasanja agak susah, tapi kalau ada kenalan, gampang adja. Mau kemana sih, kok tjari2 tikèt?

D: Saja diundang si Daulat untuk kerumahnja di Mèdan. Kami mau berburu di Tapanuli hari Minggu. Maunja hari Djumat kami berangkat dengan kapal terbang, supaja hari Saptu saja sama si Daulat bisa berangkat ke Tapanuli.

M: Djumat ini atau Djumat jg satu lagi?

D: Djumat jg satu lagi, minggu depan.

M: Kan masih banjak waktu dan kalau nggak dapat kapal terbang, naik kapal djuga masih sempat.

D: È, djangan naik kapal dong, nanti terlalu lama didjalan. Saja masih banjak urusan disini. Djuga isteri saja, kalau terlalu lama didjalan, dia ketjapaian.

M: Ia dèh, saja urusin. Djangan kuatir, tahu berangkat adja!

D: Kok kedengarannja gampang adja, Mus? Saja sudah kesana sini! Mèmang ada pegawai Garuda jg menasèhatkan supaja naik kapal laut. Tentu adja saja nggak mau.

M: Ó, sebenarnja begini Djon, merèka itu biasanja suka menolong. Saja punja teman di Garuda, minta2 adja dia bisa nolong. E, kalau berangkat hari Kemis, kamu mau?

D: Djangan dong, hari Kemis saja masih ada kerdjaan. Tapi djam berapa, ja? Kalau bisa berangkat soré, kerdjaannja saja tjoba selesaikan siangnja.

M: Kalau berangkat djam dua, djam empat sudah sampai di Mèdan.

D: Baiklah ... tapi ... ini tahu sama tahu, kan? Berapa harus saja tambah?

M: Ah, kamu itu, jg bener adja dong, Djon. Masa pakai tahu sama tahu! Perlunja punja teman, ja, itu, untuk saling menolong. Kan dulu di Amérika kamu sering menolong saja. Kapan lagi saja bisa berbuat sesuatu untuk kamu!

D: Kalau gitu, terima kasih banjak ja, Mus! Itulah untungnja punja teman baik, kaja kamu, Mus.

Benar atau salah:

1. Mustafa bertanja pada Djon, kemana dia mau pergi.
2. Mustafa mengatakan, biasanja tidak susah mendapat tikèt. Mudah sadja selalu.
3. Djon akan pergi berburu dengan si Daulat hari Djumat, minggu jg akan datang.
4. Isteri Djon akan senang naik kapal.
5. Djon tidak punja banjak waktu, karena dia banjak urusan di Djakarta.
6. Mustafa tidak mau menguruskan supaja Djon bisa berangkat.
7. Pegawai Garuda memberi Djon nasèhat supaja naik kapal laut sadja.
8. Mustafa tidak punja kenalan di Garuda.
9. Djon bisa berangkat hari Kemis kalau kerdjaannja selesai.
10. Mustafa mau menolong Djon karena Djon mau membajarnja.
11. Djon pernah menolong Mustafa.
12. Djon merasa beruntung punja teman baik seperti Mus.

20IV. Free Conversation

A. John's friend, Tono, asks him when he plans to go to Denpasar. John replies he wants to go this week as soon as he can get a ticket. He asks if it is easy to get reservations on the plane. Tono says, well, it is rather difficult. He explains to John that he travels very often by plane and he knows almost all the schedules. John says that if that is the case, Tono can give him information. For instance, he asks, is there a plane that leaves for Denpasar on Wednesday. Yes, Tono replies, there's one on Wednesday. Without waiting for the rest of what Tono has to say, John says that he'd better call up the office and make some reservations. Tono tells him to wait a minute. He says he will explain. He goes on to say that there are planes that leave every day except Monday. They all go to Denpasar but some take long to get there, and on certain days it takes only a few hours. John, a little annoyed now, asks how that is possible. Tono says that on Tuesdays and Thursdays the planes go to Denpasar directly. The rest of the days, the planes go to Jogja and Surabaya first before they go to Denpasar. John understands and says that that means he should try to get on the Thursday flight then. Tono says, that's right, but that John should go in person to the ticket office. John agrees to do that.

B. John greets the lady at the ticket counter. She offers to help John. John tells her he would like to buy a plane ticket to Denpasar on either Tuesday or Thursday. The lady checks to see if there are any seats available and then tells John that the Tuesday flight is full. However, he can get on the Thursday one. John says it's all right and asks what time the plane leaves. She tells him it leaves at five-thirty in the morning and arrives at Denpasar at about eight-thirty. John says he doesn't want to leave so early in the morning. He asks if there are other flights to Denpasar. She says, yes there are. On Wednesdays and Fridays they leave Djakarta at ten in the morning, and on Saturdays and Sundays at one in the afternoon, but these flights are all full. John asks how come, and the lady explains that the Army is given first priority. Further, many Army officials travel these days. John asks the lady if she could help him get a seat on Wednesday anyway by pulling strings. She promises she will, indicating a tip is expected [hint: 'we understand each other']. She asks John for his name, address and phone number so she can tell him right away if she gets him a place. John says he is rarely at home and asks if it would be all right to call her up about it. The lady says of course it is all right. So John thanks her and bids her good-bye.

20VC. Intonation Exercises. The intonation of terms of address and other words at the end of a phrase. Certain words which follow the stressed word of the predicate such as titles and names used in addressing people and short particles which have emotive meaning such as dong, dèh, dah, lah and sih, continue the intonation pattern of the preceding phrase. If the phrase which precedes these words has a fall on the last syllable, the word of address and/or emotive particle which are added at the end continue the fall. If the phrase preceding has a rise, the words which are added continue the rise. For example, in the following phrase there is a rise on the last syllable of berapa:

Berapa? 'How much?'

When sih is added, sih continues the rise:

Berapa sih? 'How much, by the way?'

There is a fall on the last syllable of berapa in the following example:

Djam berapa? 'What time?'

When sih is added, sih continues the drop:

Djam berapa sih? 'By the way, what time?'

Other examples with a term of address and a particle:

[With a drop] Ada apa sih, Djon? 'What is it, John?'

[With a rise] Ajó dèh, Djon. 'OK, John.'

Read the following sentences with a continuing rise on the word added at the end, set off by a comma (phrases with a 324 pattern):

1. Selamat pagi, nona.
2. Ada apa, tuan?
3. Hari Sabtu ini, tuan ....
4. Maaf beribu maaf, dah.
5. Silakan masuk, tuan.
6. Duduk dulu, tuan.
7. Berapa lama, sih?
8. Naik, dèh tuan.
9. Selamat soré, ibu.
10. Seribu lima ratus, pak.

Read the following sentences continuing the drop on the word added at the end of the phrase, set off by a comma (phrases with a 243 pattern):

1. Begini, tuan.
2. Begini sadja, tuan.
3. Ada apa, sih Djon.
4. Djam tudjuh pagi jg paling siang, tuan.
5. Jg hari Sabtu djuga tidak djadi berangkat, tuan.
6. Mau minum apa, nak?
7. Kenapa tjepat2, Djon?
8. Dan dia kepingin bertemu dengan kalian, dong.

mempengaruhi — 'Had influence on.' This word is composed of a base pengaruh 'influence' to which the transitive-verb-forming suffix -i 'on' has been added. [11.3] When meN- is added to pengaruhi the p is not dropped and meN- has the shape /mem/.

seni tari — 'The art of the dance.'

misalnja sadja	'Some examples are ...'
gerak2 berirama	'Rhythmical movements.' Berirama is formed by adding ber- to the noun irama 'rhythm' to form a verb meaning 'have rhythm.' [14.23]
3. penjelidikan	'Investigation.' This word is formed by adding the abstract-noun-forming affixes peN--an to the verb selidiki 'investigate.' [15.311] The -i of the verb is dropped when noun-forming affixes peN--an, per--an, -an, or peN- are added.
sering djuga	'Quite frequently.' For the meaning of djuga see [10.46] teratur	'Orderly (lit. has been arranged).' This word is formed by adding ter- to atur 'arrange.' [14.12]
baik ... maupun	'Not only ... but also ...' [20.21]
terbatas pada	'Limited to.' Terbatas is formed by adding ter- to batasi 'put limits to.' The -i of the base is dropped. [14.13]
daerah jg tertentu sadja	'Predetermined areas.' Tertentu is formed by adding ter- to tentukan 'determine, fix.' The -kan of the base is dropped. [14.13]
ketahui	'Find out about.' The root of this word is tahu 'know.' The affixes ke--i are added to tahu to form a transitive verb ketahui 'find out about.' Ketahui is one of the few common words in Indonesian which is formed by affixing ke--i to the root.

hasil karja 'Achievement, results of someone's activity.'

4. kaja raja 'Very rich.'

para penjelidik 'Researchers.' The word para is placed before nouns referring to persons in a certain capacity to form plurals. [20.24] The word penjelidik 'researcher' is formed by prefixing peN- an agent-forming affix [16.7] to the verb selidiki 'investigate.' The affix -i of selidiki is dropped. (See the note to penjelidikan 3 above.)

selain itu 'In addition to that.'

5. setjara kasar 'In a rough way...'

latar belakang 'Background.'

sekaligus 'At the same time , all at once.'

6. suatu 'A.' Suatu [= sesuatu] is used as the equivalent of se- plus counter before abstract things. Seorang anak 'a child,' sebuah djeruk 'an orange,' suatu hal 'a matter.'

ialah 'Is.' Ialah is a synonym for adalah. [14.42] memperhalus 'Makes it finer.' Perhalus 'make finer' is formed by adding per- a transitive-verb-forming prefix to the adjective halus. [23.21]

b(1). Kalau begitu, kapal itu baru sampai hari Senin pagi, ja? 'In that case the boat won't arrive before Monday, will it?'

20.11 Conversion of words with -nja to verbs with ber-

The sentence type consisting of a noun plus -nja as subject and a predicate [5.5 ff.] is avoided in formal style. In place of this sentence type one uses in formal style a sentence containing a predicate consisting of a noun root to which the verb forming prefix ber- [14.2 ff.] has been added.

c. Itu artinja tuan akan dapat tempat itu. (20b20b) 'That means you will get that place.'

c(1). Itu berarti tuan akan dapat tempat itu. 'That means you will get that place.'

d. Tjanting kepalanja tembaga. 'The tjanting has a copper head.'

d(1). Tjanting berkepala tembaga. 'The "tjanting" has a copper head.'

For this section do Exercises 20A1 and 2.

20.12 Nouns formed by adding -nja to verbs used in sentences referring to actions for which the agent is not expressed

A noun formed by adding -nja to a verb is used in sentences which refer to an action but in which the agent is not expressed. In such sentences the noun containing -nja is the subject. The predicate is a phrase referring to the time or the place. In the following examples the subject is underlined once and the predicate twice:

a. Bis ada djuga tapi nunggunja lama. 'There are buses too, but you have to wait long for them.' [The agent of the action of waiting is not expressed by the Indonesian -- though we say you in the English equivalent.]

b. Hari Selasa berangkatnja djam lima pagi. 'On Thursdays it leaves at five in the morning.'

20.2 Word study

20.21 Pun

We have had pun in the meaning of 'also, as well.' (It is written as one word together with the word it precedes.) It follows the subject:

Tidak apa. Potlotpun djadi. (3b30) 'Never mind. A pencil will do as well.'

Selain anaknja diapun kaja. 'In addition to his children, he too is rich.'

Pun also has a meaning 'even ...' Pun in this meaning is frequently used following the subject or a topic in negative sentences:

Sedikitpun tidak ada jg dimakannja. 'He didn't eat anything, not even a little bit.'

Sajapun belum menerima gadji, apalagi bawahan saja. 'Even I haven't gotten paid yet, much less the people under me.'

Pun is added to conjunctions forming new conjunctions: kalaupun 'even if', walaupun, biarpun 'although', ataupun 'or even.'

Kalaupun nanti berangkatnja lebih lekas, sampai disana malam. (20c57b) 'Even if it leaves a bit earlier, it will arrive in the evening.'

Walaupun sebenarnja agak susah djuga mendapat tikèt.... 'Although actually it will be rather difficult to get a ticket...'

Wanita Indónésia memakai bahan jg dihiasi pola batik ataupun kain batiknja sendiri.

'Indonesian girls wear cloth with a batik design or even batik itself.'

Baik ... maupun means 'not only ... but also':

Penjelidikan2 jg telah diadakan itu, baik sebelum maupun sesudah perang dunia kedua, hampir semuanja masih terbatas pada beberapa matjam tarian daèrah jg tertentu sadja. (20R3) 'The research which has been carried out not only before but also after the war was confined to a few types of dances from selected regions.'

Do Exercise 20Bff.

20.22 Lah

In Lesson 11 we studied four uses of lah [11.5]: (1) as particle asking for assent:

A beginilah (nona) ... (20b27b) 'Um, let's do it like this ...'

(2) As a particle with a statement giving assent:

Ja baiklah kalau begitu. (20b39) 'All right, if that is the case.'

(3) With commands:

Kasilah saja air. 'Please give me some water.'

(4) Following the main word of the predicate if the predicate precedes the subject:

Dengan demikian berkembanglah kebudajaan jg bertjorak Hindu. (19R3) 'In this way a civilization with Hindu characteristics flourished.'

Lah is also used in literary styles following a word or phrase which precedes the predicate and which modifies the rest of the sentence or the predicate.

Dari djaman itulah kita kenal keradjaan2 besar dipulau Djawa. (19R4) 'From that period we learn about large kingdoms on the island of Java.' [Dari djaman itu 'from that period, modifies the rest of the sentence. It precedes the predicate kenal keradjaan2 besar 'find large kingdoms.'

Therefore, lah may be put after itu.]

Laut bukanlah mendjadi pemisah melainkan penghubung antara pulau2 jg be-ratus2 itu.

(19R1) 'The sea became not a divider but rather a means of communication among these hundreds of islands.' [Bukan modifies the predicate

mendjadi pemisah.]

Do Exercise 20Cff.

20.23 Maka

One meaning of maka is 'consequently':

Karena kamu marah, maka dia tidak datang lagi. 'Because you were mad (consequently) he isn't going to come back any more.'

Itulah sebabnja maka dia tidak datang lagi.

'That is the reason (consequently) he isn't coming back any more.'

Maka itu or makanja means 'on account of that, it':

Kamu marah, makanja (maka itu) dia tidak datang lagi. 'You were mad. That's why he did not come back any more.'

In literary style, maka is used after kalau 'if.'

In this context maka means 'then':

Kalau dipikirkan lebih djauh lagi, maka laut mendjadi penghubung antara pulau2 jg be-ratus2 itu.

(19R1) 'If one thinks about it further, (then) he sees the sea is actually a means of communication between these hundreds of islands.'

Do Exercise 20Dff.

20.24 Para

In formal styles para is optionally placed before nouns referring to persons in a certain capacity (persons who engage in certain activities or who have a certain role or status) to indicate plurality: para mahasiswa di Universitas Madjapahit 'students in Madjapahit University,' para penumpang 'passengers,' etc. (Para may always be omitted.)

> Perbendaharaan seni tari Indónésia jg kaja raja masih menunggu penggalian olèh para penjelidik dan peminat seni tari. (20R4) 'The very rich treasury of Indonesian dance art, still awaits exploration by scholars and observers of the art of the dance.'

20.3 Masuk for masuki

Masuk is often used as a synonym for masuki (memasuki).

> Kebudajaan jg datangnja dari luar wilajah Nusantara, djuga memakai lautan untuk masuk [= memasuki] Indónésia. 'The civilization which originated outside of the area of the Archipelago, also entered Indonesia by way of the seas.'

20.4 The days of the week

The following lists the names of the days of the week. There are alternative pronunciations for most of them:

Monday	Senin or Senén or Senèn
Tuesday	Selasa
Wednesday	Rebó or Rabu
Thursday	Kamis or Kemés or Kemis
Friday	Djumat or Djumahat or Djum'at (/djumqat/)
Saturday	Sabtu(/saptu/) or Saptu
Sunday	Minggu or Ahad (/ahat/)

20.5 Numbers followed by -an

Number plus -an means 'by the [number] in quantity, [numbers] in quantity.' (This -an is the same as the suffix described in Lesson 19 (19.11f.) where we discussed -an with adjectives and with measurements.)

Negara Indónésia terdiri dari ribuan pulau.

(20R1) 'Indonesia consists of thousands of islands.'

Ratusan orang berdèrèt dimuka rumah sakit.

'People lined up in front of the hospital by the hundreds.'

A number plus -an also means 'one which is worth [so-and-so much].'

Maaf, ja. Saja hanja ada uang ribuan. 'Excuse me. I only have thousand (rupiah notes).'

18c. Mmm, but if you want to ask that person yourself if she wants to exchange rooms ...	Ja, tapi kalau njonja mau tanja sendiri pada orang itu apa dia mau tukar kamar ...

	have objections (lit. be affected by heaviness)	keberatan
18d.	I don't have any objections myself.	Saja sendiri tidak keberatan.
18e.	That person's room is over there -- room number 20.	Kamar orang itu -- sana -- kamar nomor duapuluh.
19.	What is the name of that person?	Siapa nama orangnja itu?
20.	Oh, the one who is there is named Mrs. Abdullah.	Ó, jg disitu itu namanja Njonja Abdullah.
21.	Oh yes. Thank you, Sir.	Ó ia. Terima kasih, tuan.
22a.	You're welcome. If there is anything I can help you with, just come here.	Kembali. Kalau ada jg bisa saja tolong, datang sadja kesini.
22b.	Our office is always open until the boat leaves.	Kantor kami buka terus sampai kapal berangkat.

23. Yes. If there is anything, we'll come. — Ia, nanti kalau ada apaapa, kami datang.

21IA. Pertanjaan2:

1. Dipelabuhan berapa kapalnja?
2. Mesti keliling, nggak, djalannja kesana?
3. Apa namanja pelabuhan Djakarta?
4. Kalau kita pergi kesana naik bètjak, apa musti keliling djalannja?
5. Tambah ongkosnja sedikit lagi, ja, pak?
6. Pelan2, ndak apa2, ja?
7. Bagaimana kalau kita mau lekas sampai kesana?
8. Perlu kulinja, njah?
9. Panggilin dong kulinja, Mus. Gimana sih?
10. Kalau satu sadja, tjukup, nggak, kulinja?
11. Wah ini barangnja banjak bener, nja!
12. Perlu dua orang lagi nih?

Ulasan

21a1	njah	Working class people often shorten njonja 'Ma'am' to njah when putting it at the end of the sentence.
21a3	djalannja	Note that in Indonesian verbs of motion (meaning 'come', 'go', etc) are commonly made into nouns by adding nja in sentences telling how the motion is to be. Thus here instead of saying 'We'll have to go round-about,' they say, 'The going will have to be round about.'
21a4	biarin	The affix -in in colloquial corresponds to -kan or -i in formal Indonesian. This stands for biarkan 'allow it to be.'
21a5	dikit	In colloquial speech s is dropped in some common words sama, sadja, satu, et al. In sedikit se is dropped.

	ja	This is the ja put at the end of a question or statement asking for agreement.
21a10c	adja	This is colloquial for sadja. See the note to sentence 5.
21a11	dèh	This is dèh, which is a particle with an assent to something which is not desirable, but the best choice under the circumstances.
21a12f f.		In this part of the lesson, the conversation is more formal. However, certain features of colloquial speech are still present. These sentences should be read with q in some words and without h's (except before pause) (though we do not mark these features here).
21a17a	ja	The ja here is used in the meaning, 'Did I understand right? That is what it is, isn't it?'

21a17c	suka	Suka is used before some adjectives to mean 'is often [adjective]': Suka marah2 is 'always annoyed'; suka dingin 'is cool from time to time.'
21b25c	numpang tanja	This is a colloquial way of saying 'May I ask ...' Numpang is the colloquial form of menumpang from tumpang (with N for meN-). Tumpang has as its basic meaning 'piled upon.' It also carries the meaning 'use something which belongs to someone else at the same time as he is using it.'
21b27a	keberatan	'Have objections.' This word is formed by adding to berat an affix ke -- an 'be affected by.' Literally, this means 'be heavy for you.'
21b28 a		The lady here follows a standard formula for refusing a request: she explains that she understands; she gives a reason why it is to John's advantage if she refuses; and she saves John from being humiliated by the refusal by saying that she would accede to the request, if John insisted.

2129a,b	lah	The lah after terima kasih and tidak usah sadja means 'Well, in that case, thanks anyway; in that case, it's all right' (implying that something else would be better). In colloquial speech dèh or dah are used in this same meaning. Cf. sentence 11.)
2129c	maaf, ja	The ja here is asking for agreement. 'Excuse me, OK?'
21c36c	ja	The word ja is used here in the sense of 'do you follow me?'
21c37a	begitulah	The lah here is used in the sense of an exhortation -- 'may it be that way.'
21c37b	tentunja, ja	Tentunja is colloquial for tentu. Ja here is used in the sense of 'do you follow me?'
21c38b	ja	The ja here has the same meaning as in 36c and 37b above.
21c40a	kita	In colloquial speech kita often is used in place of kami, i.e., kita means both 'we (including you)' and 'we (not you).' In this sentence Mrs. Lee says kita ingin 'we would like' in place of kami ingin, but in the next sentence she uses kami.

21c46	ja	This is the ja asking the hearer if he understands, as in 36c, 37b and 38b above.
21c47a	dari mana	This is used in colloquial speech to mean 'Where were you?'
	sadja	Sadja with interrogatives elicits explicit information: 'name the ...' 'Exactly where have you been?'
21c47c	dibèrèsin	This is colloquial for dibèrèskan 'be put in order.'
21d51a	dipertjajain	This is colloquial for dipertjajai 'be trusted'.
21d51b	bini	In most places isteri is used for 'wife' when one respects the woman. Bini is used to refer to a woman of low class. In classical Malay and in some places in Indonesia bini is the ordinary word for 'wife' and does not imply disrespect. For 'husband' suami is the usual word, but laki may be used with a meaning analogous to that of bini -- husband of low class.
21d52a	ia dèh	'All right.' Ia dèh, like English all right, is used to close the conversation and switch to a new topic.

	sudahlah	'Let there be no more.' The lah is used to ask for assent. Sudah signals the end of the conversation, 'that's all we have to say, let's drop the subject.'

21IV. Free Conversation

A. Pretend that you and your wife are staying in a hotel in Djakarta and you are going to travel by ship from Jakarta to Medan. You call a taxicab to go to the harbor of Tandjung Priok. The cab driver asks you where to go. You answer that you are going to the harbor, but your wife still wants to do some shopping. You add that you are leaving for Medan but you are afraid you won't be able to recognize the boat for Medan. The driver asks if he may see your ticket for a second.

You give it to him. He reads it and then he reminds you not to be late at the harbor because people say it isn't easy to get a nice cabin on board if you don't get there early to arrange it. You wonder why it should be that way since your cabin is already reserved. The driver insists that it would be wise to get there early even so, since a reservation does not always guarantee a room. You accept his advice and ask him if he can drive you over to the shopping area. He says, surely he can, but adds, he'll have to go round about, which means you have to add a bit more to the fare. You tell him it doesn't matter as long as you can get there. You add that since you should get there early, you are willing to pay more. The driver says you don't have to worry because it won't take him very long to drive to the harbor. You say you're glad to get this information, but you ask him not to drive too fast.

B. Pretend that you and your wife are on board the ship. Your wife complains of a terrible headache. She says she does not like the room and insists you go to the captain's cabin. You ask why she is such a nuisance. She gets mad and says she wants you to see the captain and tell him that you want to change your room because it is not so convenient to stay in a room near the stairs. It is too noisy. Especially when she is not feeling well. You say you know a solution and that's why you don't have to go see the captain. She asks what you have in mind. You say you met a lady this morning who is staying by herself in room 27. Then your wife asks why you didn't tell her about meeting this lady. She says she doesn't like the idea of exchanging rooms. You tell her the woman seems nice and wants to get acquainted with her. She agrees and adds that it probably would be more fun to travel deck class and that she wants to take a stroll on the deck now. You complain she should put the things in order before going out of the room for a stroll. She answers she will be back soon anyway. You inquire whom she is going to meet on the deck. She hesitates for a moment and then declares she is going to see the captain. You express annoyance at this. She explains with impatience that she simply wants to ask him for a better room. Your reaction is to tell her that sailors cannot be trusted. She replies that it's none of your business.

VC. Intonation Exercises. Intonation of sentences which contain tag words (words which have their own intonation). Tag words are the following words which appear at the end of a phrase: ja, kan (= bukan), tidak (nggak, ndak) and belum. Tag words do not affect the intonation of the phrase they follow, but begin slightly below the pitch of the last syllable of the phrase they follow and have a rising intonation.

[at the end of a phrase with a 243 intonation pattern]:

Sudah pergi, ja?

[at the end of a phrase with a 324 intonation pattern]:

Nggak apaapa, ja?

Read the following sentences with a rising intonation on ja and kan after the 324 intonation:

1. Sebenarnja, ja ...

2. Bagaimana, ja?
3. Wah, susah, ja?
4. Tapi, ja....
5. Maaf, ja....
6. Tentunja, ja....
7. Dan seterusnja, ja...
8. Kalau begitu, ja...
9. Terima kasih, ja?
10. Sama sadja, kan?

Read the following sentences with a rising intonation on ja and kan after a 324 intonation, and continue the rise on the terms of address following the words ja or kan:

1. Sebenarnja, ja, pak...

2. Maaf, ja, tuan,...
3. Dan seterusnja, ja, pak....
4. Terima kasih, ja, pak?
5. Kalau dengan sarapan, ja, tuan....
6. Kalau begitu, ja, pak....
7. Sama sadja, kan, Mus?

Read the following sentences with a 243 intonation pattern on the phrase preceding the ja or kan with a rise on ja or kan:

1. Lontjèng apa itu, ja?
2. Bèsok malam, ja....
3. Nomor duapuluh tudjuh, ja?
4. Djangan lupa, tuan, ja?
5. Tarik ke Pasar Senèn, ja?
6. Masih ada ès, kan?
7. Wah, manis, ja?
8. Lhó, siapa itu, ja?
9. Kalau ditunggu, lama, ja?
10. Telat sedikit, ndak apaapa, tapi asal datang, ja?

Tidak (nggak or ndak) and belum at the end of a phrase start with a pitch higher than the last syllable of the phrase preceding and then have a drop. The phrase preceding the tidak (etc.) or belum almost always has a 324 pattern.

Mau makan, nggak?

Read the following sentences with a 324 pattern on the phrase preceding tidak (ndak, nggak) and with a rise followed by a fall on tidak (etc.):

1. Apa bisa turun sedikit, ndak?
2. Mau ikut, nggak?
3. Sudah pergi, belum?
4. Masih bisa ditawar sedikit, nggak?
5. Lama perginja, nggak?
6. Pindjam korsi, bisa, ndak?
7. Perlu dibantu, ndak?
8. Sudah kawin dia, belum?

Tata Bahasa

21.1 Constructions describing the manner of performing an action

A common construction representing this meaning is one in which the action to be described is represented by a subject consisting of a verb plus -nja while the manner of performing the action is expressed as the predicate. In the following examples the subject (action) is underlined once and the predicate (manner) is underlined twice.

a. Bis ada djuga, tapi mesti lama nunggunja. (13a6a)
   'There are buses, but you have to wait a long time for them.'

b. Wah, kalau kesana, susah ni, musti keliling djalannja.
   'My, if you go there it is difficult. You have to go round about.'

c. Saja harus keras sekali beladjarnja. 'I have to study very hard.'

Do Exercise 21A ff.

21.2 Verb compounds

Certain verbs occur together with other verbs in idiomatic expressions. Such pairs of verbs are called VERB COMPOUNDS.

21.21 Compounds with suka

Suka followed by certain verbs forms a phrase meaning 'always do (or be) [verb].' E.g. suka ribut 'tends to be noisy,' suka lari 'be timid [always running away],' suka lupa 'be apt to forget,' suka ngantuk 'always be drowsy,' et al.

Sebab kalau dekat tangga, biasanja suka ribut. (21a17b) 'Because it usually tends to be noisy near the stairs.'

Anak itu suka nangis. 'That child is a cry-baby.'

Do Exercise 21B1.

21.22 Compounds with kasi

Kasi followed by certain verbs forms a phrase meaning 'cause someone to do [verb]' or 'cause [verb] to happen to someone': kasi lihat 'show,' kasi masuk 'put in,' kasi tahu 'let someone know,' kasi tundjuk 'show,' kasi naik 'make something high,' kasi sekolah 'send to school.'

Dan pakaian saja sudah saja kasi masuk kelemari disini. (21b28d) 'And I have already put my things away in the wardrobe here.'

Saja kasi sekolah adik2 saja. 'I put my younger brothers and sisters through school.'

Do Exercise 21B2.

21.23 Compounds with salah

Salah is followed by certain verbs to form a phrase meaning 'do [verb] the wrong way or to the wrong thing': salah naik 'get on the wrong train (bus, etc.),' salah potong 'cut the wrong way,' salah paham, salah terima, salah mengerti 'misunderstand,' salah sangka 'err,' salah hitung 'miscalculate,' et al.

Kalau salah potong, awak djuga jg melarat. (21R3) 'If he cuts the wrong way, I'm the one who suffers.'

Maaf ja. Saja salah mengerti tadi. 'Excuse me. I misunderstood.'

Do Exercise 21B3.

21.24 Compounds with main

Main is followed by certain verbs to form a phrase meaning 'do [verb] groundlessly': main tjabut 'pull out unnecessarily,' main potong 'cut up unnecessarily,' main tuduh 'make wild accusations,' etc. Main is also followed by nouns referring to an instrument to form a phrase meaning 'use the instrument without reason':

Dokter main tjabut, main suntik, dan main potong sadja. (21R3) 'The doctor pulls, injects, and cuts up without any reason.'

Do Exercise 21B4.

21.25 Other compound verbs

Two other phrases we have had consisting of compound verbs are: naik turun 'get on and off,' pulang pergi 'go and come back.'

Apa tidak bosan naik turun kapal dari Mèdan ke Djakarta sadja? (21b37b) 'Isn't it boring to keep getting on and off the boat (going from) Medan to Djakarta?

21.3 Ber- -an

Ber- -an is added to a limited number of roots to form verbs which refer to actions done by more than one agent. They have one of two meanings:

(1) do [verb] to each other or be in the state of [verb] with:

kenal	'be acquainted with'	berkenalan	'be acquainted with each other'
djauh	'be far'	berdjauhan	'be far from one another'
dekat	'be near'	berdekatan	'be near to one another'

Saja ingin berkenalan dengan isteri tuan. (21b30b) 'I would like to make your wife's acquaintance.'

Kedua orang itu tidak berkenalan. 'Those two people did not know each other.'

Saja duduk berdekatan dengan dia. 'I sat close to her.'

(2) Ber- -an with a small number of roots forms a verb meaning 'do action of the verb in a group, in a disorderly way':

Burung beterbangan. 'The birds flew away (in a flock).'

Anak2 bekeliaran diatas lantai. 'The children were crawling (in a swarm) over the floor.'

Anak2 berlarian didepan sekolah. 'The children ran around in front of the school.'

Berdjualan means 'be engaged in selling things.' Bepergian means 'go on a trip.'

Orang itu sedang berdjualan. 'That man is selling things.'

Bepergianlah dgn kerèta api. 'Travel by train.'

Do Exercis 21C ff.

21.4 Comparisons

Sama plus adjective plus -nja plus dengan means 'be just as [adjective]':

Tapi,ja, kalau disini sama ributnja, tidak usahlah. (21b29b) 'But, if it is just as noisy here, never mind.'

Often sadja follows sama in this usage:

Tempat saja sama sadja djauhnja. 'My place is just as far away.'

Lebih [adjective] dari pada means 'more [adjective] than.' Kurang [adjective] dari pada means 'less [adjective]. The suffix nja is in most contexts not added to the adjective.

Disana lebih ribut lagi. 'It is nosier there.'

Do Exercise 21D.

21.5 Writing of h in old-fashioned orthography

There are some words which in classical Malay contain two vowels separated by an h, but which in modern speech and orthography drop the h and have a single vowel to replace the two vowels separated by h. The old-fashioned orthography is sometimes still used, however. Common words of this type are:

tjahari	tjari	'seek'
sahaja	saja	'I'
perlahan lahan	pelanpelan	'slowly'
dahulu	dulu	'formerly'
sahadja	sadja	'just'
tahadi	tadi	'just now'

21.6 Word study

21.61 Tiada

Tiada is used in old-fashioned written styles in two meanings:

(1) no, not [= tidak], (2) 'there is no' [= tidak ada].

Tiada jg menolong. 'There were none which helped.'

Tiada berapa lama tuan dokterpun menghampiri Malin Sabar. (21R13) 'Not long after (that) the doctor approached Malin Sabar.'

21.62 Pun

In Lesson 20 [20.21] we studied pun meaning 'also' and meaning 'even.' Here is another example of pun meaning 'even':

Djika matipun matilah. Sekarang aku pergi kedokter.

(21R5) 'Even if (I)die, let(me)die. This time I'm going to the doctor's.'

In still another usage, pun has the meaning 'thereafter, subsequently.' Pun states that the events of the sentence follow those of the preceding sentence. When pun occurs in this usage, it follows the subject, and the subject precedes the predicate. In this usage pun usually has no translation in English:

Tiada berapa lama, tuan dokterpun menghampiri Malin Sabar. (21R13) 'Not long after (that) the doctor (then) approached Malin Sabar.'

Setelah memberi pertolongan jg perlu, tuan dokterpun berkata. (21R23) 'After giving the necessary aid, the doctor (then) said...'

Karena tjapainja iapun tidurlah. 'On account of his tiredness, he (then) fell asleep.'

Do Exercise 21F.

21.63 Djuga and pun meaning 'even if it is only [predicate]' or 'even as much as [predicate]'

Ó tidak apa. Potlot djuga (or potlotpun) djadi. 'Oh, never mind. A pencil is all right too. (Lit. Even if it is a pencil, it is all right.)'

Ah biarin. Keliling djuga (or kelilingpun) nggak apa. Asal sampai. 'Oh, it doesn't matter if (we)go round about. So long as (I)get there.'

Menembus hutan itupun saja berani, asal dengan kamu.

'I'd even go through that jungle as long as it's with you.'

		Ulasan
22a3a	mèmang	'In fact ...'
	nggak mampir2	A negated doubled verb means 'haven't done [so-and-so], though it was expected.' [15.221]
22a7	baru keluar	'Is out at the moment.' Keluar here means 'be not at home' and baru is in its colloquial meaning 'be in the process of doing [verb]' [= sedang]. In another context baru keluar might mean 'have just gone out.'
22a9b	mèmang	Kohar says 'mèmang 'yes, that is so,' because he agrees with Fatimah's previous statement.
22a10	musti	Musti 'must be' is a variant pronunciation of mesti.
22a14e	dia itu	'He, just mentioned ...'
22a19a	ke-mana2	'He went everywhere to ...'
	makanja	'Accordingly, according to what was said before.' [Makanja = maka itu]
22a20a	kerdjaan	This is a colloquial form for pekerdjaan.
22b27	kita	In colloquial speech kita is sometimes substituted for kami. In this context kami is the correct form and would be used in formal speech or in a written style.

22b29a	masa, ja	'It is very surprising!' Masa by itself indicates disbelief, whereas followed by ja, it indicates surprise but not disbelief.
22b30b	Fatimah	Note that Kohar uses his friend's name for 'you.'
22b33a	kita	Again kita is used in colloquial speech instead of kami. See the note for 22b27.
22b37b	saja pergilah	Fatimah is asking for permission to go. 'May I go?!
22c43b	mèmang	'As a matter of fact, actually.' This is a new meaning of mèmang [= sebetulnja, sebenarnja].
	bapak	Since the older man considers himself close to Karim, he refers to himself as bapak rather than saja. Saja used by an older person to a younger indicates a certain social distance (not a very great one, though).
22c58b	saja akan kerdjakan	The usual form is akan saja kerdjakan. However, in Sumatra, people often put the agent of the passive verbs before the auxiliary (akan, mau, harus, dapat, etc.)
22c60c	saja akan kerdjakan	See note to 22c58b.

	mengenèl	'Mop.' With monosyllables (pèl 'mop') the prefix meN- has the shape menge-.
22c61c	pembantu saja itu	'My helper.' Itu has no translation in English. It means 'the one that there is.'
22d66a	kamu sih	'As for you.' As for you, how can you not know.
22d67b	hari Minggu kemarèn ini	'Last Sunday.' [= Hari Minggu jg lalu]
22d81b	dengar2	'Kept hearing (not from any particular source).'
22d81c	saja ini akan	'I (as opposed to the others here) am going to ...'

22III. Pertjakapan:

Bagian A

Fatimah datang kekota, kerumah Kohar.

K: É, Fatimah. Silahkan masuk.

F: Terima kasih, bang.

K: Kapan datangnja? Sudah lama dikota?

F: Ó, belum lama, baru kemarèn.

K: Apa kabarnja? Kok sudah lama tidak mampir2 kesini.

F: Baik2 sadja, bang. Abang djuga, kan?

K: Ja begitulah. Bagaimana kabar famili dikampung? Baik2 sadja, kan?

F: Ja. Mana Titin? Kok dia tidak kelihatan, sedang pergi?

K: Ia, di sedang kepasar. Sebentar lagi dia datang.

F: Ini, ang, saja bawa olèh2 untuk anak2.

K: Lhó kok susah2 bawa olèh2. Wah, terima kasih, Fat.

F: Ah, ndak apa, itu tjuma kué kampung sadja.
Begini, bang, saja ini mau minta tolong. Itu...mentjari pekerdjaan untuk si Karim, keponakan saja jg baru tamat SMA.

K: Ó, si Karim baru tamat SMA? Wah, bagus sekali itu. E, ini ... dikantor saja sudah tidak ada lowongan lagi. Bagaimana kalau ditempat bapak? Mungkin disana masih ada lowongan.

22IV. Free Conversation

A. You are the head of a business firm, explaining to a friend that the situation in the office has been difficult lately; you have had to fire an employee only a week ago. You explain that you really didn't like to do it, but you were forced to do so because he made so many mistakes in bookkeeping and calculations. Also, it seemed he wasn't trying his hardest, since it was useless to tell him that something was to be done immediately. Reports that should have been given priority he would finish two days later, and when people were working overtime he was always going home. You say you think he would have worked harder if he already had had a family, but he was still just a student. You then ask your friend if he knows of anyone suitable for the job. He says he has a friend whose nephew has just graduated from high school and who has been looking for a job everywhere. He says that, since work is so hard to find in the village, he will probably have to come to the city anyway. You ask whether he has held an office job before. He answers that he doesn't think so, but that he has had bookkeeping lessons at the same time as he attended high school.

B. Continue your conversation about this employee. You say that the main thing is that when you ask for something it must be carried out promptly. Your friend assures you that you needn't worry. This boy works so hard that you will be amazed. You express a desire to meet the boy, and ask what his name is. Your friend tells you it is Kohar; he says Kohar can come to Medan next week, and he will write to Kohar's uncle to arrange it. You thank him very much, but you say that a week is actually rather long to wait to find an employee . Things are busy now, and you need some extra office help immediately. But you say if he is really in need of a job, you may be able to find something else for him to do, or perhaps a friend of yours has a vacancy. You say it's not possible to promise a job, of course, but it is probably best for him to come to Medan as he is likely to find a job more easily anyway, and you will do your best to help him.

VD. Intonation Exercises

VD1. 54231. In questions containing a predicate preceded by kok 'why?' kan 'because' or masaq 'I don't believe it,' the predicate ends with the usual question intonation pattern (4231 -- see Exercise VC2 in Lesson 15). Kan and kok have the highest pitch in the sentence. There is a gradual descent from kan or kok to the stressed syllable of the predicate which has the level 2. There is a rise and a drop on the final syllable. The intonation pattern of such sentences may be symbolized 54231:

Kok banjak lalat disini! 'Why are there so many flies here!'

Sentences containing a predicate preceded by masaq may also have a 54231 pattern. The highest level 5 occurs either on the first syllable or on the second syllable of masaq. (Which of the two syllables has the highest pitch makes no difference to the meaning, and any sentence of containing masaq may be said with the highest pitch on ma- or on saq):

Masaq kamu tidak mau kerdja disini.

Masaq kamu tidak mau kerdja disini.

Read the following sentences with a 54231 pattern:

1. Kan biasa sadja.
2. Masa ndak kenal.
3. Masa ndak tahu.
4. Kok baru tudjuh bulan.
5. Masa sudah djauh2 sampai sini, sekarang mau pulang.

6. Kita, kan biasa sadja.
7. Itu, kan sudah saja kasi tahu dulu.
8. Saja, kan sudah kasi tahu.
9. Bapak, kan masih kenal.
10. Bapak si Eli, kan kepingin bertemu dengan kalian djuga.

VD2. 5243. An alternative intonation pattern in questions is 243 (see exercise 13A, Lesson 13). Sentences containing kan 'because,' kok 'why?' and masaq 'I don't believe it!' may end on a 243 pattern. The highest pitch in the sentence is on masaq, kan or kok, and there is a gradual descent to the level 2 on the syllable preceding the stressed syllable, followed by a rise to the level 4 on the stressed syllable and a fall to level 3 on the final syllable:

Kok banjak lalat disini! 'Why are there so many flies here!'

As in the case of masaq in sentences with the 54231 pattern, in sentences with a 5243 pattern the highest level 5 may occur on either ma or saq. Sentences with a 5 pitch on ma can also be said with a 5 pitch on saq with no difference in meaning:

Masaq kamu tidak mau kerdja disini!

Masaq kamu tidak mau kerdja disini!

Sentences with a 54231 pattern alternate freely with sentences which have a 5243 pattern. Read the sentences of Exercise VD1 above with a 5243 pattern:

1. Kan biasa sadja.

6. Kita, kan biasa.

VD3. Sentences with a 324 pattern on the stressed word (see Lesson 16) followed by a drop on the rest of the sentence. This intonation pattern is symbolized 3241. The stressed word with 324 is underlined:

Olèholèh lagi.

Read the following sentences with a 3241 pattern:

1. Ini dia.
2. Ndak bisa dapat sampai sekarang.
3. Mudah2an sadja merèka suka.
4. Saja kirim salam pada Titin dulu nanti.
5. Saja harap sadja merèka datang.
6. Mudah2an sadja tidak hudjan.
7. Dari dulu belum datang2.
8. Saja djamin dia datang.

Commentary to the Reading

2. pusat — 'Center.' Literally pusat means 'navel.'

berolèh — 'Obtained.' Berolèh has an irregular conjugation. When prefixes are added to berolèh it gets the shape -perolèh. E.g., meN- plus berolèh gives memperolèh. It also has the shape perolèh in the passive: saja perolèh, diperolèh, etc.

berkat — 'Thanks to, thanks to the fact that.'

rega — This is a dialectal form of harga 'price.'

	kok ... lah	This is a direct translation into Indonesian of a Minangkabau idiom: Kok ba'a banalah ruponjo. 'Whatever it turns out to look like' (he wanted to see it). Kari Bungsu presumably was a Minangkabau.

Tata bahasa

22.1 Verbs meaning 'to be in a state of'

Some examples of verbs meaning 'be in the state of' are: habis 'be all gone,' selesai 'be finished,' mati 'be dead,' petjah 'be broken,' hilang 'be lost,' kurang 'be insufficient,' tjukup 'be sufficient,' lebih 'be too much,' banjak 'be much,' datang 'come,' djatuh 'fall,' panas 'be hot,' marah 'be angry.'

These verbs do not offer any difficulty to the English speaker except that often they are not always translated by English verbs meaning 'be in the state of,' but rather in other ways. For example,

Uang saja hilang. 'I lost my money. (Lit. My money got lost).'

Uang saja tjukup. 'I have enough money. (Lit. My money is enough).'

Uang saja banjak. 'I have much money. (Lit. My money is much).'

Uang saja habis. 'I have no more money. (Lit. My money is used up).'

Kan sudah saja kasih tahu, ini perlu ni harus segera selesai. (27d74d) 'I already told you, didn't I, this has to be finished right away.'

Do Exercise 22A1

22.11 Affix ke- -an with verbs meaning 'to be in a state of:

Many verbs meaning 'be in the state of' may have the affixes ke- -an added to them to form words meaning 'the thing or person that had it happen to him that something came the state of the verb. Among verbs of this type we have had up to now, the following verbs commonly take ke- -an:

habis	'be all gone'	kehabisan	'one that ran out of something (lit. had it happen to him that something was all gone)'
mati	'be dead'	kematian	'one who had someone die on him'
petjah	'be broken'	kepetjahan	'one who had something broken on him'
hilang	'be lost'	kehilangan	'one who lost something (lit. had it happen to him that something got lost)' lebih	'be too much'	kelebihan	'one who had too much of something'
banjak	'be much'	kebanjakan	'one who had very much of something'
datang	'come'	kedatangan	'one who had someone come to him'
djatuh	'fall'	kedjatuhan	'one who had something fall on him'
hudjan	'rain'	kehudjanan	'one who was caught in the rain (lit. had it happen to him that it rained)'
siang	'be late, noon'	kesiangan	'one who was overtaken by noon (lit. had it happen to him that it got to be noon)'
panas	'be hot'	kepanasan	'one who is hot (lit. had it happen to him that it got hot)'

Compare the following examples with those of 22.1:

Saja kehilangan uang. 'I lost (my) money.'

Saja kebanjakan uang. 'I had very much money.'

Saja kehabisan uang. 'I ran out of money.'

Do Exercise 22A2.

22.12 Ke- -an with active verbs

Ke- -an is added to some active verbs (verbs which may take the prefix meN-) to form words which mean 'one who has been or can be [verb]ed or [verb]ed from':

melihat	'see'	kelihatan	'one who is visible'
mendengar	'hear'	kedengaran	'one who is audible'
meninggalkan	'leave behind'	ketinggalan	'one who is left behind' mentjuri	'steal'	ketjurian	'one who is stolen from'

Uang saja ditjuri. Saja ketjurian uang. 'Someone stole my money. I had my money stolen from me.'

Saja dapat melihat toko. Toko sudah kelihatan. 'I can see the store. The store is already visible.'

Saja ditinggalkan kawan saja. Saja ketinggalan kerèta api. My friends left me. 'I missed the train.' (Lit. 'I was left behind by the train.)'

22.13. Verbs which have nearly the same meaning with ke- -an as without

Some verbs with ke- -an have approximately the same meaning as without. For such verbs the form with ke- -an is more common in colloquial speech than in formal speech.

sakit	'hurt'	kesakitan	'hurt'
lupa	'forget'	kelupaan	'forget'
kalah	'lose (a game or battle)	kekalahan	'lose (a game or battle)

Aduh. Kaki saja kesakitan. 'Ouch my feet hurt!'

Maaf. Saja kelupaan ni. 'I'm sorry I forgot.'

In some cases the verb with ke- -an has a different nuance from the verb without ke- -an:

tidur	'be asleep	ketiduran	'oversleep'
lapar	'be hungry'	kelaparan	'be starving'

Wah saja tidak bisa datang tadi malam, ketiduran.

'I couldn't come last night. I overslept.'

Some verbs meaning 'be in a state of...' (22.1) also have a second meaning: 'one who is affected by...' In this second meaning they are used as a short form for the verb with the affixes ke- -an. Verbs of this type which we have had are panas 'hot,' dingin 'cold' and kurang 'insufficient.'

Hari sudah panas. Saja panas (or kepanasan). 'The day has gotten hot. I am hot.'

Uang saja kurang. Saja kurang (kekurangan) uang. 'My money is insufficient. I do not have enough money.'

Do Exercises 22A3, 22A4.

22.2 Negatives plus a doubled verb

Tidak (or the colloquial equivalents ndak or nggak), belum, or djangan followed by a doubled verb has two meanings depending on the context: (1) 'still hasn't done [verb] when [verb]should have been done long ago':

Kenapa si Simin, sudah lat begini, kok belum pulang2. 'What is the matter with Simin? It's already so late, and still he hasn't come home!'

(2) never do [verb] at all:

Udah lama mèmang nggak mampir2 disini. (22a3a) 'You haven't (ever) dropped by for a long time.' Tidak di-sangka2nja orang kedai itu mengetahui namanja. (22R10) 'He never expected that the shop-keeper would know his name.'

Do Exercises 22Bf.

22.3 Word order of passive verb expressions in colloquial apeech

In Lesson 8 [8.31] we learned that the pronoun agent which precedes the passive verb is not separated from the passive verb by any intervening verb. For example saja 'I' and sèwakan 'rent' are not separated from each other by mau 'want to' in the following sentence:

a. Kebetulan ada dua kamar jg mau saja sèwakan. 'I happen to have two rooms which I would like to rent out.'

In colloquial speech, however, the pronoun agent and the passive verb may be separated from each other. The above example may also be said in colloquial speech:

a(1). Kebetulan ada dua kamar jg saja mau sèwakan. 'I happen to have two rooms which I would like to rent out.'

This separation of the preceding pronoun agent from the passive verb is not frequent in Java, but it is usual in other parts of Indonesia. Another example:

b. Banjak lapuran2 jg saja belum selesaikan. (22c61b)
'There are many reports which I have not finished yet.'

In more formal speech or in colloquial speech in Java this sentence would be said:

b(1). Banjak lapuran2 jg belum saja selesaikan. 'There are many reports which I have not finished yet.'

In the following example the agent kamu 'you' is separated from the verb kerdjakan 'do' by the auxiliary harus 'have to':

b. Bèsok saja suruh pembantu saja itu menundjukkan pekerdjaan2 jg kamu harus kerdjakan. (22c61c)
'Tomorrow I will have my helper show you the work which you have to do.'

In a more formal style or in a colloquial speech by a speaker from Java this would be:

b(1). Bèsok saja suruh pembantu saja itu menundjukkan pekerdjaan2 jg harus kamu kerdjakan. 'Tomorrow I will have my helper show you the work which you have to do.'

Do Exercise 22C.

22.4 Use of the name for 'I' and for 'you'

Since kamu or engkau are very informal and indicates social superiority of the speaker, a person with whom one is close and is too young to be addressed as ibu 'mother' or bapak 'father ' is often addressed by his name.

Bagaimana kalau Fatimah kembali kesini bèsok? (22b30b) 'How about if you (lit. Fatimah) come back tomorrow?'

Biginilah, apa jg saja mintakan dari Karim, betul2 dilaksanakan. (22d78b) 'Let's do it like this: what I ask you (Karim) to do for me should be done right away.'

Similarly, saja is slightly formal. Thus if a person is close to the person he is addressing he may use his own name or the term of relationship between them:

Mèmangbelakangan ini bapak sibuk. (22b13b) 'Actually, I have been busy the last few days.'

22.5 Word study

22.51 Day of the week plus kemarèn

Day of the week plus kemarèn means 'last [day of the week],' i.e. it means the same as '[day of the week] jg lalu.'

Hari Minggu kemarèn ini, mertua kami datang dari kampung. (22d67b) 'This last Sunday my in-law's came from the country.'

22.52 Bagaimana plus adjective plus -nja vs. berapa plus adjective plus -nja

Bagaimana plus adjective plus -nja means 'to what extent something has the quality of [adjective].' Berapa plus adjective plus -nja means 'what is the measurement of [adjective]?'

Orang dari kampung tidak dapat mengetahui bagaimana besarnja kota Djakarta. 'The people from the country cannot imagine how big the city of Djakarta is.'

Disini tertulis berapa besarnja kota Djakarta. 'Here they tell the size of the city of Djakarta.'

Kamu sudah mesti tahu dong bagaimana pentingnja laporan pengangkutan beras itu. (22d66d) 'You should know how important this report of the transport of rice is.'

Do Exercise 22D.

22.53 Kah

Kah marks a question. (It has the same meaning as apa the question marker.) Kah is placed following apa or another interrogative if the sentence contains apa or an interrogative. If the sentence does not contain apa or an interrogative kah follows the stressed word of the predicate.

Apakah saudara dapat datang bèsok? 'Can you come tomorrow?'

Dapatkah saudara datang bèsok? 'Can you come tomorrow?' [Dapat stressed in this sentence.]

Saudara dapat datang bèsokkah? 'Can you come tomorrow?' [Bèsok is stressed in this sentence.]

Tuan minum apakah? Kopikah? Susukah? (22R21) 'What would you like to drink? Coffee? Milk?'

Bermaksud and termaksud 'have the intention of'are used like berniat and terniat respectively.

Terniat and termaksud 'have the intention of...' are used only in a formal style.

58a. Oh, yes, I'm very happy to hear about this.

A, ó, ja, senang sekali saja mendengar ini.

58b. But I'm really in a very difficult situation now.

Tapi, aduh, saja betulbetul dalam kesulitan ini.

58c. The problem isn't any different, you know -- it's the problem of money again.

Soalnja bukan kesulitan jg lain, ja -- kesulitan uang lagi.

58d. That is to say, I'm very sorry but I really need a good amount of money this time.

Jaitu, saja menjesal sekali, ja...saja memerlukan uang jg agak banjak djuga kali ini.

58e. Actually, er, probably I haven't told you (about) this yet.

Dan itu sebenarnja, ja, barangkali saja belum pernah katakan ini.

59a. What is it?

Ada apa sih?

59b. Sounds like you need money rather (badly) (lit. rather need money), Rusli.

Perlu uang djuga rupanja Rusli.

be completely frank

terus terang

60a. Well, it's like this, to be completely frank.

A, begini, terus terang adja.

a. Ó bukan begitu. Tapi kalau kamu bisa bajar sekarang, saja senang sekali.
b. Ja. Saja tahu. Tapi saja sekarang sedang dalam kesulitan djuga.
c. Ja, waktu itu dia masih disekolah rakjat. Sekarang dia sudah besar.
d. Nggak djadi apa, malah saja jg seharusnja malu.
e. Ja, begitulah. Terus terang sadja, saja ni mau nikah, djadi perlu uang.
f. Ja, si Toni. Dia sekarang mau masuk Fakultas Tèhnik.
g. Tjoba sadja ketuk pintu kamarnja. Barangkali sadja dia ada.
h. Lhó, ada apa sih?
i. Ó, Rusli! Masuk Rus, masuk!
j. Selamat malam, bu. Andi ada dirumah?

Bagian D

61. Oh, you're getting married? When?

Ó, mau kawin? Kapan?

62a. At the end of September.

A, achir bulan Septèmber ini.

know that, you should be aware that maklumlah

62b. You know I need a lot of money, because they're planning to have rather a big celebration.

E, maklumlah, saja memerlukan uang jg banjak itu karena mereka merentjanakan untuk mengadakan pesta jg agak besar.

63. Where was the celebration going to be?

Dimana, pèstanja?

64a. In the er -- the village.

Di ini, dikampung.

parents

orang tua

be a member of a class

termasuk

64b. Well, you know Andi, don't you? Er... her parents are (lit. those parents of hers belong to the people that are) prominent and important people, what is called nobility.

Dan, kan Andi mengetahui, itu, orang tuanja itu termasuk, ja, orang jg terkemuka dan orang penting- apa jg dinamakan bangsawan.

they (as opposed to others) — mereka itu conservative, old fashioned — kolot

64c. So you see, they're old fashioned.

Nah ini, mereka itu kolot.

it depends on — sih tergantung

64d. And you know, if it were just up to me, the celebration would be (lit. would be one) on a very small scale. I think that would be the best.

*Dan, ja, kalau tergantung dari saja sadja sih, pèstanja, ja, pèsta jg ketjilketjilan, ja.
saja kira itu jg terbaik.

65a. Oh, I understand. The family really wants it like that. (Lit. As for their family, their desire is really like that.)

Ó, saja mengerti. Mèmang keluarga merèka itu begitu maunja.

65b. When is the celebration?

Kapan pèstanja itu?

66. Well I said it was at the end of September didn't I?

Ja, saja katakan tadi, kan achir Septèmber?

67a. At the end of September? Heavens! I'm very much afraid I won't be able to repay (you).

Achir Septèmber! Aduh saja takut sekali saja tidak bisa kembalikan.

believe me

lhó

67b. Believe me, I'm very much afraid.

Ó, saja takut sekali lhó.

67c. What can I do?

Bagaimana, ja?

67d. Or let's do it like this.

Atau begini sadjalah.

67e.	I have some land in the village.	Saja punja tanah dikampung.
67f.	How about if I just sell it?	Bagaimana kalau itu sadja saja djual?
	the one and only thing	satu2nja
	parents	orang tua
68.	But oh, the land -- that's the only thing that your parents have left to -- er -- to your younger brothers and sisters, isn't it?	A tanah? Kan itu satusatunja jg diwariskan olèh orang tua kamu kepada adik2 kamu?
69.	Oh, let me go home to the village to sell that land.	A, biarlah saja bèsok pulang kekampung untuk mendjual tanah itu.
70a.	Oh, don't.	Ah, djanganlah.
70b.	Actually, I didn't want (you to do) that.	Itu saja sebenarnja tidak mau.
	in order, be settled (of a debt)	bèrès

	[particle with an exhortation]	lah
70c.	But now, let's (say the debt) is settled now.	Tapi sekarang sudah bèrèslah.
70d.	And I'm rather sad to hear about your problems, Andi.	Dan saja agak sedih mendengar kesulitan Andi.
	you (as opposed to others)	kamu itu
70e.	I know you've already made many sacrifices for your family, and...	Saja tahu kamu itu sudah banjak berkorban untuk keluarga kamu, dan...
70f.	(You) still haven't finished your studies (lit. your studies still haven't gotten finished) because you had to think of your family.	Studi kamu belum lagi selesai, karena, ja, harus mengingat keluarga.
71a.	Oh, thank you.	O, terima kasih.

	finish, graduate from school	tamat
71b.	But you know I'm really stupid basically; I can't finish my studies.	Tapi ja, mèmang dasarnja saja bódó, nggak bisa tamat tamat sekolah saja.
	believe me, don't think it's not like this	lhó
	this way	kaja gini [= begini]
71c.	But let's do it like this. During the celebration, I want to help, believe me. I'm going to come back home to the village.	*Tapi kaja gini dèh, nanti waktu pèsta itu, saja ingin membantu lhó. Saja akan pulang kekampung.
71d.	I'm going to help (in the preparations for) your celebration.	Saja akan bantu pèstanja.
	immediately	segera

71e. And I'm going to return that money right away.

Dan uang itu akan segera saja kembalikan.

71f. If I get any money, I'm going to pay you right back.

Kalau saja dapat uang akan segera saja bajarkan kembali.

71g. I'm very sorry.

Saja minta maaf sekali.

let it be, never mind

sudahlah

72a. Oh, never mind.

Ia, sudahlah.

inheritance

warisan

72b. The important thing is, for the time being, don't worry about it and don't go so far as to sell that inherited land of yours.

Pokoknja, untuk sementara ini djangan dikuatirkan dan djangan sampai kamu djual tanah warisan itu.

good-bye

ajólah

72c. OK, now Andi, good-bye. But don't forget. Let me know if there are any other problems

E, ajólah, ja, Andi, tapi djangan lupa, ja, kasi tahu kalau ada kesulitan lain lagi.

23ID. Pertanjaan 2:

1. Ó, mau nikah? Kapan?
2. Bagaimana rentjana keberangkatanmu?
3. Dimana pèstanja nanti? Besar2an, nggak?
4. Apa bapaknja itu termasuk orang jg terkemuka?
5. Apa dia orang bangsawan?
6. Waduh, itu orang kolot betul, ja? Masa naik kapal terbang adja, dia nggak mau.
7. Rusli tahu, kan, saja biasanja ndak pernah mungkir djandji.
8. Apa rentjana pèsta itu tergantung dari saudara sadja?
9. Apa mèmang begitu maunja merèka itu?
10. Kalau tanahmu jg dikampung itu didjual, bagaimana?
11. Apa2 sadja jg kamu dapat sebagai warisan dari orang tuamu?
12. Babu itu kok pulang lagi kekampung. Kapan kembalinja?
13. Wah, si Tini sedih dèh sekarang. Apa kamu nggak lagi adjak2 dia nonton?
14. Berkorbanlah sedikit. Mengapa kamu tidak mau membiajai sekolah adikmu?
15. Kenapa, belum selesai djuga sekolahmu?
16. Mèmangnja saja ini bodoh?
17. Apa kamu djadi kepala sekolah untuk sementara sadja?
18. Untuk sementara ini, dimana kamu tinggal?
19. Kalau ada kesulitan lain, djangan terus bingung, ja? Tèlepon sadja saja.
20. Begini dèh, djual dèh dulu tanahmu jg dikampung, ja?

23IID. Tjotjokkanlah:

1. Ó, djadi mau kawin nih! Kapan sih?
2. Rupa2nja pèstanja setjara besar2an nih.
3. Orang tuanja bagaimana sih?
4. Waduh, susah nih. Terpaksa harus saja djual tanah kami di-kampung.
5. Mèmang kamu ini selalu berkorban untuk keluarga, sampai studimu di-korbankan.
6. Bagaimana? Kamu bisa hadir pada pèsta perkawinan saja?
7. Maaf, ja, saja selalu menjusahkan kamu sadja.
8. Sudahlah Andi, soal uang ini djangan terlalu di-kuatirkan, apa lagi sampai mau djual tanah warisan!
9. Wah, senang sekali, ja, mau kawin! Dengan siapa?
10. É, sudah lat nih. Saja pulang, ja? Sampai ketemu lagi. Selamat malam.

a. Tidak apa2. Saja ini kawanmu. Lain kali saja jg memerlukan kamu.
b. Tapi, lalu bagaimana, saja kan harus mengembalikan uang itu? Saja mèmang agak kuatir djuga.
c. Ini, kira2 achir Septèmber ini.
d. Selamat malam, dan... sampai ketemu lagi.
e. Itu, merèka tu termasuk ini, termasuk golongan bangsawan dan ini, merèka tu kolot!
f. Ja, ... agak besar djuga. Merèka sih jang merentjanakan.
g. Ja, bagaimana lagi? Kalau bukan saja jg berkorban, lalu siapa?
h. Tentu sadja. Malahan saja ingin membantu nanti.
i. Ó, djangan Andi! Djangan didjual, kasihan adik2mu.
j. Dengan itu, dengan si Titin. Itu lhó, jg bekerdja sekantor dengan saja.

Ulasan

23a3	apa lagi	'What else?' Lagi followed by an interrogative means 'who, how, where, what etc. else,' and by extension 'what, what, how, where, etc. else do you think? Of course it was [so-and-so].' Another example: 'Siapa jg memberikan tjintjin itu? -- Siapa lagi? Dia dong. 'Who gave you that ring?' -- 'Who else? He (my boyfriend) did, of course.'
23a5	ja, begitulah	'So-so.' This phrase is an indication that things are not as good as one would hope them to be, but that the situation is one which has to be put up with. We have also had this phrase in Lesson 10 where John asks the lady about how life in the country is. The lady answers, 'Ja, begitulah. Air leding tidak ada, tapi kali dekat.' 'So-so. There's no running water, but the river is near.'
23a6b	ngadjak	This is a colloquial speech form of mengadjak 'invite.'
23a8	disitu	'You.' In colloquial speech disitu or situ is used in the meaning 'you.' [23.61]

23III. Pertjakapan:

Bagian A

Andi datang kerumah Rusli, kawannja, untuk memindjam uang.

Andi: Rusli, Rusli, ada dirumah, nggak nih?

Rusli: É, Andi. Mari masuk. Kok begini lat datangnja. Mau ngadjak makan dirèstoran nih?

Andi: Bolèh sadja, asal disitu jg bajar. Saja nggak punja uang sih.

Rusli: Ah, masa kamu ndak punja uang.

Andi: Saja betul2 ndak punja uang. Malah saja kemari ini, ja ... ja ini, mau mindjam uang.

Rusli: Ó begitu?

Andi: Betul, Rus. Malah saja sudah menunggak uang pondokan. Sampai dua bulan! Ini, Ibu Sri tempat saja mondok sudah ber-kali2 mendesak saja. Makanja, saja sekarang ini bingung sekali.

Rusli: Berapa sih jg kamu perlukan?

Andi: Duapuluh ribu.

Rusli: Waduh, kok banjak betul? Wah, saja kira uang saja nggak sampai duapuluh ribu nih.

Andi: Bagaimana ja? Saja perlu sekali, Rus. Ada kenalan lain jg bisa menolong?

Rusli: E, saja kira tidak ada jg punja uang. Bagaimana, ja? A, bagaimana kalau dari kantor? Barangkali saja bisa pindjamkan dari sana.

Andi: Bagi saja sih dari mana sadja, ja, bolèh. Pokoknja saja dapat uang.

Rusli: Baiklah, datang sadja bèsok kekantor. Tapi, kapan kira2 kamu bisa bajar kembali? Bisa, ndak, dalam tiga bulan?

Andi: Tiga bulan? Djadi saja harus bajar pada pertengahan bulan September, ja? Saja tjoba dèh. Terima kasih, ja, Rus. Kamu selalu menolong saja. Sampai bèsok dèh.

Benar atau salah:

1. Andi datang kerumah Rusli untuk mengadjaknja makan dirèstoran.
2. Andi mau supaja Rusli jg traktir.
3. Andi sudah menunggak uang pondokan untuk dua tahun.
4. Karena Andi tidak tjukup uangnja, Rusli akan memindjamkan uang dari kantornja.
5. Banjak kenalan Rusli jg bisa menolong Andi.
6. Andi harus membajar kembali uang itu dalam tiga bulan.
7. Andi bèsoknja datang kekantor Rusli untuk bekerdja.

Bagian B

Rusli datang kerumah Andi untuk menagih uangnja.

Rusli: Andi, Andi! Ada dirumah nih?

Andi: É, Rusli. Silahkan masuk, Rus.

Rusli: Terima kasih. Bagaimana kabarnja?

Andi: Baik2 sadja. E, Rusli datang ini untuk nagih uang, ja?

Rusli: Mm, begitulah. Saja sedang ini...sedang perlu sekali uang.

Andi: Aduh, bagaimana, ja? Mana ada saudara jg harus saja biajai sekolahnja. Wah, pajah ni.

Rusli: Saudara kamu jg mana?

Andi: Si Toni, adik saja jg bungsu. Jg dulu sering mengganggu kita waktu kita masih sama2 dikampung dulu.

Rusli: Ó, si Toni? Ja, saja masih ingat. Sekarang disekolah mana dia?

Andi: Sekarang mau masuk Fakultas Tèhnik. E, rupanja Rusli djuga perlu uang nih?

Rusli: Ia, dan kali ini saja memerlukan agak banjak djuga. Karena ini, karena saja akan menikah.

Andi: Ó, mau kawin? Kapan?

Rusli: Achir bulan Septèmber. Dan susahnja begini, orang tua saja termasuk bangsawan dan kolot. Djadi merèka mau mengadakan pèsta jg agak besar. Kalau saja sih, ingin jg ketjil2an sadja.

Andi: Ó, saja mengerti itu. Achir Septèmber,ja, pèstanja? Aduh, saja takut saja belum bisa bajar.

Rusli: Bagaimana, ja?

Andi: Begini sadjalah. Saja punja rumah dikampung. Saja djual sadja rumah itu.

Rusli: É, djangan. Itu kan warisan, djangan didjual dong.

23 IV. Free Conversation

A. You are in urgent need of some money to pay the rent for your room. You go to the house of a friend of yours and knock at his door. He comes out and after you've greeted each other your friend asks you why you have come at such a late hour. He asks jokingly if you've come to invite him to eat in a restaurant. You say you would like to, but you don't have any money right now. In fact you begin to explain that it is about money that you have come. He asks you if it's the problem of meeting your rent again. You answer that your rent is already three months behind and that your landlady has been pressing you for some time. You say that you have been looking for work, but all you've been able to find is full-time work which does not allow you to study. Your friend asks you if you can't get a part-time job and adds he has heard from some people in his office that there are several companies downtown (in the city) which need people to help out. You answer, if that is the case you sure would be glad to get this type of job. But then your friend remarks that it would probably still interfere with your studies. You admit that that may be and that's the reason you are at a loss to know what to do at this time. Your friend advises you to concentrate on finishing your studies and asks how much money you actually need. You give an amount, and your friend says he will borrow this amount for you from his office. He asks you to return it as soon as you can. You ask how soon he wants you to pay it back and then suggest a certain time by which you will repay the debt. He agrees to your proposal and says that you don't have to worry about your problems as long as you have him as a friend. You thank him and finally say you should be going home now.

B. Pretend you go to your friends house to collect some money your friend has borrowed from you some time ago. When you get to his house he evidently has been expecting you and knows right away why you have come to see him. He then apologizes, saying that the reason he hasn't been to your place for quite a while is not that he wanted to avoid you but that he has been trying hard to secure the amount of money he owes you. You say you are actually embarrassed to ask for your money back from a close friend and add that you surely do not consider him as a person who never pays back his debts. However, you really need a fairly big amount of money at this time. He asks what you need it for. You answer you need it for an important occasion. He wonders what that could be. You say you plan to get married fairly soon. He says he is ashamed now that he is unable to pay back his debts, especially because you need the money so urgently. He then goes on to say that he has a younger brother who graduated from high school last year, and that now he is financing his schooling at medical school. You wonder if he is the same brother who used to bother you both when you were still in school in the village. Your friend says he is. He adds that he has been alone in supporting his younger brother at medical school and that in addition, he sends money to his grandmother once in a while.

C. Continue your conversation with your friend who borrowed money from you. Your friend says he will have to quit school and take a full-time job. You apologize for pressing him when he is experiencing such difficulties, but your family expects you to arrange a rather big wedding party. You continue that you are actually not in favor of a big party, but your family wants it that way and that your parents belong to what is usually called the old-fashioned nobility. If it were up to you alone, the party would only be a very small one.

Your friend says he has a solution: he will sell the piece of land he inherited from his parents. You don't agree with his idea and refuse to let him sell the land. You tell him that you just remember that you can borrow money from your office any time you need it. You say you have a great respect for him and that you didn't know before that he was making many sacrifices to support his family. You even encourage him to go on studying, and you promise him that you will always help him in case he needs money or anything else in the future. He answers that he will secure the money for sure and pay you back, no matter what he has to do to get it.

'Isn't that man your son?' -- 'No. I don't even know him.'

Tata Bahasa

23.1 More on spelling and pronunciation

23.11 The pronunciation of ch

The spelling ch represents a voiceless velar spirant -- that is, a sound made by putting the tongue in the same position as for k and blowing out whispering. This is the same sound as German ch in ach or the sound represented by the ch in the Scottish pronunciation of loch. We have had this sound in achir 'end.' It is also found in a few other words we have not had yet and in some proper names. Some people substitute h for ch -- i.e. they pronounce achir /ahir/.

23.12 Old fashioned orthography

23.121 Ch for k, f for p

Some words which came into Indonesian from other languages formerly had special spellings. E.g. kuatir 'worry' was formerly written chawatir; kabar 'news' -- chabar; pikir 'think' -- fikir; peluit -- fluit; et al. These spellings are still occasionally used in modern publications. When speaking formally, some speakers give these words a pronunciation which reflects this old-fashioned spelling -- ch is pronounced as a velar spirant (23.11, above), and f is pronounced like English f.

23.122 Oe for u

Before the war oe was used to represent the sound now written u (following Dutch spelling). This spelling is retained by some people in writing their names: Poerwadarminta.

23.123 A for e

E in the first syllable of some words was formerly spelled a: e.g. kerèta -- karèta 'car, wagon.'

23.124 z for dj

Some words with dj may also be written with /z/: lazim, ladjim 'common'; zaman, djaman 'times.' Some speakers pronounced these with /z/ (like English z), whereas others pronounce them with dj.

23.125 Glottal stops represented by '

In some words /q/ was formerly represented by the apostrophe ', rakjat -- ra'jat,'people'; Djumat -- Djum'at, 'Friday'; entjik -- entji', 'sir, ma'am'; etc.

23.2 The prefix per-

The prefix per- forms transitive verbs (verbs which have a passive and which may take the prefix meN-*). The prefix per- is confined to a written or formal style of speech except with a few common words. Words with per- and also a simultaneous suffix -kan we have had so far are: memperhatikan 'notice,' mempersilahkan 'invite,' memperbolèhkan 'permit,' memperkenalkan 'introduce,' and memperlihatkan 'show.' Mempeladjari 'study' has a simultaneous suffix -i (and the prefix per- has an alternative shape pel-.) Memperolèh 'obtain' and perbuat 'do' (used only in the passive as synonym of buat) have a prefix per- but no suffix -kan.

Saja ingin memperkenalkan guru itu dengan bapak saja. 'I want to introduce that teacher to my father.'

Sudah berapa lama kamu mempeladjari bahasa itu?

---

*meN- plus per- has the shape memper-

'How long have you been studying that language?'

Kemarin dia memperoleh gelar dokter. 'Yesterday he received a M.D. degree.'

The following subsections discuss uses of per- which are formal in style.

23.21 Per- added to adjectives

Per- is added to some adjectives (in some cases with an added suffix -kan or -i) to form a verb meaning 'to make something more [adjective].'

besar	'big'	memperbesar	'make bigger'
baik	'good'	memperbaiki	'improve, repair'
bagus	'nice'	memperbagus	'make nicer'
indah	'beautiful'	memperindah	'make more beautiful'
dalam	'deep'	memperdalam	'to make something deeper, go deep into something'
dekat	'near'	memperdekat or memperdekatkan	'put things close to each other'

Biar dia sendiri jg memperbaiki mobil itu. 'Let him fix that car himself.'

Saja ingin memperbesar perusahaan ini. 'I want to enlarge this company.'

23.22 Per- added to roots

Per- is added to roots to form verb meaning 'cause someone to do [root].' In most cases a suffix -kan is added simultaneously. Also in most cases the verb also occurs with the suffix -kan and without per- in nearly the same meaning.

berdiri	'stand'	memperdirikan or mendirikan	'erect'
berguna	'be useful'	mempergunakan or menggunakan	'make use of'
bertambah	'increase, become more'	mempertambah or menambah	'increase, make something be more'

Some verbs take both per- -kan and -kan alone and the meaning of the verb with per- -kan is different from the verb with -kan:

mendengarkan	'listen to'	memperdengarkan	'cause someone to hear'
mengerdjakan	'do something'	mempekerdjakan	'cause someone to work' melihatkan	'let a person look at something'	memperlihatkan	'show (lit. cause to see) something'

Bajar dulu sebelum mempergunakan mobil saja. 'You have to pay me first before using my car.'

Ibunja memperdengarkan kata2 jang kurang ènak kepada saja. 'His mother said unpleasant things to me (Lit. His mother let me hear unpleasant words).'

A few verbs occur with per- -kan but not with -kan alone. That is to say, if they have a suffix -kan they also have the prefix per-. Of this type are most of the verbs formed by adding per- -kan to adjectives and most of the verbs listed in 23.2 above.

Do Exercise 23A.

23.3 Superlatives

Superlatives ('most [adjective] or [adjective]est') are formed in two ways: ter- plus adjective or paling plus adjective.

There is no difference in meaning between the two ways, and any adjective may form a superlative in both ways. (Ter- plus adjective is more formal and most common in written language.)

Saja kira itu jg terbaik (or paling baik). (23d64d)
'I think that is what would be the best.'
Siapa jg paling tua (or tertua)? 'Who is the eldest?'

Do Exercise 23B.

23.4 More on numerals

23.41 Satu or se- plus counter to express 'a' as opposed to 'the'

'A' is expressed by satu or se- plus a counter.

Sebuah autó tiba dimuka setasiun dan seorang perempuan keluar dari autó itu. (23R3) 'An automobile arrived at the front of the station and a lady got out of the car.'
Laki2 jg dua orang tadi pergi menudju kesebuah autó dimuka setasiun. 'The two men went in the direction of a car in front of the station.'

The [noun] is expressed by [noun] itu or [noun] -nja.

23.42 Jg satu (or se- plus counter) ... jg satu (or se- plus counter) lagi '(the) one ... the other'

Dua orang tiba disètasiun. Jg satu hendak pergi dengan kerèta. Jg satu lagi hanja mengantar sadja.
'Two people arrived at the station. One was going on the train. The other was just seeing him off.'

'Sudahlah kak,' kata laki2 jg seorang lagi. (23R18)

'"That's enough," said the other man.'

Seorang diantaranja mengangkat saja keatas autó dan jg seorang lagi mengangkat anak ini. (23R26)

'One of them took me to the car and the other one took this child.'

Do Exercise 23C1.

23.43 Salah plus satu or salah plus se- plus counter 'one of the ...'

Ada dua orang disini. Salah seorang(or salah satu) diantaranja orang hukuman. 'There are two people here. One of them is a prisoner.'

Djawablah salah satu dari pertanjaan2 ini:

'Answer one of the following questions.'

The use of salah is optional. Satu or se- plus a counter also can be used to mean 'one of the ...'

Seorang diantaranja datang menghampiri dia.

(23R4) 'One of the men approached her.'

22.44 Se- plus a counter or suatu 'a certain'

'A, an' in the sense of 'a certain (hitherto unnamed)' is expressed by suatu or by se- plus a counter.

Pada suatu tempat berdiamlah seorang saudagar....

'In a certain place there lived a merchant....'

23.45 Sesuatu 'something' and seseorang 'somebody'

Ada sesuatu jg mau saja katakan kepadamu. 'There is something which I would like to tell you.'

Ada seseorang jg mentjari kamu disini tadi. 'There was somebody here looking for you.'

Seseorang and sesuatu differ from English somebody and something in that they may be used preceding a noun to modify it.

Seseorang and sesuatu followed by a noun may be translated by colloquial English 'some [noun],' but, unlike English 'some [noun]', seseorang, sesuatu [noun] do not carry a notion of disrespect for the thing or person referred to by the noun.

Seseorang dokter datang kemari untuk bertanja tentang kesèhatanmu. 'A doctor (colloquial English some doctor) came here to ask about your health.'

Do Exercise 23C2.

23.5 Words meaning 'say, think, ask' and the like followed by a genitive

Words meaning 'say, think, ask' and the like followed by a genitive (ku, mu, nja or a noun or pronoun) mean '[genitive] thought, said, asked, etc.': kataku 'I said,' katamu 'you said,' katanja 'he said,' kata orang itu 'that man said,' pikirnja 'he thought,' djawabnja 'he answered,' tanja si Ali 'Ali asked,' etc.

'Gani!' kata tuan polisi sambil berdiri ketilpon. (23R31) '"Gani!" said the police officer as he got up to go to the telephone.'

'Ja, kari apa?' udjar orang Keling itu agak marah. (22R13) '"Yes, what kind of dish?" said the Indian rather angrily.'

Do Exercise 23D.

23.6 Word study

23.61 Disitu

Disitu (like situ [19.35]) is used to mean 'you' in a colloquial style of speaking:

Djadi, disitu jg bajar, ja? (23a8) 'So you pay, OK?'

23.62 Sampai

This section reviews [10.43]. Sampai followed by ke or di means 'up to' or 'arrive':

Djam berapa sampai di (or ke) Bandung? 'What time did (you) arrive at Bandung?'

Sampai also introduces sentences and means 'up to the point that.' In this meaning it is synonymous with sehingga.

Saja terlalu banjak makan tadi sampai saja nggak dapat tidur sekarang. 'I ate so much, up to the point that I cannot sleep now.'

Djangan sampai kamu djual tanah warisan itu. (23d72b) 'Don't go so far as to (lit. let it not be up to the point that you) sell that inherited land of yours.'

Do Exercise 23E.

23.63 Pula

Pula means 'in addition, again.'

Tidak berapa lama kerètapun tampak dengan asapnja jg mengepul dan peluitnja kedengaran pula. (23R10) 'After a while the train appeared with its billowing smoke, and the whistle could also be heard.'

Penumpangpun naik berebut2, dan jg turun begitu pula. (23R11) 'The passengers getting on jostled each other, and so did the people getting off as well.'

Interrogative plus pula means '[interrogative]-ever, in the world? or who else?'

Kalau tidak begini, bagaimana pula harus dikerdjakan? 'If you don't do it like this, how in the world are you supposed to do it?'

Ja, siapa pula jg hendak tjampur antara orang berlakibini?' (23R21) 'Whoever would mix into a (quarrel) between a husband and wife?

Tentu sadja saja berikan sama dia. Sama siapa pula mau saja beri? 'Of course, I gave it to him. Who else would I have given it to?'

Pula is also used like lagi [19.33] in the meaning '[predicate] is superfluous':

Mèmang sudah tahu, kok tanja2 pula. 'You already know -- why do you keep asking (unnecessarily)?'

Sudah gaharu tjendana pula. 'You know, but you still ask anyway.' (This is a saying. Literally it means '(You already have) gaharu [a fragrant wood], yet (you still want) sandlewood [another fragrant wood]. -- it rhymes with sudah tahu, bertanja pula.

Pula is used mainly in Sumatra or in written language.

Do Exercises 23F f.

23.64 Toh

Toh means '[predicate] is the case, isn't it?' or (in negative sentences) '[predicate] is not the case, is it?'

Ja tapi sudahlah. Nanti toh ketemu djuga.

(22a8b) 'Oh, but never mind. Anyway I will be seeing her later, won't I?'

Tapi masih minum? Nggak lagi toh? (17b18a)

'But are you still drinking? You are not, are you?'

Do Exercise 23G .

23.65 Ada preceding a verb

Ada plus verb means 'did do [verb]' -- with a stress on did. (There is no stress on ada in the Indonesian, however.)

Mengapa tidak berteriak minta tolong? -- Saja ada ber-teriak2, tetapi tidak ada jg hendak menolong. (23R29,30) 'Why didn't you shout for help?' -- 'I did shout, but no one would help me!'

23.66 Orang banjak

Orang banjak means 'a crowd, public' as opposed to banjak orang which means 'many people.'

Saja tidak mau dilihat orang banjak karena pakaian saja kotor. 'I don't want people to see me because my clothing is dirty.'

Tidakkah kakak malu ribut2 dimuka orang banjak? (23R18) 'Aren't you ashamed to make a racket in public?'

Ulasan

25a3	kemana	'Where did you go to?' Notice how the boy answers even though it is only a rhetorical question. This is not impudence. He really figures he is suppose to answer.
25a5	ini	'In this case.'
25a7	disapu	Commands may be given in the passive when the recipient of the action is clearly stated. The passive in command is slightly less abrupt than the active, but otherwise, there is no difference in meaning.
25a12	la illa	This is short for lā ilaha illa'llahu from the Arabic for 'There is no god but God.'
25a21	ngapain	This is colloquial speech for mengapa 'what is (are) [subject] doing?'
25b26b	arang	The most common type of iron used in Indonesia is one into which glowing coals are placed.
25b29c	jg bersih	This is a colloquial speech construction: jg followed by an adjective forms a phrase meaning 'do in an [adjective] way.' [17.12]

25b31b	pulang2	Negative plus a doubled verb indicates a state of affairs contrary to ones positive expectations: 'has not done [verb] at all.' [15.221]
25b37		This is not an unusual way to talk to servants, but it is abusive. It is very cutting to call someone 'stupid' in Indonesia, and lu is a disrespectful term of address.
25c44b	berenti2	This is a doubled verb after a negative meaning 'does not do [verb] at all?' [15.221]
25c44c	mintanja	This is a nominal formation, 'what they ask for.'

12. Tuan muda nggak mau makan ikan asin.

25IV. Free Conversation

A. The lady of the house is looking for Simin. Amat tells her Simin hasn't come yet. When she asks how come, he explains that it's raining. She retorts that she knows it's raining, but there's still work to be done even in the rainy season. She asks Amat if he has bought chicken for the soup that evening. He says no, there wasn't any; but Farida said she would make "sour soup" instead. The mistress expresses dismayed surprise and sharply reminds him that there are to be guests that evening. Amat offers to go look somewhere else, but the lady tells him to sweep and mop the living room instead. He asserts that he just swept it, and also it was recently mopped and doesn't need mopping again. She tells him to mop it again -- it looks dirty already. He complains of the extra work, but she retorts that it's to be expected since there are going to be guests and since Simin is so late.

B. Continue conversation A. Just then Simin arrives apologetically and blames his lateness on the weather. The mistress interrupts him impatiently telling him to take a betjak if he doesn't like the rain. Then she tells him she needs chicken for dinner and tells him to look in the market for some; she gives him some money and then adds some to pay for the betjak. Simin asks for a little more because that's not enough for a betjak nowadays -- they ask for at least a hundred twenty rupiahs to go to the market. She gives in, and then asks him if there is enough ice left. He says it's all gone. She asks why he didn't say so before and tells him to buy ice as well. He excuses himself to go.

C. The housewife notices her red dress hanging up and asks why it hasn't been ironed. Amat says he has already ironed it. She expresses astonishment and asks how that could be since it didn't look pressed (smooth); she asks if he used a hot enough iron. He says probably not, but he was afraid of burning the dress if the iron was too hot. She tells him to iron it again, this time with more charcoal in the iron. He protests that he was just told to mop the floor, and that he has a lot of work. She answers that he should have the laundress do it when she comes later. She also reminds him of the basket of laundry that has to be done.

D. Simin comes in with the chickens and ice. The mistress asks him what took so long. He says he had to wait a long time for a betjak and then they didn't have any chickens at the market so he had to go to two other stores to find them. She asks him for the change, and he replies that there wasn't any. She is surprised and asks what was the cost of the chicken. He replies it cost a thousand rupiahs because chickens were scarce everywhere that day. Also, he says, the betjaks are very expensive -- they ask a hundred twenty-five rupiahs now. She drops the matter and tells him to take the things to the kitchen and to sweep the front yard afterwards.

Tata Bahasa

25.1 Suffix -i.

The suffix -i is added to roots to form transitive verbs (verbs which take the prefix meN- and which have passive forms). With some roots the suffix -i forms verbs which mean 'do at, in, on.' (This meaning is discussed in 11.3). The following examples review this meaning of -i:

diam	'inhabit'	diami	'stay at'
hinggap	'be alighted'	hinggapi	'land on'
tjampur	'mix'	tjampuri	'mix into'
dekat	'be near'	dekati	'approach (go near to)'
masuk	'enter'	masuki	'enter into'
tuang	'pour'	menuangi	'pour into'
kundjung	'visit'	kundjungi	'visit at'
datang	'come'	datangi	'come to'

Semua makanan tertutup supaja tidak dapat dihinggapi lalat. (11R4) 'All the food was covered over so that flies could not land on it.'

Umurnja sudah mendekati empatpuluh. (17R1) 'He was nearly (lit. his age was approaching to) forty.'

Pedagang kaja itu baru pertama kali mengundjungi Djakarta. (14R2) 'The rich merchant was visiting (in) Djakarta for the first time.'

With verbs meaning 'be in the state of ...' [22.1] the suffix -i forms new verbs meaning 'bring something into the state of ...'

tutup	'be covered over'	tutupi	'cover something over'
penuh	'be full'	penuhi	'fill up'
baik	'be good'	perbaiki	'make something good'
halus	'fine (in quality)'	halusi	'make something fine'
terang	'bright'	terangi	'make something bright'

Lantai hotèl itu ditutupi olèh permadani jg indah sekali. (14R3) 'The floor of the hotèl was covered by a beautiful rug.'

Bak jg tinggi itu dapat dipenuhi dengan air dari sebuah keran. (14R10) 'The tall tub could be filled up with water from a faucet.'

The suffix -i is added to some nouns to form transitive verbs meaning 'provide with [noun]':

biaja	'money to pay expenses'	biajai	'defray expenses' ongkos	'cost'	ongkosi	'pay the costs of'
lobang	'hole'	lobangi	'put a hole in (provide with a hole)'
djiwa	'soul,life'	djiwai	'inspire (provide with life)'
batas	'boundary'	batasi	'set a boundary to'
obat	'medicine'	obati	'treat a sickness (provide with medicine)'

Saja harus/membiajai sekolah adik2 saja. (23c51e)

'I have to pay for the schooling of my younger brothers and sisters.'

Tjerita2 wajang pada dasarnja didjiwai olèh épos Mahabharata. 'The stories of the "wajang" are basically inspired by the Mahabharata.'

With some roots -i has the function of forming a transitive verb which is not otherwise different in meaning from the base without -i.

lindung	'protect'	lindungi	'protect something'
punja	'own'	punjai	'own'
berkuasa	'have powers'	kuasai	'have power over'
berbau	'be smelly'	baui or bauni	'smell something'
berpengaruh	'have influence'	pengaruhi	'influence something'
berhias	'make oneself up'	hiasi	'decorate (something)'
gemar	'take pleasure in'	gemari	'take pleasure in'
suka	'like	sukai	'like'
nikmat	'pleasant, comfortable'	nikmati	'enjoy something, find something pleasurable' segan	'be respectful'	segani	'respect someone'
marah	'be angry'	marahi	'be angry at someone'

Bermatjam faktor mempengaruhi bentuk seni tari di Indónésia. (20R2) 'Various factors influence the form of art of the dance in Indonesia.'

Orang2 itu diobati dokter dibilik sebelah. (21R9) 'The people were being treated by the doctor in the adjoining room.'

Tarian itu digemari sekali olèh anak2 muda. (20R10) 'Young people like that dance very much.'

In some cases the base does not occur without some suffix, and the suffix -i has the function of forming a verb. A base of this type we have had is ketahu- which is the base of the verb ketahui 'find out about':

Hal itu dapat kita ketahui dari hasil penjelidikan2. (20R3) 'We can find out about this matter from the results of research.'

Do Exercises 25Aff.

25.2 Ke- plus a doubled number plus a genitive

Ke- [number]2 plus a genitive means 'all [number] of [genitive].' (It has the same meaning as ke- plus number [16.4].)

Adalah tuan guru itu beranak empat orang, ke-empat2nja perempuan. (25R2) 'That teacher had four children, all four of them girls.'

Ke-dua2 orang itu orang Amérika. 'Both of those people are Americans.'

The prefix ke- may be dropped in colloquial speech:

Guru itu anaknja empat orang, empat2nja perempuan.
'That teacher had four children, all four of them are girls.'

Do Exercise 25Bff.

25.3 Forming nouns by adding -nja to verbs containing an affix.

In a colloquial style the suffix -nja may be added to verbs which already have an affix. For example in the following sentence the suffix -nja is added to the verb diterima 'was received' which contains the prefix di-:

Mèmang sudah begitu waktu diterimanja. (25c56c)
'That was the way it was when (I) got it (lit. at the getting of it).'

In the following example the suffix -nja is added to the verb njutji 'wash' which contains the prefix N-:

Nggak bersih ini, njutjinja, ja? (25c55b) 'It wasn't washed well, was it?' (Lit. 'This is not clean, is it, your washing?')

Do Exercise 25Cff.

Habis has three uses: (1) as a verb 'be all gone':

Èsnja sudah habis disitu. (25b33) 'They were out of ice. (Lit. The ice was already all gone there.)'

(2) preceding a verb or a demonstrative pronoun 'after [verb]' [= sesudah]:

Habis itu masih banjak lagi kerdjaan. (25b30a)

'After that, there is still lots of work (to do).'

(3) (in colloquial styles only) preceding a sentence, 'it has to be like this because ...'

Kenapa nggak bilang dari tadi nggak ada arang? -- Habis, kira saja njonja jg mau beli. (25b27-28a)

'Why didn't you say before that there was no charcoal?' -- 'Because I thought you were going to buy it.'

Kok sajur asem lagi. Katanja mau bikin sup ajam? -- Abis ajamnja nggak ada.' (25c47b-48a) 'Why "sour soup"? I thought you were to make chicken soup?' -- 'Well, there wasn't any chicken.'

Do Exercise 25D.

25.42 Ngapain, mengapa, kenapa

Ngapain means 'doing what?' It is confined to colloquial styles. In a formal style mengapa is used to mean 'doing what?'

Ngapain (or Mengapa) kamu disitu, Min? 'What are you doing there, Min?'

Apain is used as a passive verb form meaning 'what was done to [subject]?' (In formal speech or written styles apakan or, alternatively, pengapakan is used in this meaning):

É kamu apain (or apakan) lagi anak itu? Kenapa dia lagi nangis? 'Why! What did you do to that child? Why is he crying?'

Ngapain also means 'what for?' (In formal speech buat apa or untuk apa has this meaning:

Ngapain or buat apa lama2 disini. Kan lebih baik kita pulang sekarang? 'What are we staying so long/here? Hadn't we better go home now?'

Mengapa and kenapa mean 'why?' (In colloquial style kenapa is more frequent.)

Mengapa (or kenapa) kamu begitu lama mentjari ès? 'Why did you take so long to look for ice?'

Kenapa also means 'what is the matter with ...'

Kenapa rok ini? Kok kojak! 'What happened to this skirt? Why is it torn!

Do Exercise 25E.

25.43 Pakai

The basic meaning of pakai is 'use, wear.'

Do Exercise 25F.

25.44 Betapa

Betapa is followed by an adjective plus -nja and means 'to what extent [adjective] is the case!' It is used only in a fancy style of speaking or in writing. In a colloquial style or in less fancy language bagaimana is used for this construction [see 22.52]:

> Betapa takdjubnja memandang isterinja masih matjam biasa djua. (25R21) 'How astonished he was to see his wife nevertheless in the same condition as before.'

25.45 Adalah, adapun, tersebut

One meaning of adalah is 'is.' (We studied this usage in 14.42.)

> Djakarta adalah ibukota Indónésia. 'Djakarta is the capital of Indonesia.'

Another use of adalah is to introduce a new topic in a narration. (This usage is confined to story telling in an old-fashioned style.)

> Adalah tuan guru itu beranak empat orang. (25R3) '(Next point in the story ...) the teacher had four children.'

Adapun is also used in an old-fashioned story-telling style to introduce a new subject. It is equivalent in meaning to adalah:

> Adapun tuan guru itu beranak empat orang. (The next point in the story ...) the teacher had four children.'

Tersebut is used in an old-fashioned story-telling style to mean: 'once upon a time' (lit. 'they tell about'):

Tersebut seorang guru mengadji, bernama Malim Bungsu. (25R2) 'Once upon a time there was a teacher of religion, named Malim Bungsu.'

26IV. Free Conversation

A friend of yours expresses his interest in trying some Indonesian cooking because he has heard it is very delicious. You offer to cook fried rice if he would like to come to your house for supper. He tells you not to bother, it's too much trouble. Besides he already knows your fried rice. Even though it's very good, it's not what he had in mind. What he really meant was to find out if there was a good Indonesian restaurant near-by. You tell him there is one; it's not near, but the food is really Indonesian and very good. He asks how to get there from his house. You say it's best to take the Number Five bus to Prosperity Drive, follow that street to the left, then turn right at the next corner and go straight about 100 meters. The restaurant is right there, on the right side of the street. It is called Sudi Mampir.

You say he can also take the Number Seven bus, but it is more round about, and it stops farther from the restaurant. Your friend asks what is the best thing to order at that restaurant. You answer that the people who own the restaurant are from Jogja, so it's best to try their gudeg, since that is the food famous in Jogja. He asks you what gudeg is. You are surprised that he doesn't know about it, and tell him how it is made. You mention also sate and gado-gado, which are very good at that restaurant. Your friend says he has heard that fried bananas are an Indonesian food also. You are surprised that you could have forgotten to mention that, because they are also really delicious at that restaurant. Your friend thanks you very much, and asks if you would like to accompany him and his wife to that restaurant on Friday evening. He says it's his turn to treat. You say you are sorry you cannot. There is a movie you promised to see with another friend that evening, but maybe another time you could all go together -- it would be a lot of fun in a group, Indonesian style.

Tata Bahasa

26.1 Compounds

Some phrases consisting of two words have an idiomatic meaning -- that is to say, the meaning of the phrase is not the same as the combination of the words. Such phrases are called COMPOUNDS. Thus, for example, the phrase orang tua 'parents' is a compound because it has a different meaning from orang 'people' plus tua 'old.' Review [21.2] where some compounds were discussed.

26.11 Compounds consisting of two nouns, or two adjectives, or two verbs meaning '[noun] and [noun],' '[adjective] and [adjective]' or '[verb] and [verb]'

Compounds of this type we have had up to now or which are very frequent are the following:

ibu bapak	'parents'	pulang pergi	'go back and forth'
ajah bunda	'parents'	keluar masuk	'go in and out'
tua muda	'old and young'	hilir mudik	'to and fro (lit. down-river, up-river)'
besar ketjil	'big and small	ketjil molèk	'small and cute'
kaja miskin	'rich and poor	untung rugi	'advantage and disadvantage'
laki bini	'husband and wife	laba rugi	'profit and loss'

suami isteri	'husband and wife	sawah ladang	'rice fields and dry fields laki2 perempuan	'men and women'
putera puteri	'girls and boys'
pemuda pemudi	'girls and boys'

Note that the word order in these phrases is fixed.

> Tua muda, besar ketjil, semuanja terpikat (26R12)
>
> 'Old and young, large and small, everyone is fascinated.'

26.12 Compounds consisting of two synonyms

Compounds consisting of two synonyms have a more emphatic meaning than either of the two synonyms alone, e.g., kasih sajang 'deep love (lit. love and love).' Words of this type we have had up to now are:

penuh sesak	'chock full'	asal usul	'very origins'
kasih sajang	'deep love'	sunji senjap	'very quiet'
gagah berani	'very brave'	rukun damai	'very peaceful'
asal mula	'original course'	lalu lintas	'traffic (lit. passing very much)'

> Keesokan harinja mahkamah pengadilan penuh sesak dengan orang2. (16R13) 'The following day the courtroom was chock full of people.'
>
> Orang2 Belanda itu mendapat perlawanan jg gagah berani dari golongan penduduk si Sulawesi Selatan. (19R8) 'The Dutch came up against courageous opposition on the part of the inhabitants from southern Celebes.'

26.13 Compounds consisting of a noun or an adjective plus another word which does not occur by itself

Compounds of this type have the meanings usual for doubled nouns or adjectives 'various [noun]' or 'very [adjective].' (The second word in each of the following compounds does not occur by itself.)

kaja raja	'very wealthy'
kusut masai	'completely rumpled'
putjat lesi	'completely pale'
gerak gerik	'various motions'
warna warni	'various colors'
lauk pauk	'various side dishes'
lènggang lènggok	'swinging and swaying motions'
gotong rojong	'mutual aid, working together'

Perbendaharaan seni tari Indónésia jg kaja raja masih menunggu penggalian olèh para penjelidik. (20R4) 'The extremely rich treasury of Indonesian dance forms still awaits exploitation by scholars.'

Tarian itu mempergunakan gerak gerik jg sederhana. (20R11) 'This dance employs very simple movements.'

26.21 Rupanja, merupakan, berupa, rupa2nja

Rupa means 'form, shape, appearance.'

Bagaimana rupa orang itu? 'What does that man look like? (Lit. What is the shape of that man?)'

Rupa is common only with affixes added. Berupa is a verb (formed by adding ber- 'have [noun]' to rupa -- 14.23) meaning 'have the shape of.'

Hadiah lebaran biasanja berupa uang, tapi sekali ini berupa beras. 'Lebaran gifts usually are in the form of money, but this time they have the form of rice.'

Merupakan means 'make up, constitute , amount to, show oneself to be.'

Pulau Bali dalam hal ini merupakan pengetjualian. (20R8) 'Bali in this respect is (lit. shows itself to be) an exception.'

Dipulau Bali wajang kulit merupakan bagian dari upatjara agama. (26R3) 'In Bali the leather "wajang" makes up part of the religious ceremony.'

Uang dan untung sadja jg merupakan tanggungannja (16R6) 'He was concerned only with money and profit. (Lit. Money and profit constituted his only concern.)'

Rupanja has two meanings: (1) 'its form or shape'; (2) 'apparently.'

Rumahnja bagus sekali rupanja. (1) 'His house is very beautiful (its appearance)'; or (2) 'He apparently has a beautiful house.'

Rupanja mahal sekali harganja. 'Apparently it is very expensive.'

Rupa2nja means 'seemingly, apparently (but not really)':

> Diserambi setasiun Mèdan berdiri dua orang laki2, lengkap dengan tas dan mantelnja, rupa2nja hendak menumpang dengan kerèta. (23R1) 'In front of the railroad station in Medan two men were standing with briefcases and coats. They looked as though they were intending to get on the train.'

27IV. Free Conversation

A. You see an old friend from school, and you can tell by looking at him that he has really come up in the world. When you greet him he doesn't recognize you at first, but then apologizes and asks what you are doing. You answer that you are teaching in the economics department in the University of Indonesia. You say jokingly that a professor of economics ought to be more prosperous; it looks as though your friend was wiser in entering law school. He protests that he is not the prosperous one -- he is just a lecturer and not one of these bamboo lawyers. He assures you that if he had had enough brains he would have gone straight into economics, but he was too weak in mathematics. His only talent was talking, so he studied law. You repeat that teaching law must be a high position--just look at his clothing. You certainly couldn't afford to dress that way. He explains that when one is still a bachelor it's easy to get fat. You inform him that both of you are becoming old bachelors, in that case, because you haven't got a family yet either. He says that that is all right, too -- old in years but young at heart.

B. You ask your friend where he is teaching, and he answers in Makassar. You ask him how he likes his work there, and he says it's fine, especially since it is not too difficult to get away on a trip. At your interested response he explains that that's actually why he's in Djakarta -- to arrange for his departure abroad next month. You mention that it's not so easy to get a chance to go abroad if you only teach economics. Then your friend asks how you like the new system called guided study. You say that it seems to have made very good changes since it was put into effect in the fifties. He agrees and remarks that the old pledging system has been changed too and asks if you remember the way it was when you were both students. You say you remember you two really were something then. He asks about the girl you used to go with during pledging. You ask if he means Tini, and he says yes, the one who was pledge queen. You say she wasn't really your girlfriend--you only took her home after the parties. With a face like yours, you say, how could you be her boyfriend?

Batjaan

Mendjadi Mahasiswa di Indónésia

Bagian A

1. Seperti di-negara2 lainnja, pemuda pemudi di Indónésia jg mau meneruskan sekolahnja diperguruan tinggi, kerapkali djuga *menemui berbagai kesulitan dan persoalan. Hanja persoalan2 itu mungkin agak lain tjiri dan bentuknja.

2. Di Indónésia*dèwasa ini banjak sekali pemuda pemudi *tamatan SMA (Sekolah Menengah Atas) atau sekolah2 jg setara jg melamar untuk mendjadi mahasiswa. Tetapi karena perguruan2 tinggi negeri belum dapat menampung *sedemikian banjaknja pelamar2, maka banjak diantara merèka jg tidak beruntung dapat memasuki lembaga2 pendidikan tinggi tersebut. Walaupun pelamar2 itu rata2 memenuhi sjarat semuanja, tetapi banjak djuga dari merèka jg terpaksa menemui kegagalan untuk diterima sebagai mahasiswa.

3. Pemuda pemudi jg tidak beruntung itu terpaksa harus ke-perguruan2 tinggi partikelir jg *uang sekolahnja biasanja agak tinggi djuga. Berlainan dengan diunivèrsitas partikelir, mahasiswa univèrsitas2 negeri sekarang telah dibèbaskan dari pembajaran *uang kuliah.

4. Selain itu baru beberapa sadja daripada univèrsitas2 partikelir jg telah dapat menjamai taraf dan mutu pendidikan jg diberikan olèh univèrsitas2 pemerintah. Tetapi walaupun demikian, univèrsitas2 partikelir banjak djuga berdjasa didalam *usahanja menampung tjalon2 mahasiswa jg kurang beruntung itu.

5. Dapat pula dikemukakan bahwa beladjar di-perguruan2

tinggi di Indónésia tidaklah hanja terbatas pada anak2 golongan kaja dan jg diistimèwakan sadja; perguruan2 tinggi terbuka bagi semua pemuda pemudi jg radjin dan tjakap. Biasanja, sekali seorang mahasiswa berhasil lulus menempuh udjian masuk sesuatu univèrsitas negeri, dia terus mendapat kesempatan pula untuk *mendapatkan tundjangan hidup dari pemerintah atau béasiswa dari perusahaan2 negara ataupun swasta.

6. Kemungkinan ini tentu tergantung dari beberapa hal. Pertama, angka2 udjian penghabisannja dari SMA dan angka udjian masuknja keperguruan tinggi harus baik. Kedua, kesanggupan orang tua atau *pengampu *dari *si mahasiswa itu untuk *mengongkosinja mèmang benar2 terbatas. Ketiga, kemungkinan itu tergantung pula dari hal2 istimèwa lainnja seperti *penghargaan2 jg diberikan olèh pemerintah kepada si mahasiswa karena djasa2nja pada djaman révólusi, sebagai anggota *vèteran angkatan bersendjata dan sebagainja.

27VIA. Pertanjaan2:

1. Apa jg kerapkali ditemui pemuda pemudi di Indónésia jg mau meneruskan sekolahnja diperguruan tinggi?
2. Bagaimana hal itu di-negara2 lain?
3. Siapa2 jg biasanja melamar untuk mendjadi mahasiswa di Indónésia dèwasa ini?
4. Mengapa banjak dari pelamar2 itu jg tidak berhasil memasuki lembaga2 perguruan tinggi negeri?
5. Kemana mèreka jg tidak beruntung itu harus pergi?
6. Berapa besarnja kira2 uang sekolah di-univèrsitas2 negeri?

7. Bagaimana dengan di-univèrsitas2 partikelir?
8. Bagaimana taraf dan mutu univèrsitas2 partikelir?
9. Apa antara lain djasa2 dari univèrsitas2 partikelir?
10. Mengapa pemuda pemudi Indónésia berusaha selalu memasuki lembaga2 perguruan tinggi pemerintah dan bukan partikelir?
11. Kesempatan apa pula biasanja didapat olèh seorang jg telah lulus udjian masuk suatu univèrsitas negeri?
12. Siapa jg biasanja memberikan tundjangan hidup dan béasiswa2 pada mahasiswa2?
13. Sebutkan salah satu sjarat bagi seorang mahasiswa baru untuk mendapatkan béasiswa pemerintah.
14. Mengapa banjak mahasiswa2 jg mendapat pula penghargaan2 dari pemerintah?
15. Perguruan2 tinggi di Indónésia terbuka untuk anak2 siapa sadja?

Selesaikan kalimat2 berikut ini:

16. Karena perguruan2 tinggi negeri belum dapat menampung semua pelamar2 itu, maka banjak diantara mereka jg ...
17. Pelamar2 jg tidak beruntung itu terpaksa harus ...
18. Dèwasa ini mahasiswa2 univèrsitas2 negeri telah dibèbaskan ...
19. Perguruan2 tinggi terbuka untuk ...
20. Univèrsitas2 partikelir banjak djuga djasanja karena ...

Bagian B

7. Tetapi seperti telah dikemukakan tadi, mèmang banjak kesulitan jg harus dihadapi olèh mereka jg ingin mendjadi mahasiswa. Karena harga segala2nja mahal, keadaan ékónómi pada umumnja berat, maka semuanja tentu merupakan faktor jg mempersulit kehidupan mahasiswa. Apalagi untuk mereka jg bukan berasal dari keluarga jg beruang, tekanan ékónómi ini terasa sekali. Buku2 dan peralatan sekolah, *selainnja mahal, biasanja sukar *pula didapat.

8. Tetapi bagaimanapun djuga beratnja soal hidup ini bagi para mahasiswa jg *kurang berada, namun ia harus tabah, dan kesempatan mendjadi mahasiswa merupakan sesuatu jg berharga sekali bagi dia. Hal ini membuka kemungkinan bagi dia untuk mendapatkan pekerdjaan dan sumber hidup jg lajak djika ia berhasil menjelesaikan sekolahnja.

9. Kesempatan tersebut berarti pula bahwa pemuda atau pemudi itu mulai dididik untuk mendjadi anggota golongan masjarakat jg terpeladjar dan terdidik, jg sangat dibutuhkan bagi kemadjuan masjarakat dan bangsanja.

10. Bagaimana selandjutnja djika seorang pemuda telah diterima mendjadi mahasiswa? Biasanja sebelum kuliah2 dimulai, jaitu pada permulaan bulan September, untuk seluruh mahasiswa diadakan pekan perkenalan. Selama masa ini mahasiswa2 baru diperkenalkan dengan soal2 jg berhubungan dengan kehidupan kemahasiswaan. Mereka dapat pula saling mengenal lebih rapat, antara mahasiswa baru dengan mahasiswa baru lainnja dan antara mahasiswa baru dan mahasiswa lama.

11. Selama masa perkenalan itu seorang mahasiswa baru diperkenalkan dengan seorang mahasiswa jg lebih tua, jg djuga disebut sénior, jg dapat memberi nasihat dan petundjuk2 kepadanja; dan seterusnja sénior ini akan mendjadi penasihat dan pembantu si mahasiswa baru itu selama ia belum dapat menjesuaikan diri dengan kebiasaan serta hal2 jg berhubungan dengan studinja.

12. Salah satu atjara daripada pekan perkenalan itu adalah pertundjukan kesenian2 daèrah, menjanjikan njanjian2 pópulèr dan njanjian2 daèrah. Atjara lainnja jaitu penjelenggaraan2 kerdja bakti dan usaha2 sosial jg langsung memberikan hasil jg njata kepada masjarakat.

13. Pekan perkenalan ini sebenarnja sama dengan apa jg dinamakan dulu pekan perpelontjóan. Tetapi perpelontjóan dulu itu terlalu banjak dititikberatkan pada soal2 kesanggupan badani jg *ber-lebih2an jg diminta dari si mahasiswa baru itu.

14. Misalnja dulu terdapat atjara jg mengharuskan mahasiswa2 baru terdjun kedalam*kolam renang dari tempat jg agak tinggi. Tidak djarang terdjadi ketjelakaan2 karena tentunja ada diantara mahasiswa baru itu jg tidak dapat berenang. Ada pula kedjadian dimana seorang sénior atau mahasiswa lama dengan*se-wènang2 menjuruh seorang pelontjó atau *pelontji berbuat sesuatu jg djanggal. Misalnja pelontjó itu disuruh memandjat pohon jg tinggi, merangkak ditanah jg ber-batu2 tadjam *dll. Kadang2 terdjadi djuga perkelahian, karena si pelontjó *kehabisan sabarnja, merasa tersinggung, lalu mendjadi marah.

27VIB. Pertanjaan2:

1. Kesulitan apa misalnja jg se-hari2 harus dihadapi olèh seseorang mahasiswa di Indónésia pada umumnja?
2. Untuk siapa tekanan2 ékónómi akan terasa sekali?

3. Kesulitan2 apa pula jg dihadapi mengenai buku2 dan peralatan sekolah?
4. Mengapa kesempatan mendjadi mahasiswa merupakan sesuatu jg berharga sekali bagi seseorang?
5. Kapan biasanja pekan perkenalan itu diadakan?
6. Apa sadja jg diperkenalkan dalam pekan perkenalan?
7. Apa peranan mahasiswa2 jg lebih tua didalam hal2 jg berhubungan dengan studi mahasiswa2 baru?
8. Didalam hubungan dengan usaha2 sosial, atjara apa jg biasanja diselenggarakan?
9. Apakah jg disebut pekan perpelontjóan?
10. Dalam pekan perpelontjóan dulu, apa jg sering dititikberatkan?
11. Menurut saudara, apa sebenarnja tudjuan perpelontjóan jg berhubungan dengan pertanjaan sebelumnja (pertanjaan jg kesepuluh tadi)?
12. Kapan kira2 kuliah2 untuk mahasiswa2 baru mulai diberikan di-universitas2 di Indónésia?
13. Apakah baik djika didalam perpelontjóan udjian2 mengenai kesanggupan2 badani itu sangat di-lebih2kan? Berikan pendjelasan.
14. Sebutkan suatu hal jg berbahaja jg dulu sering mendjadi atjara didalam perpelontjoan.
15. Sebutkan sesuatu hal jg djanggal jg djuga sering harus dilakukan oleh si mahasiswa baru itu.
16. Mengapa kadang2 terdjadi perkelahian?
17. Siapa itu jg disebut pelontjó, pelontji dan sénior?

Selesaikan kalimat2 jg berikut:

18. Seorang sénior biasanja mendjadi penasihat dan pembantu si mahasiswa baru selama ...

19. Didalam perguruan2 tinggi pemuda pemudi mulai dididik untuk ...

20. Karena diantara mahasiswa2 baru ada jg tidak dapat berenang, maka tidak djarang ...

Bagian C

15. Mèmang tudjuannja ialah untuk mengudji sampai dimana kesabaran dan ketekunan si pelontjó itu. Tetapi karena banjak kedjadian hal2 jg merugikan si pelontjó dan si pelontji, maka sifat perpelontjóan demikian itu sekarang *dibatasi dan dirobah. Pada penutupan masa perkenalan, biasanja diadakan pèsta jg meriah sekali, dan disinilah klimaks atau titik puntjak dari masa perkenalan itu.

16. Setelah masa perkenalan selesai, mahasiswa baru mulai ber-sedia2 untuk mengikuti kuliah2. Dibeberapa fakultas, untuk tahun pertama mahasiswa2 diberi kesempatan pula untuk memilih mata peladjaran mata peladjaran pilihan disamping mata peladjaran mata peladjaran jg diwadjibkan. Didalam memilih mata peladjaran biasanja mahasiswa2 baru itu diberi petundjuk olèh kawan2nja atau olèh mahasiswa sénior. Djuga merèka dapat mengadakan pilihannja melalui pengumuman2 dan keterangan2 jg diberikan olèh fakultasnja masing2 atau olèh mahagurunja.

17. Tahun pertama merupakan suatu masa jg memerlukan dari si mahasiswa baru itu perhatian dan ketekunan jg istimèwa. Pada masa permulaan studinja dia harus menjesuaikan diri dengan kehidupan kemahasiswaan jg agak baru baginja. Sebagai mahasiswa dia harus beladjar sendiri tanpa tuntunan langsung dari guru besarnja. Dia harus banjak mempergunakan inisiatip sendiri, apalagi djika hendak mengadakan penjelidikan2. Dia harus banjak pula mempergunakan waktunja di-perpustakaan2, di-ruangan2 penjelidikan dan di-labóratórium2.

18. Diantara mahasiswa2 baru itu terdapat pula mahasiswa2 jg sudah berkeluarga dan sudah mempunjai pekerdjaan tetap. Tetapi mengikuti kuliah disamping bekerdja itu berat sekali. Apalagi karena banjak univèrsitas di Indónésia sekarang ini mengharuskan setiap mahasiswa selalu menghadiri kuliah2 sebelum diperbolèhkan menempuh udjian. Bagi mahasiswa2 jg sudah berkeluarga, kesulitan2 ini terasa sekali.

19. Banjaklah pula pengalaman2 jg menjenangkan dan memberi kesan selama mendjadi mahasiswa itu. Perajaan2 *lustrum fakultas atau univèrsitas ataupun perajaan2 kemahasiswaan lainnja sering dirajakan dengan meriah sekali. Djuga diadakan pertandingan2 olah raga, pertundjukan2 kesenian daèrah, kesenian2 internasiónal, dll. Bagi merèka jg sempat mengindjak lantai univèrsitas, kesempatan mendjadi mahasiswa itu merupakan sesuatu jg berharga sekali. *Penilaian masjarakat terhadap mahasiswa mèmang makin lama makin tinggi di Indónésia.

20. Tetapi suatu soal jg mendesak, perlu pula mendapat perhatian. Sekarang ini banjak sekali pemuda pemudi Indónésia tamatan SMA jg berbakat jg tidak dapat meneruskan peladjarannja sampai ketingkat univèrsitas. Merèka itu kebetulan tidak beruntung mendapat sumber2 pembiajaan dari pemerintah atau dari sesuatu *instansi partikelir. Atau kebetulan pula merèka *bukan berasal dari keluarga jg mampu. Banjak mahasiswa2 jg tidak dapat meneruskan studinja karena tekanan2 ékónómi jg berat itu. Tidak pula djarang kedjadian dimana seorang mahasiswa terpaksa meninggalkan studinja disebabkan olèh tekanan2 ékónómi atau olèh ketidak-sanggupannja mengikuti peladjaran2 jg diberikan. Merèka harus meninggalkan bangku2 univèrsitas dengan penuh penjesalan dan kekesalan.

21. Segala persoalan ini tentu memerlukan penjelesaian jg bidjaksana. *Pemetjahan persoalan ini harus segera ditjari, misalnja bagaimana harus menjalurkan pemuda pemudi tamatan SMA jg tidak berhasil masuk keperguruan tinggi dan mahasiswa2 jg gagal dalam studinja, ke-tempat2 pendidikan lainnja atau ke-lapangan2 pekerdjaan jg terbuka didalam masjarakat. Tata Bahasa

27.1 Compounds with mata

Mata followed by certain nouns forms a compound meaning 'type of [noun]':

pentjarian	'livelihood'	mata pentjarian	'occupation, type of livelihood'
peladjaran	'lesson'	mata peladjaran	'subject matter'
dagang	'trade'	mata dagang	'commodity in trade'
uang	'money'	mata uang	'coin, type of currency'
huruf	'letter, character'	mata huruf	'type of letter'

Tapi kan lumajan sekarang, ada mata pentjarian?

(17b40) 'But it isn't so bad, is it, now that you have a trade?'

Mata uang asing tidak bolèh dipergunakan di Indónésia.

'Foreign currency may not be used in Indonesia.'

Mata following nouns referring to an instrument forms a compound meaning 'the part of the [noun] that does [the action performed by the instrument]':

pisau	'knife'	mata pisau	'blade'
gunting	'scissors'	mata gunting,	'cutting edge'
panah	'arrow'	mata panah	'tip of arrow'
djarum	'needle'	mata djarum	'point of the needle'*

Belum lagi ia mulai mentjukur rambut mukanja jg kasar, udjung hidungnja sudah kena mata pisau tjukur jg tadjam itu. (17R3) 'No sooner had he begun to shave the coarse hairs of his face, when his nose was cut by the sharp blade of the knife.'

Do Exercise 27A.

27.2 Sadja

Sadja is a word which modifies a predicate and usually follows the last word in the predicate. In Lesson 10 we discussed four usages of sadja: (1) in the meaning 'merely, no better than [predicate]'; (2) in the meaning 'it might as well be [predicate], [predicate] is the least undesirable of available choices'; (3) with imperatives, implying that the thing requested is a little thing to do; (4) in idioms: [interrogative] sadja 'anything, any time, any place, any way, any amount, etc. at all'; tentu, bisa, or bolèh sadja 'of course, it can be done'; baru sadja 'just now.'

Ini buat tuan sadja. (13c45) 'This (price) is only for you.' [Meaning 1]

---

*Mata djarum also means 'eye of the needle.'

Ah, ndak usah, biar saja sadja nanti jg mengambil èsnja. (16a14a) 'Don't bother, let me (be the one) to get the ice.' [Meaning 2]

Naik bètjak sadja tuan kesana. (13a6c) 'You'd better take a betja there.' [Meaning 3]

Ini, pembantu saja, bolèh disuruh kemana sadja. (14b25d) 'My maid can run errands anywhere at all.

Apa sadja jg kamu makan? (16R7) 'What all do you eat?'

Jg mana sadja djuga bisa. (14a14b) Any one at all will be OK.

Tentu sadja saja kenal si Daulat. (15d66a) 'Of course I know Daulat.'

Bisa kamu menolong saja mentjari kamar? --

Bisa sadja! 'Can you help me look for a room?'

--'Of course I can!'

Jg tinggal disini baru sadja berangkat pagi ini. (14a17e) 'The one who used to live here has just left this morning.'

There are some other meanings of sadja which have appeared in the material after Lesson 10: (5) [predicate] is the case anyway, despite expectations:

Merèka sering tidak makan, tapi kelihatannja gemuk sadja. 'They often had nothing to eat, but they looked fat anyway.'

É, kok ingat2 adja, ja. (27c56) 'Hmm, you would remember it, wouldn't you!'

(6) Sadja modifies the lesser of two opposite qualities to mean 'very ...' (light (as opposed to heavy), short, small, close, and the like):

Tempat itu dekat sadja dari sekolah. 'That place is very close to school.'

Sama sadja means 'exactly the same':

Sama sadja ke-dua2nja. Tidak ada bedanja. 'The two are exactly alike. There is no difference.'

(7) The phrase hampir sadja modifies a predicate which refers to an unfortunate or disadvantageous event and means '[predicate] almost happened':

Hampir sadja dia dimakan harimau. 'He was almost eaten by a tiger.'

The phrase mau sadja means 'of course (I, he, etc.) wants to ...'

Nonton sih, mau sadja. 'Go to the movies? Sure I want to.'

Mudah2an sadja or minta2 sadja means 'I hope [so-and-so] happens (although it is likely that it will not happen).'

Wah sudah lat ini. Mudah2an sadja nanti tidak ketinggalan kereta api. 'My, it's gotten late now. I hope we won't miss the train now!'

Compare this with minta2 or mudah2an by themselves which do not imply that the thing hoped for is unlikely to happen:

Mudah2an perusahaan kalian ini akan memberi hasil jg baik nanti. 'I hope your business brings you a good profit.'

Do Exercise 27B ff.

27.3 Sama

Sama is an adjective meaning 'same':

Umur mereka sama. 'They are of the same age.'

It is a preposition meaning (1) with (short for bersama; = dengan) and (2) to, for (colloquial for pada):

Dia tinggal sama (= bersama, dengan or bersama dengan) anaknja. 'He lives together with his son.'

Berikan uang itu sama (= pada) saja. 'Give that money to me.'

Tanja sama (= pada) dia. 'Ask him (lit. to him).'

Sama also is used as a modifier of a verb to indicate plural agents in colloquial speech:

Anak2 itu sama mengerumuni orang gila itu. 'The children crowded around (plurally) the crazy man.'

Sama sekali means 'completely':

Karena keadaan sudah sama sekali berubah kalau kita bandingkan dengan tahun2 lima puluhan. (27b28b) 'Because the situation has changed entirely if we compare it with the fifties.'

Bersama means (1) 'together' and (2) 'together with' (= dengan):

Mangga ini untuk saudara2 bersama. 'These mangoes are for all of you (lit. you together).'

Dia tinggal bersama (= dengan) anaknja. 'He lives together with his child.'

Samasama means (1) do something together with someone else (short for ber-sama2) and (2) exactly alike (= sama sadja).

Mari kita sama2 (= ber-sama2) pulang. 'Let's go home together.'

Sama2 seperti kamu djuga tu saja tu. (27a12b)

'My work is just the same as yours.'

Do Exercise 27C.

27.4 Word study

27.41 Lah 'at least [so-and-so] is the case

Review the uses of lah in [20.22]. Lah is also used to modify predicates and give the meaning 'at least [predicate] is the case':

Tapi, ja, tidak terlalu seringlah. (27b30b)

'But it hasn't been TOO often.'

Do Exercise 27D.

27.42 Segala

Segala has two meanings: (1) 'all'; (2) (following the stressed word of the predicate) '[predicate] is the case, when it is more than necessary.' (A word with a similar meaning to segala in this second meaning is lagi in the meaning described in [19.33].) This usage is confined to colloquial speech.

Kok pakai2 dasi segala! 'Why do we have to bother wearing ties (unnecessarily)!'

Aduh! Bawa olèh2 segala! 'My! You went and brought us presents!'

A, mèmang itu ékónómi djuga pakai ilmu pasti segala. (27b44a) 'Yes, it is. For economics you have to have too much math, too.'

Do Exercise 27E.

27.53. Njanji

Njanji is a noun meaning 'sing.' It is made into an intransitive verb by adding ber- or meN- with no difference in meaning. (Of course, like other verbs with meN- and ber-, meN- and ber- may be dropped in colloquial speech.)

Siapa jg mau menjanji (or bernjanji) sekarang?

'Who is going to sing now?'

Transitive verbs are formed from njanji by adding -kan [9.13]:

Njanjian apa jg mau kamu njanjikan sekarang? 'What song are you going to sing now?' [The word meaning 'sing' is in a construction which requires a passive, and since only transitive verbs have passive forms, njanjikan must be used instead of njanji.]

Do Exercise 27F.

j. Kalau jg warnanja seperti ini, warna jg agak tua, biasanja dari ini, dari Sóló.

28III. Pertjakapan:

Bagian A

Tuan De Jong melawat ke Djokdjakarta dan didjemput olèh Sutomo, seorang pemandu pariwisata, dilapangan terbang.

Sutomo: Selamat siang.

De Jong: Selamat siang.

Sutomo: E, maaf, apa tuan, Tuan De Jong? Jg dari New York?

De Jong: Ja, betul.

Sutomo: Saja Sutomo, dari Dèwan Turisme. Saja ditugaskan untuk mendjemput tuan dan djuga mengantar tuan selama di Djokdjakarta ini.

De Jong: Ó Saudara Sutomo. Saja baru sadja turun dari kapal terbang. Saja mèmang sudah diberitahukan di Djakarta bahwa saja akan didjemput olèh saudara. Senang sekali saja bertemu dengan saudara.

Sutomo: Terima kasih. Mari kita kemobil.

De Jong: Bisa tunggu sebentar? Saja kekamar ketjil sebentar.

Sutomo: Tentu sadja. Tempatnja disitu, mari saja antarkan.

(Merèka sudah dimobil, dalam perdjalanan dari lapangan terbang kekota Djokdja.)

Sutomo: Tuan kok sudah pinter berbahasa Indónésia. Saja kagum tuan bisa lantjar sekali bahasa Indónésianja.

De Jong: Saja kira, belum begitu lantjar. Saja mèmang sebenarnja sudah lama djuga beladjar bahasa Indónésia. Saja harap, kalau ada kesalahan2, Saudara Tomo suka memperbaikinja.

Sutomo: Saja kira tidak perlu lagi, karena tuan sudah tjukup lantjar berbahasa Indónésia.

De Jong: Djadi dimana saja menginap? Dan bagaimana rentjananja sekarang?

Sutomo: Ó, perkara itu sudah bèrès. Segala sesuatu akan kami usahakan se-baik2nja.

De Jong: Terima kasih. Aduh, bagus betul, ja, pemandangannja! Tepat betul waktunja saja datang sekarang ini. Padi di-sawah2 semuanja sedang menguning. Indah betul.

Sutomo: Ó, ja. Tuan lihat gunung itu? Itu namanja Gunung Merapi. Karena memang gunung berapi.

De Jong: Apa pernah meletus?

Sutomo: Ó, sering. Tapi sekarang tuan tidak usah kuatir. Nah, kita sekarang sudah mulai memasuki kota Djokdja. Kita akan kehotèl dulu.

Benar atau salah:

1. Tuan De Jong datang dari New York dan tidak singgah di Djakarta.
2. Disamping mendjemput De Jong, Sutomo djuga harus mengantar De Jong selama dia berada di Djokdja.
3. De Jong belum terlalu lama beladjar bahasa Indónésia; sebab itu ia belum bisa lantjar berbahasa Indónésia.
4. Dèwan Turisme belum mempunjai rentjana untuk De Jong karena dia datangnja telat.
5. Gunung Merapi itu gunung berapi dan sering meletus.
6. Waktu itu Gunung Merapi sedang meletus, djadi De Jong kuatir.

7. Merèka naik mobil dari lapangan terbang ke Djokdja.

8. Kata De Jong, dia datang tidak pada waktu jg tepat karena padi di-sawah2 sedang menguning.

Bagian B

De Jong ingin membeli oleh2.

De Jong: Saudara Tomo, apa, ja, jg bagus untuk olèh2?

Sutomo: Wah, banjak. Lebih baik kita ketoko sadja; nanti disana tuan bisa memilih.

De Jong: Tokonja, apa djauh dari sini?

Sutomo: Tidak, tidak djauh. Barang2nja disana kwalitètnja [illegible]

De Jong: Ó, bagus itu. Kalau begitu, kita pergi sadja sekarang.

28IV. Free conversation

A. Pretend you are visiting Jogja and are talking with your guide. Having just arrived at the airport, you meet Tomo who introduces himself as your guide and directs you to his car. On the way from the airport you attempt to discover what plans have been made -- at what hotel you will stay, where you will visit tomorrow, etc. Failing to get any information more definite than the assurance that all the arrangements are taken care of, you try another approach. You show interest in discussing the ricefields and farm work; you ask whether all the people around Jogja are farmers. Your guide hastens to correct you and mentions several other occupations -- silvermaking, batik production, and other handicrafts. You suggest that perhaps he could arrange for you to see some handicraft shops or factories.

He says of course, that has already been arranged; tomorrow you will go to a silver shop and a batik factory where he has a friend who can show you around. You are delighted, you tell him, because you also wanted to buy some souvenirs to take home. Then you ask about the Ramayana ballet, that you have heard is so beautiful. He tells you to wait until tomorrow to see it -- he has already got tickets for you. By this time you have arrived at the hotel, and he takes you in to register.

B. The next morning Tomo meets you at the hotel. He asks

You enjoyed it very much, you say, but you had thought Indonesian food would all be very spicy. Tomo says that they serve food specially for foreigners in the hotel, so it's not as hot, but if you want it spicier you can request it. You suggest that you would like to try real Jogja cooking; perhaps after the Ramayana ballet you could go to a restaurant. He says he knows one which is famous for its roast chicken. Tomo tells you that today is the day for sightseeing at Borobudur. You remind him that he had planned to take you to see the handicraft shops. He says of course -- there is plenty of time to do both, but maybe it would be better to shop for souvenirs first because Borobudur is rather far away. You say you will need advice on what things to buy -- which ones are the nicest and what prices to pay. He assures you it is easy to tell good batik, because it is the finest and is beautifully colored. You say you thought that it was always just brown and blue. He says that it's true - in Jogja and Solo they used to use only those colors, but now they make them in red, green and others as well. He assures you that at the store that he knows they are all of good quality, and you should just buy the ones you like the best. You ask whether the white silver you've seen is better than the black kind, and he assures you that both are very good. Jogja is famous for the black kind, which is called Usually the white pieces are from other places, like Bali and Kendari.

Tata Bahasa

28.1 Verbs and nouns formed by doubling the base and adding meN- to the repeated base.

Verbs having the shape [base] meN- [base] have the meaning 'do [base] to one another.' Such verbs are also used as nouns which have the meaning 'action of doing [base] to one another':

tolong menolong	'help one another, mutual aid'
bantu membantu	'help one another, mutual aid'
pukul memukul	'hit one another, fighting with one another' pandang memandang	'look at one another, mutual regard'
tulis menulis	'write one another, correspondence'
tanja menanja	'ask one another, mutual questioning'
timbang menimbang	'weigh each other's feelings'

If the base has a suffix, the suffix is dropped in the first repetition of the base:

hormati	'respect'	hormat menghormati	'respect one another'
dekati	'approach'	dekat mendekati	'approach one another' djandjikan	'promise something	djandji mendjandjikan	'promise one another'

Ada djuga jg diupah, tapi biasanja gotong rojong. Itu bantu membantu artinja. (28a22a) 'There are some who are hired, but usually it is by "gotong rojong." That means "help one another."'

Rupanja merèka itu tjinta menjintai. Sudah lama saja lihat merèka itu saling pandang memandang. 'Apparently, they are in love with each other. For a long time, I have observed them looking at each other.'

Saja kira dikantor ini masih diperlukan lagi bahan2 tulis menulis. 'I think that we need some more materials for correspondence in our office.'

Verbs and nouns having the shape [base] meN- [base] are formed for the most part from bases which are transitive verbs (verbs which have a passive and which can occur with the prefix meN-). Further, not all bases which are transitive verbs can occur in the shape [base] meN- [base]. (The meaning of verbs having the shape [base] meN- [base] is similar to verbs having the affixes ber--an [21.2].)

Do Exercises 28A ff.

28.2 Verbs with ber- meaning '[do]'

Some verbs of frequent occurrence have a prefix ber- (which in colloquial speech is usually dropped) which does not fall into any of the categories discussed in previous lessons (ber- with nouns, numbers; ber- forming verbs '[do] to oneself'). In most of such cases no meaning can be assigned to ber-: it is simply a verb-forming prefix. Some verbs of this type we have had are: bermain 'play,' bekerdja 'work,' berlari 'run,' berdjalan 'walk,' berpikir 'think,' berkata 'say,' berbitjara 'speak,' berbuat 'do,' berlaku 'act,' berolèh 'obtain,' bersekolah 'study,' beladjar 'study,' bernjanji 'sing,' bertanja 'ask,' berbelandja 'shop,' and many other verbs which are similar in meaning to the above:

Anak itu ber-main2 sadja. Dia tidak mau bekerdja.

'That child just plays around. He does not want to work.'

Some bases of verbs occur both with ber- and meN- and there is a difference in meaning between the verb having ber- and the verb having meN-:

berbuat	'act, do'	membuat	'make, fashion'
berhitung	'do arithmetic'	menghitung	'count, reckon'
bertanam	'grow, raise [plants] for a living'	menanam	'plant something'
beladjar	'study'	mengadjar	'teach'
berangkat	'depart'	mengangkat	'carry'
berkembang	'blossom, develop'	mengembang	'become expanded, unfurled' berseru	'shout'	menjeru	'call, get the attention of'
berburu	'hunt'	memburu	'chase'

Other bases of verbs of this type occur with both ber- and meN- and there is no difference in meaning between the verb having ber- and the verb having meN- (except a stylistic difference):

berpikir	'think'	memikir	'think'
bertanja	'ask'	menanja	'ask'
bernjanji	'sing'	menjanji	'sing'
berteduh	'take shelter'	meneduh	'take shelter'
berdoa	'pray'	mendoa	'pray'

There are many other verb roots which take both the prefix ber- and the prefix meN-. (These types have been discussed in previous lessons):

berobah	'change'	mengobah	'change something'
bertjampur	'be mixed in'	mentjampur	'mix something into something else' bertukar	'become changed'	menukar	'change something'
berpegang	'hold on to something for support, hold on to each other'	memegang	'touch, keep'

berbentuk	'have the shape of'	membentuk	'shape something'
bertjerat	'have a spout' nozzle'	mentjerat	'pour through a spout, nozzle'
bertjukur	'shave oneself'	mentjukur	'shave others'
berkembang	'develop, blosson'	mengembang	'become expanded, spread out'
berambut	'have hair'	merambut	'become stringy'
berbatu	'be stony '	membatu	'become hard'

28.21 Ber- forming verbs meaning '[do] as an occupation'

Ber- is added to some nouns and verbs to form verbs meaning 'engage in [noun or verb] as an occupation.'

tanam	'plant'	bertanam	'grow ... for a living'
tjotjok tanam	'pierce and plant'	bertjotjok tanam	'farm'
orang tani	'farmer'	bertani	'farm'
dagang	'trade'	berdagang	'be a trader'
ladang	'dry fields'	berladang	'farm dry fields'
sawah	'wet rice lands'	bersawah	'grow rice'
usaha	'enterprise, endeavor'	berusaha	'engage in business'

Sudah dari djaman dulu orang bertanam padi seperti ini. (28b33c) 'Since time immemorial people have been growing rice like this.'

Saja berusaha dikota. Orang tua saja masih bersawah didèsa. 'I engage in business in the city. My parents still grow rice in the country.'

Do Exercise 28B.

28.3 Ke--an, ke- doubling -an, doubling -an

Do Exercises 28C1 f.

28.32 Ke--an added to doubled adjectives

Ke--an is added to doubled adjectives to form adjectives meaning '[adjective]-ish, act like someone who is [adjective]':

ke-mèrah2an	'reddish'	ke-hidjau2an	'greenish'
ke-kuning2an	'yellowish'	ke-gelap2an	'twilight (lit. darkish)'
ke-kanak2an	'childish'	ke-muda2an	'act like a young person'

Seorang perempuan naik kekerèta api. Pipinja ke-mèrah2an karena berdjalan dipanas matahari. 'A woman got on the train. Her cheeks were reddish because she had been walking in the sun.'

28.33 -An added to doubled nouns referring to plants or parts of plants

-An added to doubled nouns referring to plants or parts of plants forms words meaning '[nouns] of various kinds':

akar2an	'roots of various kinds'	rumput2an	'grass of various kinds'
bunga2an	'flowers of various kinds'	sajur2an	'vegetables of various kinds' buah2an	'fruits of various kinds'	tumbuh2an	'vegetables of various kinds' bau2an	'fragrant plants of various kinds	wangi2an	'fragrant flowers of various kinds'
daun2an	'leaves of various kinds'

Bapak saja menanam sajur2an kalau musim hudjan.

'My father plants vegetables in the rainy season.'

Pekerdjaan persiapan berupa pentjelupan dalam minjak tumbuh2an serta larutan sóda. (28R4)

'The work of preparation consists of dipping it into the oil of plants and into a soda solution.'

28.34 -An added to nouns meaning 'toy [noun]'

Most nouns which refer to things which can be reproduced as toys occur with this formation:

rumah2an	'toy house'	mobil2an	'toy car'
orang2an	'doll, puppet'	kerèta2an	'toy train'

Anak itu bermain dengan mobil2annja. 'The child was playing with his toy car.

Bagian A

Tuti bangun pagi2, dan hendak pergi kesekolah.

Ibu: Tuti, bangun! Hari sudah siang. Ajó bangun!

Tuti: Pukul berapa sih, bu, sekarang? Kelihatannja kok masih pagi?

Ibu: Apa? Masih pagi? Hari sudah siang, ajó tjepat bangun!

Tuti: Mana pakaian seragamnja, bu?

Ibu: Itu, sudah dikamar mandi. Djangan lupa bersihkan djuga kukumu, ja? Nanti dimarahi ibu guru, kalau kukumu kotor.

Tuti: Ia, bu. Bu, tolong djalinkan rambut saja, bu.

Ibu: Ah, sudah besar kok masih minta ditolong. Sini, ibu djalinkan.

Tuti: Habis sukar sih, bu. Pakai pita jg kuning sadja, bu.

Ibu: Jg kuning itu ndak tjotjok dengan badjunja. Jg mèrah sadja. Nah, sudah selesai. Sudah sikat gigi, belum?

Tuti: Ó ia, lupa, bu.

Ibu: Ajò kesana, sikat gigi. Sesudah itu tjepat pakai sepatu dan makan dikamar makan.

Tuti: Baik, bu.

Ibu: Tuti, kenapa susunja tidak kamu habiskan?

Tuti: Saja nggak senang sih. Masa harus dihabiskan, bu? Nanti saja kegemukan, bu.

Ibu: Mèmangnja kamu gemuk? Ja, sudahlah, ndak usah.

Tuti: Bu, mana uangnja untuk djadjan?

Ibu: Ini nih, lima pèrak.

Tuti: Masa tjuma lima pèrak, tambah dong. Jg untuk djadjan bèsok, kasi adja sekarang, bu.

Ibu: É, sudah tjukup itu. Djangan terlalu banjak djadjan, nanti kamu nggak mau makan dirumah. Jg kemarèn bapak berikan, mana?

Tuti: Lhó, uang jg dari bapak itu, kan uang untuk buku tulis? Lima pèrak nggak bisa beli kué mangkok, bu.

Ibu: Sudahlah. Ambil jg tiga pèrak diatas mèdja itu. Ajó, baik2 disekolah dan hati2 naik sepèda, ja? É, salam sama bapak dulu dikamar depan.

Tuti: Baik, bu.

29IV. Free Conversation

A. Tuti is woken up by her mother to go to school, which she is evidently not eager to do. Her mother tells her to get up quickly and put on her clean uniform because breakfast is on the table. Tuti says she isn't hungry, but her mother insists that she at least drink some milk. Tuti says she has to find her hair ribbon first; her mother already has it, and tells her to come and have her hair combed. She tells her that her shoes are in the closet. The maid has already polished them. She asks her whether she got all her homework done the night before, and what it was that had taken so long to finish. Tuti tells her it was the geography problems, which were very hard, but she got them all done finally.

Tuti announces she has finished her milk, and her mother answers that she'd better be going. Tuti reminds her mother about her spending money, and her mother gives her five rupiahs. Tuti asks for some more, but her mother scolds her for wanting to eat only snacks and not being hungry at mealtime. She tells her to hurry up and go, and not to be naughty at school.

B. Tuti comes home after school and is greeted by her mother, who notices a rip in her dress. Tuti explains that she fell when she was playing with Tati and ripped her dress on a fence. Her mother is angry with her for staying late to play after school and tells her to have a snack and then do her schoolwork. Her mother asks how she was in school and whether she did as the teacher told her. Tuti answers yes, but that there is a boy who was always talking and getting ahead in line when they went to the bathroom. She tells her mother that she was the one who got to clean the erasers today. Her mother asks her what she learned in school and whether the geography problems were all right. Tuti says she doesn't know because they didn't do geography today. The geography was for tomorrow; now she has to do the arithmetic that was for today. Her mother expresses despair at Tuti's forgetfulness. She tells her to finish eating and begin her arithmetic. Tuti asks if she can't take a rest first, but her mother says that since she got home so late, she'd better begin her homework right away. Then Tuti remembers that she left her books at school. At this point her mother is very annoyed. She asks Tuti where she left them, so the maid can find them, and Tuti answers they're in the drawer of her desk, in the back row. Her mother takes the key and sends Tuti to change her clothes. She tells her not to go out to play, but just to wait until the maid comes back with the books.

4. 'Masa,' kataku, 'aku tidak pertjaja. Kalau tjuma dokter buku sadja, apa gunanja?'

5. 'Itulah maksudku,' katanja, 'bahwa téori kepandaian itu bisa dipeladjari sendiri, tidak perlu bersekolah terlalu tinggi2, dan tidak semua orang jg bertitèl *Ir., Dr., dan Prof. sebenarnja *sepintar bajangan jg diberikan titel mereka itu.'

6. 'Itu,' kataku, 'aku tidak bantah, karena abangku sendiri keluaran sekolah *mister, tetapi *lain tidak kerdjanja, hanja mendjual sawah orang tuaku sadja, dan *perkaranja belum satu kali jg menang.'

7. 'Nah, itu bukti jg dekat,' katanja.

8. 'Apa maksudmu?' kataku.

9. 'Bukti kataku jg tadi,' katanja.

10. 'Ó,' kataku.

11. 'Mengertikah engkau sekarang maksudku?' tanjanja.

12. 'Aku mengerti, tetapi aku belum pertjaja,' kataku.

13. 'Nantilah engkau dapat melihat aku sendiri jg membuktikannja,' katanja.

14. 'Bagaimana?' tanjaku.

15. Supaja orang lebih mengerti tentang tjeritera ini, lebih baik aku tjeriterakan lebih dahulu tentang si Djamal ini. Ia lahir di Padang Pandjang di Sumatera Barat. Orang tuanja mantri hèwan. *Dia seoranglah anak orang tuanja jg laki2, dan ada seorang adiknja perempuan. Aku tidak hendak mengatakan *apakah kemalangannja atau keuntungannja, tetapi ia dilahirkan ditahun jg menjebabkan ketika ia telah besar, ia berada di-tengah2 gelombang perhatian besar kepada agama jg atjap timbul di Sumatera Barat itu sekali lima tahun, atau sekali dua tahun, atau sekali tudjuh tahun.

16. Aku tidak tahu benar sekali berapa tahun, tetapi ketika dia telah tamat sekolah dèsa, maka *persis ketika tahun dia keluar-sekolah itu pergerakan agama sedang menghèbat benar diseluruh Sumatera Barat. Di-mana2 timbul madrasah2 seperti djamur, dan Islamic2 Collége didirikan di-mana2, hingga disebuah dèsa jg tidak lebih dari 2.000 orang penduduknja didirikan orang sebuah Al-Islam University namanja.

17. Barangkali kalau dia dilahirkan dua atau tiga tahun lebih dahulu, maka mungkin*tidak teringat kepada ajahnja untuk memasukkannja kedalam *salah sebuah Islamic2 Collége itu, dan ajahnja akan merasa puas dengan pendidikan agama Islam jg diterimanja sambil mengadji*disurau sadja. Dan mungkin ajahnja akan mentjoba memasukkannja kedalam sekolah rendah jg berbahasa Belanda, dan karena itu mungkin perdjalanan hidupnja akan bertukar sama sekali.

18. Tetapi, sebagai telah aku tjeriterakan,*entah malangnja *entah untungnja, dia dilahirkan dua atau tiga tahun terlalu lekas atau terlambat.

19. Demikianlah dia dimasukkan kedalam sebuah sekolah jg diberi nama Módèren Islamic Collége. Dalam próspèktus sekolah itu diterangkan, bahwa guru kepalanja *keluaran sekolah *Al-Azhar di Mesir. Murid2 jg diterima mulai *lepasan *sekolah dèsa, sekolah *H.I.S. dan sekolah *Muló, akan di-bagi2 dalam "first standard," "second standard," "third standard," dan "junior" dan "senior college," menurut pengetahuan merèka dan kepandaian merèka tentang agama Islam. Benar2 ditulis demikian dengan bahasa Inggeris.

20. Akan diadjarkan disamping peladjaran2 agama Islam djuga soal2 pólitik, ékónómi, sósial, bahasa Arab, Inggeris, Djerman, dan Perantjis. Setelah tamat sekolah ini bisa meneruskan peladjaran dengan langsung ke Al-Azhar University di Kairó.

21. Hanja tidak disebutkannja bahwa guru kepala dari Al-Azhar itu mèmang dari Kairó dan dari Al-Azhar University, tetapi hanja setahun dan *masih lama, belum selesai sekolahnja. Dan bahwa kalau hendak masuk ke Al-Azhar University di Kairó itu, *pandai membatja Kuran sadjapun bisa, asal mau beladjar ber-puluh2 tahun lamanja.

22. Tetapi bagaimanakah mantri hèwan, ajah si Djamal itu, akan mengetahui ini semua, soal2 jg tersembunji dibelakang kata2 Inggeris dan gambar2 gedung2 jg indah2 di Kairó jg dipasang didalam próspèktus sekolah Módèren Islamic Collége itu?

23. *Demikian hal si Djamal dimasukkan kedalam sekolah itu. Bagi dia sendiri sekolah itu telah maha hèbat. Dia mendapat sebuah*insinje sekolah, tiga segi berdasar hidjau dengan gambar bulan sabit dan bintang kuning di-tengah2nja dan dalam huruf Arab nama sekolah Módèren Islamic Collége. Dibajar olèh orang tuanja, serupiah setengah harganja.

24. Guru bahasa Inggeris, Perantjis dan Djerman merèka seorang guru keluaran sekolah Mulo. Dia sungguh2 hendak mengadjar, tetapi dia sendiri tidak begitu mengerti apa jg diadjarkannja itu, hingga pengetahuan murid2nja ber-tambah2 gelap lagi. Meskipun demikian, murid2 sekolah itu telah merasa bangga sekali mengenal kata2 Inggeris I, you, he, she, me, sir, good morning, good evening, school, book, pen dan sebagainja.

25. Disekolah jg demikianlah Djamal bersekolah, tempat dia mendengar nama2 Sócratès, Karl Marx, Adam Smith, Révólusi Perantjis, Manifèstó Pólitik, di-tjampur2 dengan nama2 Rabindranath Tagóre, Umar Khayam, téori2 Islam, démókrasi-Islam, sósialisme-Islam, komunisme-Islam, kapitalisme-Islam, Islam dan Dunia dan sebagainja. Dan semuanja itu didengarnja setiap hari *me-manggil2nja, tetapi tidak pernah dapat ditjapainja benar2. Djika *rasa2 telah hampir dekat hendak terpeluk, melepas diri mendjauh berlari, dan me-manggil2 kembali.

26. Karena guru2 merèka tidak tjakap! Bagi setengah murid2 keadaan jg demikian mendjadi siksa dan penjakit hati dan pikiran, tetapi bagi setengah jg lain mengenal nama2 dan téori2 itu *sekeping2 menimbulkan rasa sombong dan besar kepala, dan mereka manganggap diri mereka telah amat pintar.

27. Si Djamal terombang ambing diantara kedua perasaan ini. Benar hatinja dan pikirannja merasa tersiksa karena pengetahuan jg*serba kurang, tetapi sebaliknja, dia merasa bangga dapat me-njebut2 nama2 orang2 jg hebat2 itu, dan membatjakan sehalaman pertama Manifèstó Komunis dengan lantjar, dengan tidak usah ber-pikir2.

28. Hingga achirnja pada suatu hari ajahnja meninggal dunia, kena tanduk kerbau gila jg mesti diperiksanja. Dan Djamal terpaksa meninggalkan sekolahnja. Sebenarnja tidak perlu dia meninggalkan sekolahnja, karena *mamaknja (paman) bersedia untuk meneruskan sekolahnja. Tetapi pikiran2 baru jg diterimanja disekolah menimbulkan kebentjiannja kepada *adat*mamak kemanakan Minangkabau itu, dan satu djalan untuk menundjukkan révólusi djiwanja ialah menolak pertolongan mamaknja itu.

29. Ia pergi ke Djakarta, dan di Djakarta aku bertemu dengan dia. Kami berkenalan mula2 dalam sebuah toko buku tua. Aku sedang men-tjari2 buku2 cowboy dan roman2 détèktip, karena itulah jg suka sekali aku batja. Sedang aku me-milih2, tiba2 kudengar dia berkata dari bawah lantai,

30. 'Maaf, saudara, bolèhkah saja ambil buku dari bawah sepatu saudara ini?'

31. Aku melihat kebawah dan kulihat dia sedang mentjangkung dilantai, kepalanja terulur kebawah mentjoba membatja nama buku jg *aku indjak itu. Aku tersenjum, 'Tentu bolèh,' kataku, dan aku angkat kakiku. 'Buku apa itu?' tanjaku.

32. Dia berdiri mengangkat buku itu, dan me-nepuk2nja dengan tangannja, membersihkan debu. Aku tidak ingat benar lagi nama buku usang itu, tetapi kalau aku tidak salah namanja Téori Hubungan Antara Psychólógie Manusia dengan Ékónómie Dunia atau begitu dalam bahasa Djerman. Matanja ber-tjahaja2 melihat buku itu.

33. Demikianlah kami berkenalan, dan aku tanja kepadanja, 'Saudara suka benar rupanja kepada buku2?'

34. 'Amat suka,' katanja.

35. 'Datanglah kerumahku *sekali2,' kataku. 'Bolèh saudara pilih mana buku2 jg hendak saudara batja.' Dia merasa girang sekali aku adjak, dan dia berdjandji akan datang.

36. Aku telah lupa kepadanja ketika dia pada suatu hari datang. Aku bawa dia kekamarku. 'Pilihlah mana jg saudara mau,' kataku, 'menundjuk kelemari buku,*kerak, kemèdja tulis.

37. Dia pergi men-tjari2. Seperempat djam kemudian dia bertanja, 'Tidak adakah jg lain?'

38. 'Sudah komplit semuanja disana,' kataku. 'Apa jg tidak ada, tjerita cowboy, róman détèktip, tjeritera perang?'

39. 'Bukan itu maksudku,' katanja. 'Buku2 ilmu pengetahuan jg berat2.'

40. 'Tidak suka aku membatja buku2 demikian,' kataku.

41. 'Ó,' katanja, seperti orang ketjèwa.

42. Kemudian dia mengadjak aku datang kerumahnja. Diperlihatkannja kepadaku kumpulan buku2nja. Apa jg tidak ada. Pèndèknja sebuah musium akan tjemburu melihat buku2nja itu. Buku2 tua jg *tidak pernah dibatja orang lagi. Ada sedjarah, ilmu bumi, ilmu manusia, ilmu barang antik, ilmu apa lagi, hingga kesusasteraan. Tetapi aku perhatikan buku2 sasteranja hanjalah mengenai puisi sadja. Aku lihat Byron, Shakespeare, Oscar Wilde, Robert Browning, Keats, dan sebagainja ber-baris2 dan beberapa puluh buku2 lagi dalam bahasa Sepanjol, Perantjis, dan Djerman.

43. 'Ó,' kataku, 'saudara membatja buku2 Perantjis, Inggeris, Djerman, Belanda, dan Sepanjol?'

44. 'Tidak,' katanja, 'tidak semua aku batja. Aku baru sedang menjelesaikan peladjaran bahasa Inggerisku sedikit2. Buku2 jg lain itu aku beli, biarpun tidak dapat aku batja sekarang. Nanti kalau aku sudah bisa berbahasa Djerman, Perantjis, atau Sepanjol, bukankah bisa aku batja?' katanja.

45. 'Tetapi bagaimana saudara tahu, kalau sekarang saudara tidak tahu apa isi buku itu, saudara akan suka membatjanja nanti?' tanjaku.

46. 'Dapat aku rasa,' katanja. Kemudian dia menundjukkan kepadaku sebuah pekerdjaan "besarnja." Dari dalam lemarinja dikeluarkannja sebuah buku jg didjilid dengan bagus, tebal dan besar, setebal dua djilid Encyclopaedia Britannica dibikin djadi satu. 'Ini,' katanja, 'aku sedang menjusun sebuah kamus.'

47. 'Ó,' kataku, 'kamus apa?'

48. 'Kamus bahasa Indónésia-Arab-Inggeris, dan Inggeris-Arab-Indónésia,' djawabnja. 'Lihatlah,' katanja, dan dibukanja buku itu.

49. Aku lihat telah kira2 lima halaman jg dimulai dengan huruf A jg telah ditulisnja. Ditulisnja dengan tangan, halus2 dan bersih2, perkataan Arab dengan huruf Roma kemudian dengan huruf Arab. 'Ó, saudara ahli bahasa djuga?' kataku.

50. 'Tidak,' katanja dengan tersenjum. 'Tidak ada jg lebih mudah daripada membuat sebuah kamus,' katanja. 'Mengapa hingga sekarang belum ada kamus bahasa Indónésia jg baik, saja tidak mengerti.' Lalu dia menerangkan sistimnja menjusun kamusnja itu. Dia mempergunakan tiga buku kamus, katanja, kamus bahasa Inggeris-Belanda, Belanda-Indónésia/Indónésia-Belanda (van Rongkel) dan kamus Arab-Inggeris/Inggeris-Arab. 'Nah,' katanja, 'ambil kata bahasa Indónésia sebuah. Tjari apa bahasa Belandanja. Kemudian tjari bahasa Inggerisnja. Dan dari bahasa Inggeris tjari bahasa Arabnja. Sudah sebuah kata. Demikian seterusnja.'

51. 'Ó,' kataku.

52. Kemudian dia mentjeritakan tjita2nja jg lain lagi. Dia hendak mengarang sebuah buku tentang filsafat Barat dan Timur, katanja. 'Selama ini orang hanja membatja *atau filsafat Barat sadja, *atau filsafat Timur sadja,' katanja, 'tetapi aku hendak membikin sebuah buku jg mengandung kedua filsafat itu, dan *sintésenja, ja, aku hendak mengarang sebuah filsafat baru,' katanja.

53. 'Apabila hendak engkau karang?' tanjaku.

54. 'Nanti, djika telah aku batja semua buku2 ini,' katanja, *menundjuk *memuat sekeliling kamar itu dengan tangannja.

55. Demikianlah persahabatan kami. Dia memperlihatkan insinje sekolahnja, próspèktus sekolahnja jg disimpannja baik2; dan karena itulah aku tahu tjeritera sekolahnja itu.

Tata Bahasa

29.1 Prepositions following adjectives and verbs

29.11 Verbs

Some intransitive verbs may take goals (recipients of the action of the verb). Such verbs are followed by prepositions: akan, pada, sama, atas, or dengan: Saja minta sama dia. 'I asked him for it.' Saja sudah lupa pada dia. 'I have forgotten him.' Not all intransitive verbs which take goals may be followed by all these prepositions: some verbs select some of these, and some take others. The following list specifies the prepositions which commonly follow the intransitive verbs we have had so far.* Verbs that are followed by akan but not by pada or sama: sangsi 'doubt,' gemar 'fond of, like' sadar 'be conscious of,' paham 'understand,' waham 'be suspicious of':

Saja sudah paham akan apa jg telah dikatakannja. 'I understand what he said.'

Saja sadar akan kelemahan saja sendiri. 'I am conscious of my shortcomings.'

Verbs that are followed by akan and by pada or sama: takut 'be afraid of,' senang, suka 'like,' kasih, tjinta 'love,' ingat 'remember,' lupa 'forget,' tertarik 'be attracted to':

Saja tidak mau ingat lagi pada (or akan) orang itu. 'I do not want to remember that person any more.'

Lupa sadja sama (or akan or pada) dia. 'Just forget him.'

Verbs that are followed by sama and pada but not by akan: marah 'be angry at,' pertjaja 'believe,' bertanja 'ask a question,' berpesan 'leave a message for someone to do something':

---

*In some cases the preposition may be omitted in colloquial speech:

Saja senang orang itu (colloquial varient of senang pada orang itu). 'I like that person.'

Saja djumpa dia disana (colloquial varient of djumpa sama dia). 'I met him there.'

Saja marah pada isteri saja. 'I am angry at my wife.'

Saja tidak pertjaja sama dia. 'I do not believe him.'

The following verbs take dengan or sama: kenal 'be acquainted with,' kawin 'be married to,' berdjumpa, bertemu 'meet with.'

Saja berdjumpa dengan dia dipelabuhan. 'I met him in the harbor.'

Saja belum kenal sama dia. 'I don't know him yet.'

29.12 Adjectives

Some adjectives are followed by a proposition and a noun which refers to the thing with respect to which the adjective is true: e.g., kaja akan bahan2 mineral 'rich in mineral resources.' takdjub akan banjaknja orang 'surprised at how many people there were.'

Adjectives that are followed by akan (the English word which translates the preposition is underlined in these examples): kaja 'wealthy in,' bangga 'proud of,' haus 'thirsty for,' loba 'greedy for,' sadar 'aware of,' kagum 'be amazed at,' biasa 'be accustomed to,' masjhur, terkenal 'famous for,' maklum 'be aware of.'

Pak guru bangga akan murid2nja. 'The teacher is proud of his pupils.'

Pak guru kagum akan angka2 udjian ini. 'The teacher was amazed at the grades people got in this exam.'

Orang itu haus akan uang. 'That man is hungry (lit. thirsty) for money.'

Adjectives which are followed by atas (or akan): bangga 'be proud of,' maklum 'be aware of':

Pak guru bangga atas murid2nja. 'The teacher is proud of his pupils.'

Adjectives which are followed by dengan or sama: penuh 'full of,' rèpot 'busy with,' sesuai, setudju 'be in agreement with,' puas 'satisfied with,' bosan 'tired of,' kalah 'suffer in comparison with,' biasa 'be accustomed to':

Èmbèr itu penuh dengan air dingin. 'The pail is full of cold water.'

Do Exercise 29A ff.

29.2 Verbs which take two goals, one of which is followed by a preposition

Verbs which take two goals (e.g., like the underlined words in the following examples: I gave it to him; I substituted it for a previous one; I threw it at him; etc.) have a preposition preceding the second goal in Indonesian (as in English). The first goal is underlined once, the second goal twice and the preposition three times in the following examples:

Saja mengingatkan dia pada waktu perpelontjoan.

'I reminded him of the time we were pledges.'

Dia mengganti garpu jg kotor dengan jg bersih.

'He replaced the dirty fork with a clean one.'

As is shown in the above examples, the preposition which precedes the second goal is not always determinable from the English. If a verb is derived from an adjective or another verb, it is followed by the same preposition as follows its base when the base is used alone: e.g., biasa 'accustomed' is followed by dengan: biasa dengan itu 'accustomed to that'; membiasakan 'make someone accustomed' is followed by dengan as well:

> Keadaan saja jg sangat sulit membiasakan saja dengan suatu hidup jg sederhana. 'My difficult situation made me become accustomed to a simple way of life.'

Further examples of derivatives of words discussed in 29.1 above are:

> Gantungkan gambar itu pada dinding. 'Hang this picture on the wall.'
>
> Dia memperingatkan saja akan kewadjiban saja. 'He reminded me of my duties.'
>
> Dia harus menjesuaikan diri dengan kehidupan jg sederhana. 'He has to adjust himself to a simple life.'

Other verbs which we have had for which we have to remember the prepositions are the following (for most other verbs our English habits lead us to choose the correct preposition):

membagi y x or membagi x djadi y bagian	'divide x into y parts'
mengganti x dengan y	'substitute y for x, replace x by y' bermaksud, berniat untuk, akan	'have the intention of'
maafkan x atas y	'forgive x for y'
berterima kasih atas	'be thankful for'
terdiri atas, dari	'consist of'
berachir dengan	'end with'
terbagi atas	'be divided into'

29.12 Passives of verbs or words with ter- which are followed by a preposition and a second goal

Passive verbs or words with ter- [14.1] which correspond to active verbs which are followed by a preposition and a second goal are followed by the same preposition as the active verb.

Saja teringat pada waktu perpelontjoan. "I happen to remember the pledging time.'

Dia sudah dimaafkan atas keselahannja. 'He has been forgiven for his error.'

Do Exercises 29 B ff.

29.3 PeN- forming words meaning 'one who has the characteristic of ...'

The prefix peN- is added to adjectives to form words which mean 'one who is [adjective] characteristically':

diam	'silent'	pendiam	'one who tends to be silent'
malu	'shy'	pemalu	'one who is shy'
marah	'angry'	pemarah	'one who tends to be angry'

PeN- is also added to some verbs to form nouns meaning 'one who does [verb] as a part of his character trait':

bohong	'tell a lie'	pembohong	'liar'
tangis	'cry'	penangis	'cry-baby'
obrol	'chat'	pengobrol	'chatterbox, talkative person'
radjuk	'refuse something because one has felt slighted'	peradjuk	'person who refuses things he wants because he has felt slighted'
djilat	'lick, polish the apple'	pendjilat	'brown noser'

Orang pemalu tidak banjak teman. 'A person who is shy does not have many friends.'

Kamu itu kok peradjuk betul. Apa karena tadi saja katakan tidak ada tempat, lalu sekarang tidak mau ikut? 'You sure are easily slighted and refuse favors. Just because I said that there was no room before, does that mean you don't want to come along now?'

29.31 Tukang

The word tukang is placed before a verb or noun to form a phrase meaning 'one who does [verb] or works with [noun] as an occupation':

tukang gunting rambut	'barber	tukang tjopèt	'pickpocket'
tukang masak	'cook'	tukang emas	'goldsmith'
tukang pos	'postman'	tukang bètjak	'betjak boy'
tukang kaju	'carpenter'	tukang gigi	'dentist (without a diploma)'

Tukang is also used preceding adjectives or verbs to form phrases meaning 'one who is [adjective] or does [verb] as a part of his character trait' (= peN- [adjective] or [verb] described in 29.3 above):

tukang marah	'one who is always angry'	tukang djilat	'brown noser'
tukang menangis	'cry-baby'	tukang ngobrol	'chatterbox'
tukang bohong	'liar'

Dia itu tukang djilat. Maka itu dia tjepat naik pangkat. 'He is a brown-noser. That's why he has risen rapidly.'
